1912 Tapestries Depicting Life in New York Restored

Supervisory personnel of the telligence Activities.

By FRED FERRETTI cial to The New York Times RADNOR, Pa., May 6-In the two-story-high all-purpose room om the Armenian Sisters Academy bere children line up for their school huses, dance and put on plays and generally take for granted the richly woven, historical tapestries on the walls around them depicting events in early New York

The tapestries, dominated by deep blues and pale ochres, were designed by the late American muralist Albert Herter under an $850,000 commission from the Harriman family and completed in the artist's East 33d Street studio in Manhattan by a team of 60 imported Freoch weavers in 1912.

For years they hung in the McAlpin Hotel in New York

City until, sometime in the 1930's they were sold piece by piece to dealers and collectors throughout the world. The task of reconstituting them as a set was begun in 1951 by John Korenian, a California rug dealer, after he found the image of George Washington on one that he was washing.

Mr. Korenian, who spent lecting the 21 sak and wool wall hangings, gave them to the academy in this Main Line Philadelphia suburb because he was "inspired by the work of the sisters" in the school he visited for the first time only a few months He hopes, he said, that the school will be able to reduce its annual $50,000 operating deficit by reoting

Longer Vacations Are Planned

Fourteen-year old Saul

Hansell of Detroit is finally getting his bar mitzvah trip to Israel and Europe this month—a year late.

In Attleboro, Mass., Harold Blackburn, a store-owner who took last year what he thought would be a last vacation before the economic collapse, now feels "an urge to spend more" on a bigger trip this summer.

And in New York, Nancy Baxter, a 33-year-old publicist whose vacation last year consisted of a visit to her parents in Kansas City, this year says, "I feel rich," and is looking forward to spending $1,000 this summer on a three-week trip to Paris and London.

Across the nation, Americans are dusting off road maps and resort brochures and preparing to take to the highways, skies and seas in travel summer after last year's recessionary slump.

Their wanderlust rekindled by the resurgent economy, cutrate tour packages and their own accumulated restlessness after a year or more of canceled trips and closerto-home vacations, they are signing up for exotic and well-known holiday destinations with a fervor unseen since the 1973 fuel crisis gave travel a bad name and seot the industry into a tailspin.

While the national recovery is spurring a revival of traditional travel patterns, there are some new aspects as well to this year's travel picture, interviews with travel agents indicate.

The new crop of travelers is taking more last-minute trips, more frequent, shorter holidays, longer summer vaca-

Portuguese Police Battle 300 Refugees To End Occupation

OPORTO, Portugal May 8 (AP) — Riot policemen used clubs, tear gas and warning shots early today against some 300 refugees from Portugual's former colonies in Africa wbo refused to end a five-day occupation of the Government's Refugee Support Institute. Seven refugees were hospitalized with minor injuries before the building was cleared.

The refugees, angered by the Government's decision earlier this week to phase out their notel and meal subsidies, said that they would remain until after a meeting later today with the Secretary of Refugee Af-fairs, Amandio Azevedo.

The incident came a day after riot policemen in Lisbon fired into the air to disperse refugees who had occupied the lobbies of two luxury hotels.

The demonstrators in Portugal's two largest cities, who be-loog to a group called the Inter-Organization of Refugees called a national meeting in Lisbon tomorrow.
"We have two parallel plans," said the group's leader. "The first is basically peaceful, to inform people here and abroad of our plight. And the second is, you might say, more violent

President Ford, mingling affection and hope, looked back fondly on Harry S. Truman and 1948 in Independence, Mo., where he joined the family and friends of President Truman to watch Margaret Truman Daniel unveil a nine-foot bronze statue of her father. Mr. Ford stooped in Independence after campaigning in Nebraska, where he will try Tuesday, against increasing odds, to stop a series of four successive losses to Rooald Reagan in the Republican primaries. In a speech at the unveiling ceremony, Mr. Ford, who has often spoken appreciatively of Mr. Truman, sought to associate himself with the memory of the late Democratic President who astounded the experts by winning in 1948. [1:3-4.]

Uncommitted delegates from a dozen states, including New York, could determine whether President Ford or Ronald Reagan wins the Republican Presidential nomination. When the primaries end a month from now with voting in California. New Jersey and Ohio on June 8 the outcome may still be douotful. If oce of the contenders could sweep all three of the June 8 primaries, Reagan and Ford strategists agree that he would have to consider the probable nominee, Politicians in the three states and campaigners' principal aides believe that as things now stand, Mr. Ford is likely to win in New Jersey and Ohio, while Mr. Reagan is favored in California. But a victory in Michigan on May 18 could upset the cal-

While mortar shells exploded in the street and small-arms fire raked the approaches to the meeting place in Beirut, the Lebanese Parliament elected a new President yesterday. He is Elias Sarkis, a conservative banker and civil servant and, in conformance with Lebanese political tradition, a Christian.
Sixty-six of the 98 members of Parliament

The 29 others, who favored Raymond Edde, the only rival candidate, boycotted the session in protest against what they said was open military and political interference in favor of Mr. 5arkis. The opposition's boycott made it ouestionable that the election of a new President would calm grievances and hasten the end of the civil war as was intended. [Page 1, Column 8.] Bulldozers and blasting teams from all over Italy helped in an urgent search for any survivors still trapped in the debris of the earthquake that struck the northeastern part of the country Thursday night. Officials said that more than 600 bodies had been recovered. The final death toll is unlikely to be known for many months, but some relief workers believed that as many as 1,000 may have been killed. ## SCHMIDT ASSAILED BY FRENCH REDS

German is Said to Act Like 'Disdainful Sovereign'

PARIS, May 8—The French Communist Party, iotensifying its flamboyant new campaign of nationalism, took after Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany today, saying he behaved like a "disdainful sovereign" toward France, and attacked President Valery Giscard d'Estaing for transforming France into a "Germano-American protectorate."

The denunciations, in a frontpage editorial in the party paper L'Humanité, were the latest in a crescendo of comments rebuffing Secretary of State Henry Rissinger's campaign against West European Communists but also attacking foreign leaders who either criticize France or praise its Government.

Mr. Schmidt, the editorial said, was "insolently trying to be the gendarme of Europe." But the main fire was directed against Preseident Giscard d'Estaing and Prime Minister Jacques Chirac for what was termed their lack of "national reflex" in voicing only late and "diplomatic" complaiots against the German and American lead-

Remarks Called Thoughtless'
Mr. Schmidt said last month that Social Democratic governmeots. like that of Germany, had managed to solve roblems and thus had only unimportant Communist parties to confront, but ultraconservative regimes like that in Portugal before the revolution, Spain, Italy and "to some extent France" had to face strong Communist opposit-

Prime Minister Chirac called Mr. Schmidt's remarks "thoughtless" and President Giscard d'Estaing let it be known that he firmly disapproved of political leaders making public critiques of other countries' affairs. Taking his cue from Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, who complained about Mr. Kissinger's own campaign when the two met here yesterday, the American Secretary said afterward that "we agreed that do domestic decisions of other countries are for those countries to take."

Instead of repeating his previous statements, Mr. Kissinger told reporters rere who asked what he thought of Communists coming to power in France or Italy that he would not presume to comment on other countries' politics.

United States relations with France, the Secretary said, have "never been better."

Humanite seid that Mr. Kissinger offended France's na-singer offended France's national dignity. But it made an unusual bow to Americans, whom they usually denounce in geoeral, alongside the sharp words for the Secretary.

Ideas Are Praised

It paid tribute to the American Revolution's contribution to the "ideas of liberty and progress." which it said were those of the 1789 French revolution. But the newspaper pointedly avoided using the cherished word "revolution" in connection with the Uoited States, and said instead that the ideals owed much "to the great struggle for the creation of the United States."

The party also made a rare note of America's "sacrifice against fascism" in World War II and said that "in the face of the domioatiog will of American imperialism," French Communists were "struggling for real links of friendship and cooperation with the United States."

This appeared to be a prelude for a harsh attack on Poland's Prime Minister, Piotr Jaroszewicz, who was concluding a state visit to France when Mr. Kissinger hurried through Paris

The Communist paper said it was "improper" for Mr. Jarosziewicz to have honored the contribution of French leader toward "thawing the ice of ioternational tensions." The compliment could be given the tate Fresident Charles de Gaulle, Humanité said, but it was "abusive" to give Mr. Giscard d'Estaing part of the credit.

The Polisb Prime Minister was also denounced for endorsing West European economic integration, a position the newspaper called "stupefying."

Warsaw Meeting Criticised

The French Communists have also attacked the Poles for inviting young supporters of Mr. Giscard d'Estaing to a Warsaw conference, and have refused to send French Communist youths. Such contacts between Communists and Gisctrd supporters, even in Communist Poland, are "inadmissible to conceive," the party said.

The criticism of Poland's leader was along the lioes of receot French Communist complaints about Soviet policies, although much sharper. The French party was particularly incensed when the Soviet Communist party leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev, spoke favorably of good French-Soviet relations at Moscow's 25th party congress, which the French Communist leader, Georges Marchais, refused to attend.

The French Communists insist that "proletarian internationalism, which the Russians interpret as solidarity with Moscow, should rather mean Soviet sopport for foreign Communist parties, and specifically for the French Communists exainst the Paris government.

An Israeli Fete for the Elite

By TERENCE SMITH

RAMAT GAN, Israel, May 8-Virtually the entire Israeli establishment, from the Prime Minister down to re-tired Palmach commanders from the 1948 war of independence, crowded into a scrubby garden behiod an apartment house in this Tel Aviv suburb last night for the most genuinely Israeli social event of the year.

Gathered around a campfire, sitting crosslegged with arms locked, they gossiped, laughed, drank brandy and sang old Zionist songs dating to the prestate period until early 5 A.M.

It was the annual "kum-sitz," or campfire gathering, given every year by Meir Amit, the former head of the Mossad, the Israeli intelligence industrial conglomerate in the country, and a ranking member of the establishment.

In its shirt-sleeves informality, tradition and sense of shared intimacy among the group of people who helped found this country and today wield its levers of power, Meir Amit's kumsitz is unique. It looks for all the world like a Kiwanis clambake, but it is io fact an un-paralleled gathering of the power elite of Israel.

There is no surer sign of having "made it" in Israeli terms, than ao invitation to bring your own bottle to Meir Amit's backyard on the first Friday after Independence Day.

"There's nothing quite like it in Israel or anywhere else," observed one general who was only a captaio in 1948 when the Palmach was the elite strike force of the Ha-ganah, the Israeli under-ground army. "But in what other country can the whole leaderhip fit comfortably into such a small space?"

Not everyone was there, of

Visiting Law Chief Says India Reform Cannot Be Blocked

India's Law Minister, H. R. Gokhale, said here last week that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Government "will oo tolerate any interference with social and economic reforms under the country's 11-month-old emergency.

Mr. Gokhale said that the Government had "no intention" of curbing its courts' powers of judicial review, but he added: "We can't go merely on platitudes or theories of jurists, nowsoever well known, how-soever respected and however reknowned."

"Even jurists have to function against the background of the ituation," he said, "We in Inlia are racing against time."

The 60-year-old Law Minister poke Fridsy night at a dinner if about 30 members of the national executive committee of onal executive committee of be 20,000-member Association f Indians in America, which ponsors educational, profes-ional, social and cultural prorams for immigrants.

Since the emergency was delared last June, it has led to uspension of civil liberties, trict press censorship and the iling of political opponents of e Government without court earings.

Mr. Gokhale argued that It ad produced "many gains," in-ludiog land reform, curbs oo biolent and criminal elements" od black marketeers, advances productivity, a sharp drop inflation and an improved lance of payments.

But be said that more sanges, possibly including me constitutional amendents, must be made as soon possible.

Therefore we cannot tolere and we will not tolerate any erference io matters that retire quick implementation, articularly in the field of so-sl and economic reforms," he ter Gold Beir did not attend, nor former Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, who is currently out of the country. Former Foreign Minister Abba Eban was not there either. but it is not, as someone pointed out sarcastically, his sort of party. "This is too Is-raeli for Eban," a man said. "If he came, be'd probably year a tie."

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was there, tieless in a car-digan sweater, singing, laugh-ing, bantering with former arm colleagues and arguing with Israeli journalists who have been giving him an es-pecially rough time in the

"He seems to be enjoying himself," a friend observed as he watched the politically beleaguered Prime Minister move through the crowd. "With his problems, I can't imagioe why. But I suppose you reach a point where it makes as much sense to laugh as to cry."

Just a few feet away, but carefully keeping his dis-tance, was Mr. Rabio's po-litical archrival, Defense Minister Shimon Peres, with whom he has been quarrel-ing lately on a number of sensitive issues.

'They are like two mag-netic fields," observed one woman as she tracked the movements of the two lead-"Whenever they get within 15 feet of each other, they automatically swerve off in another direction."

Not all the talk was political. Some was pure gossip. "Look at Yoram's new wife," one man observed appreci-ately as an upper-aged bureaucrat passed by with a woman at least 25 years his junior. "Sbe's the '76 model, considerably trimmer than the '48 model he turned in."

There seemed to be at least three distinct generations of Israelis at the party. The founders, the sons and the grandsons," was the way one woman described them.

Sitting oext to the camp-fire, which cast dancing shadows on the feathery pine tree overhead, Mr. Amit ex-plained how his annual party had begun.

"The first ooe was in 1958, when I was lying at home paralyzed from a parachute accident," he said. "A few friends came over and stayed up all night singing the old songs. More and more of them just kept coming back

TRUDEAU ACCUSED ON SECURITY ISSUE

Denies Telling Police to Halt Checks on Separatists

By ROBERT TRUMBULL

Special to The New York Times OTTAWA, May 8-Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau was accused in Parliament this week of having ordered the Royal Canadian Mountain Police to restrict security checks on members of Parti Québécois. which advocates independence for Quebec.

Mr. Truneau, in denying the accusation in Parliament yesterday, took strong exception to the disclosure of a confidential letter from a ton police official in which Mr. Trudeau was aaid to have ordered the agency to restrict inquiries into the activities of Parti Québécois.

Mr. Trudeau, describing the letter as a misinterpretation by the police official of a Cabinet discussion, denounced the publication of part of the letter in The Toronto Sun on Wednesday as "nbviously designed to destroy my reputation and credi-

The police raided the office of the newspaper yesterday and seized photocopies of the letter from the desk of Peter Worthington, the executive editor. Mr. Worthington said that the copy of the letter, written by the bead of the mounted police security service, Gen. Michael Dare, to a top Government se-curity official, had been sent to the newspaper anonymously.

Protectinn for Parties

Solicitor General Warren Allmand the Cabinet officer in charge of security matters, told Parliament that the Cabinet action referred to in the letter legitimate political parties against police surveillance but did not restrict security checks on individuals suspected of wrongdoing, including subver-

Madrid Releases 3 Leftist Leaders Arrested at Protest

MADRID, May 8 (Reuters)— The Government of King Juan Carlos took another step to-ward liberalization today when t ordered the release of three members of the opposition beld since April 3 after an anti-sovernment demonstration.

The three men, who include tamon Tamanes, prominent lef-fist economist, were jailed for refusing to pay fines levied by the Government for allegedly being leaders of the demanstra-tion. They left Madrid's Carabanchel Prison this afternoon. The measure followed the announcement by the Govern-mentlast night of details of its program to change the authori-parian system left by Generalis-simo Francisco Franco. The proposed laws, which include the establishment of a two-house legislature largely elected by universal suffrage and the creation of free trade unions, now must go to the right-wing Parliament for its approval.

The possibility that the laws may run into difficulties getting through Parliament was heightened today when a regional group of members asked that deputies as well as the Govern-ment be allowed to push laws through the body on an urgent

Torcuato Fernandez Miranda president of Parliament, recenty to a Government request to speed up debate on measures for change, which led to a storm of protest by right-wing deputies when he tried to explain the details of the procedure to deputies on Thursday night.

If the proposals get through Parliament, they will be presented to the people in a referendum next October.

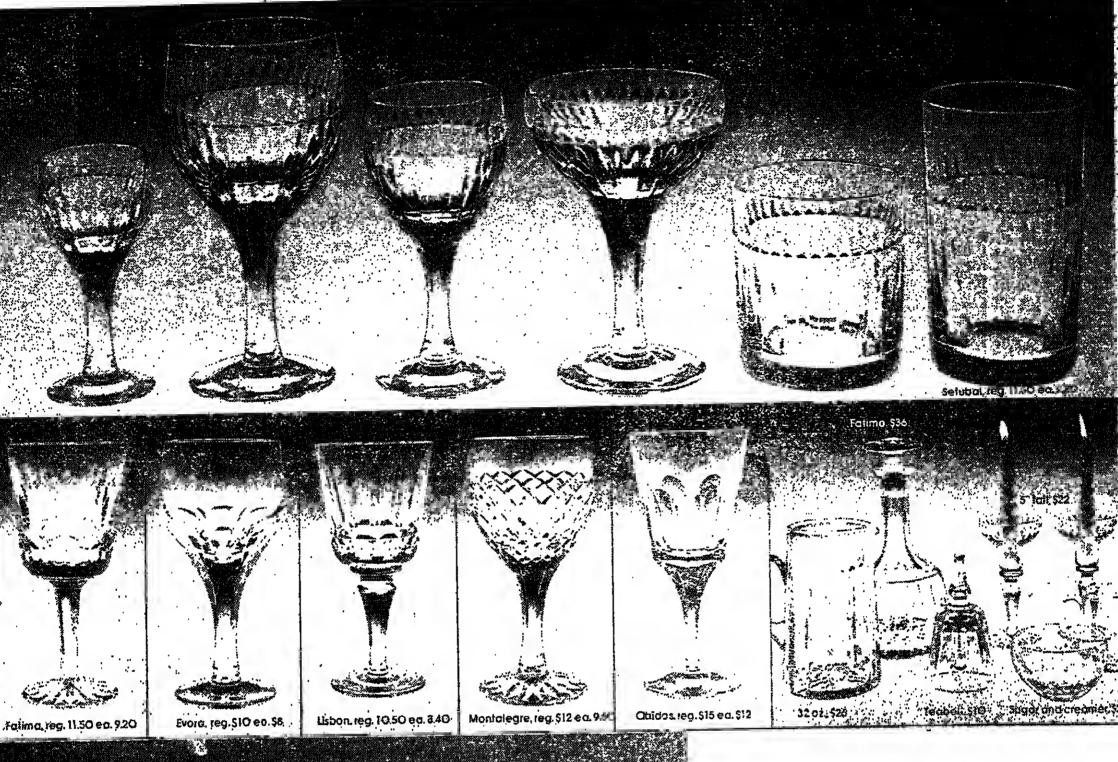

A spokesman for the opposi-tion Christian Democrats said today they held to their stand that a referendum on Spain's future type of government should be held before the laws are passed and not afterward.

The task force members, appointed by Dr. Lawrence C. Kolb, Commis-sioner of Mental Hygiene, were described in the announcement as "representa-tives of state and local governmeotal units, program advocates, consumers, pro-viders, professionals and lay-men,"

Robbers Routed In Jersey Home

John Dooer, 54 years old, and his wife. Eleanor, 53, routed two robbers armed with rifles from a second-floor bedroom of their Kearny, N. J., home after their 27-year-old son phoned the police from another room. As Mr. Doner seized a room. As Mr. Doner seized a rifle from one of the robbers, Mrs. Doner grabbed the sec-ond robber's weapon and beat him over the head with it. The two discoocerted intruders then jumped from a window only to land in the arms of the police who had surrounded the house. A third robber was arrested in the bedroom.

Phone Calls About Sex Allegedly Monitored

SAN FRANCISCO, May 8 - Conversations about sex have been monitored and broadcast over loud-speakers at offices of Mill Valley's telephone company, according to a former oper-ator there.

Christins Huggins said Thursday that the eaves-dropping had occurred fre-quently at the Pacific Telephone Company office in the nearby Marin County commu-nity when she worked there in 1974.

The 23-year-old woman made the allegations at a Public Utilities Commission hearing on a request by the telephone company for a $119 million rate increase.

She said that employees who worked on wiring and computers would "go through the circuity until they found some convergence that they

He went on to explain that the United States Postal Service for the first time this year had insisted on a charge for displeying the posters. The charge, he said, would have been $2.50 a poster per post office per week. The service now under private management.

This, he estimated, would have come to some $20,000 for the Maritime Administration. He added, "There's no way we can afford it."

This year's poster, showing a container ship on a red and white ocean, under the legend "Ship American—It Costs No More," he said, will be displayed through private channels, with the help of maritime organizations, banks, and other businesses.

The United States District Court for the Southern Dis-trict of New York last week acquired e new member whose presence on the court might be a judicial asset in new of the fact that the district handles more maritime law cases than any other in the country.

"I'll take any case that comes along," he said.

As a result of Judge Haight's joining the court, the tribunal for the first time in 35 years will have an admiralty less specialist among its judges.

The previous judge to be an admiralty expert was the late John M. Woolsey, who was appointed in 1929 and retired in 1943.

The port will lose two regular members of its cruise fleet later this year, the 24,000-ton Norwegian America liner Sagafjord, and the 23,000-ton Veendam of Holland America Cruises.

Norwegian America said last week the Sagafjord would go into layup after Oct. 15, when she returns here from a fall Mediterranean

Holland America said the Veendam would be based at Miami next year under an agreement by which Holland America acquired the business of Miami-based Monarch Cruise Lines.

Monarch already operates a sistership, the 23,000-ton Monarch Sun, the former Volendam. The Veendam will be renamed the Monarch Star and will offer 10- and 11-day cruises from Florida

"We're not really sure," stid Set Momilian, a member of the academy's board of directors who was instrumental in persuading the 25-year-old Mr. Korenian to donate his collection to the school, "What we are sure of is that they belong in New York."

New York is where they were conceived, in the eye of Albert Herter. New York is where they bung. New York is what is portrayed on them, from the 1613 escape from the "Burning Ship Tiger" in New York Bay to the Zouaves fighting a fire in New York in 1861.

In between, the 64-year-old tapestries make up a vir-tual Bicenteunial exhibition of early New York City his-tory, from Peter Minuit's landing in the colony in 1625, landing in the colony in 1625, the surrender of New Amsterdam to the English in 1664, the execution of Nathan Hale in 1776, the inauguration of George-Washington in 1789 and the celebration of the completion of the formulation of the formula completion of the Erie Canal inquiring about them among New York tapestry and rug dealers and in libraries. Mr. Koreoian did likewise, Jong distance from his home in San Diego.

What they turned up was: They were created from original designs painted by the Americao mural painter Albert Herter, Mr. Herter, the father of Christian Herter, Secretary of State under President Dwight D. Eisenhower, was a devotee of French tapestry work and had done murala and paintings in Versailles and several commissions for the French Government in the early part of this ceotury.

Mr. Herter was commis-sioned to do them by the Harriman family, and completed them—through the efforts of 60 Aubusson-trained weavers imported from France—in 1912, Although Mr. Korenian said the commissioo was for $850,000, to reproduce them today, he said, would cost $10 million. An artist "wanted $350,000 just to reproduce io paint on paper," he added.

The artist, who died in 1950, studied at the Art Students League and with Carroll Beckwith in New York and later in Paris under J. P. Laurens. He waa known was exhibited and was represented in European and American collections, Seven other tapestries of his, eo-titled "Gifts of the Old World," were commissioned in 1913 and hung in the St. Francis Hotel in San Fran-

Neither Mr. Momjian nor Mr. Korenian know how the 21 tapestries weot from the Harriman family to the Mc-Alpin Hotel, or exactly bow or when they were sold piecemeal.

In 1951, Mr. Koreoian, oo a rug-buying trip, was repeatedly entreated by an Italian dealer to look at a tapestry that he said had "American writing" at its base, "But I did go to look. I didn't know tapestries, I knew rugs. It looked fine to me. So I bought it." He and his wife washed the tapestry and "I darned near fell over."

"There was George Washington," he said.

It was washed 10 times and its colors came through. Mr. Korenian said he worked three years reweaving with silk and wool—using the ani-line dyes that were popular in Mr. Herter's time-and virtually restored it to its 1912 brilliance.

Over the next 20 years Mr. Korenian haunted libraries and dealers. He found three of the Herters in England, two in Scotland, two in Bel-gium, several in France and Germany and seven in New York in "a 77th Street junk-shop" in 1959. He completed the set with a purchase in Lebanon in 1971. Wasbed, rewoven and restored, the set was appraised at $650,000 and insured for $500,000, and it sat in Mr. Korenian's storage house—as Pasadena State College kept asking for them—until he visited the Armenian Sisters Academy.

Called Unique

Mr. Korenian, who said that tapestry weaving is a European art, a Freoch art in particular, maintains that the tapestries are artistic

"They are unique," he said. "Each is one of a kind. They are the only set of American historical tapestries in existence."

To the academy, he said last week, "I am giviog them to you.

And, Mr. Momjian said, eager to raise money for the school: "There's somebody in New York, there has to be, who wants them for New York, My Lord, they're a Bicentennial event all by themselves."

Meanwhile, five of them hang on the wall of the makeshift gymnasium in the Armenian Sisters Academy, over the piano, over the gymnastic wooden blocks and over the tape on the floor that tells the children where to stand for their school

In the history of Pulitzer Awards, one newspaper or members of its staff have earned more than any other.

THE NEW YORK TIMES

Sydney H. Schanberg,

for distinguished reporting on international affairs.

After the American evacuation of Cambodia, Sydney Schanberg decided to stay behind to record what happened in the last days at Phnom Penh.

His stories, the first reports on the fall of Cambodia, were filed during the siege, and later after a grueling evacuation by truck to Thailand. They detailed not only the military moves, but the story of the people...children, refugees, soldiers...who were most affected by the peasant revolution that systematically emptied the cities of Cambodia.

His stories of Cambodia's last days in its traditional patterns were added to months of careful and perceptive reporting on the sufferings of the Cambodian people and the corruption and collapse of their leaders. His accounts gave rare insight into the fighting, the politics, the American effort.

Greatest of all was his insistence on keeping his stories on a human level. As a result, readers of The Times understood the situation in Southeast Asia in terms of real people. The kind of understanding that goes beyond official reports and statements to let you know what's really happening.

Walter W. "Red" Smith

for distinguished commenta

Years ago, a critic said, "The first thing about Red Smith is that he writes English the second is that 'sports is sports." It's as true now as it was then. The ability to will English respectfully and to recognize sports as only a game has earned a huge follow for Red Smith over the years, and now it has earned him journalism's highest honor.

Readers of Red's Sports of The Times column know of his humor and grace his wealth of knowledge on the whole sports world from baseball to basketball to box to the sport of kings. They also know him as a man with thoughtful opinions. His column last year on the finances and contracts of athletes were among the best of his long care.

Most of all, Red Smith thinks that sports should be fun. And you don't have read between the lines to see it in his columns. The fun is right there where you can se and enjoy it four times a weekin his Sports of The Times.

The New York Times or members of its staff have won 42 Pulitzer Awards. More than any other newspaper.

Flashy Work on Synthesizer Sparks Guitarist's Group

Carlos Santana can probably be credited with the invention —or at least the popularization —of Latin rock. His San Francisco-based band, Santana, topped the charts just a few years ago, turning ont tightly structured songs with repetitive catch-versea and churning, surging percussion overlays.

But the success wasn't mainained. Part of the problem was that Mr. Santana got religion, in the form of Sri Chinmoy's mysticism. Another part was that his own bent toward jazz-rock and more complex musical statements made him drift away from the simple formulas that bad won him his fame. And not only were his formulas copied by other Latin-rock ensembles, but the whole salsa movement of modernized, electrified Latin music responded to part of his old audience's Periodically, though, Mr. Santana has ventured out ooto the road with a resbuffled band. And if the results haven't: always made him millions, he! has managed to make some attractive music. This listener remembers an Academy of Music date a coupla of years back that was a genuinely attractive mix of lyrical subtlety and rousing latin rhythms.

Mr. Santana's appearance Friday night at the Beacon Theater, the first of two shows that night, wasn't so successful. The stage setting, with palm fronds and strongly contrasteo lighting, looked most attractive.
And the current sextet—five instrumentalists, counting the leader, and one singer-percussionist-seemed adept encueb. with Tom Cooks's synthesizer and organ work especially flashy. But although Mr. Santana remains a sensitive. virtuosic guitarist, the music was curiously lacking in personality and excitement. Some of that can be blamed on a poor sound system, which reduced everything to unvar-liegated murk. But mostly it has to do with Mr. Santan's music itself. Although he trotted out a number of the old warhorses, he refused to play; them with all the repetitively compelling simplicity of yore. Instead be gave us faceless, Latin-flavored jazz rock, the piquancy of the rhythms dulled by the sound. Too proud to repeat his piooeering past, Mr. Santana has failed to keep head of the present, and thus finds himself overwhelmed by competition that ironically owes much to him.

Stage: 'The Love of Don Perlimplin'

Lorca's Play Is Done by Spanish Repertory

By RICHARD EDER

"The Love of Don Perlimplin and Belisa in Her Garden" isn't usually counted among García Lorca's major plays; mainly because it is short. But in its brevity it manages the same quicksilver turns on desire and frustration as "Yerma" and "The House of Bernarda Alba." It is more abstract, more of a fable than these, It is more playful and more lyrical, but when the tragedy comes, it comes quite as

It is a lovely play, but like all of Lorca's best work, hard to perform. The poetry doesn't interfere with the theater: it fuses with it, and this makes García Lorca one of the few creators of suc-cessful poetic drama in this century. The problem is to perform it so that the poetic images don't overpower the play, crushing it under a weight of black capes, flow-ers and rushing blood.

Recital: Judith Norell on Harpsichord

Performance Blends Grandeur, Simplicity

By ALLEN HUGHES

When Judith Norell was at her best during her harpsichord recital at Carnegie Hall on Friday night, she was good enough to rank with some of the finest of ber colleagues in an increasingly competitive field. Swinging along to the rhythmic measures of Jacques Duphly's "Médée" and "La Victoire" or projecting the pensive lyricism of the same composer's "La Pothouin," she was a mature artist in full command of the technical and stylistic elements that fase in a compelling interpretation. Steadiness and pliability, grandeur and simplicity were ingredients blended in her superior music making.

And, indeed, much of her playing of a work by Picchi, seven sonatas by Domenico Scarlatti and Froberger's Suite in G minor was equally impressive Even William Byrd's "The Battell," for which lan Strafogel read the titles of the sections, made sense as an amusing trifle placed near the end of the

Then, after having played everything up to that point from memory, Miss Norell came on stage with a score to end the recital with Bach's Partita No. 5 in G. There is nothing wrong with using music if one's memory is insecure; and if Miss Norell had played the work as coovincingly as she did everything else, one would not bave thought further about it.

But the best that can be said about the Bach performance is that it was respectable in a routine way. It did not sound as though Miss Norell had studied it nearly so thoroughly as she had, say, the music by Duphly or the Scariatti sonatas.

It was a shame that an otherwise impressive recital had to end in such an ordinary fashion, and it seemed out of character for Miss Norell to allow it to happen: But a Partita by Bach Is Less Convincing

U.N. Chapel Weddings: Ecumenical Spirit

By SHAWN G. KENNEDY The bride was in white, a floor-sweeping govn and double-tiered veil. On the arm of her father, she stepped down the chapel aisle past guest-filled pews draped with white bows to-

From all outward appear-

Besides the interfaith mar-

Besides the interfaith marriages, Dr. Hawthome said, a lot of second marriages, marriages between people of different nationalities—particularly those attached to the United Nations — are per-formed in the chapel, as well as couples who bave an affinity with the spirit of the United Nations and just want to be married there. Not Part of U.N.

Though the Church Center, built in 1985 by the United Methodist Church, serves as headquarters for various religions that have "official observer" status at the United Nations, the affiliation between it and the United Nations is more spiritual than tions is more spiritual than official. And even though it is called the U.N. Chapel, it is not part of the United Na-

Of the 400 marriages per-formed there annually, 60 percent are between men and women of different faiths. Marriages between Roman Catholics and Jews are the most common. Dr. Haw-thorne said, followed by marriages betweeo Jews and Protestants, Catholics and Protestants and finally marriages between Christians or Jews and members of various Eastern religions. Understandably, Dr. Hsw-thorne considers the unions betweeo Jews and members of Islamic faiths to be "among the most sensitive performed here." While marriages of any sort were not part of the chapel's original function, interfaith marriages have become somewhat of a specialty. In-terfaith couples, desperately searching for a place in the city to be married, kept com-ing to the chaplain for help and eventually the "special" services were added to his regular duties.

Besides the ceremony itself, which can cost $125 to $175, depending on when it is per-formed, Dr. Hawthorne offers premarriage counseling.

"There have been a lot of tears shed at this table." Dr. Hathorne said the other day. "Very often, by the time a couple comes to us to he married, they bave run into snags elsewhere. There are family transitions. family tensions or problems with their religions. We try to iron out these difficulties No 'Convenience Service'

"We don't run a conve-nience service here," be con-tinued, defending the threemonth waiting period and counseling sessions. "There are no package deals or quickie marriages. In fact we do turn down conples who seem too anxious."

Dr. Hswthorne, head of the Southern Baptist office in the Center, as chaplain performs many of the nundenomina-tional, "ecumenical" marriage ceremooles. But the chapel has s pool of clergy-Catholic priests, rabbis, can-tors. Hindu pundits, Islamic sheiks—who will perform interfaith services, though many religions do not allow

These services are religious and the liturgy of both religions is combined; often clergymen from two religions join to take part in the same

In a receot Saturday afternoon ceremony, for example, between a Catholic and a Jew, a priest and cantor officiated in s service that in-cluded the blessing of the rings, a Roman Catholic tra-dition, and eoded with the traditional wine ceremony of the Jewish faith. Scripture readings by the priest, the Rev. John Porter, were intertwined with an invocation by the cantor in Hebrew.

Such marriage ceremonies are no longer forbidden by the Catholic Church, but the joint ceremony would not be recognized by the Jewish faith. The cantor had agreed to co-officiate because he 'believes' in such marriages.

This type of service is not allowed in even reform synagogues," said the caotor, who did not want to be identified. But I personally do not feel that they are wrong. I believe they are a trend that can't be reversed or ignored."

An interfaith Jewish-Roman Catholic weaat the United Nations Church Center chapel, co-offic by a priest and a cantor, ends with the ceremony, a tradition of the Jewish wedding ser

Among the revivals currently thriving on Broadway are "The Royal Family" at top and, left to right, "The Threepenny Opera," "My Fair Lady," "The Heiress" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Early in November 1959, television viewers were jolted by the revelation that the highly popular quiz show "Twenty-One" was not on the level. The breathless panses, the agonized stumblings, even the beads of perspiration on the brow of "contestant" Charles Van Doren and others were all exposed as part of a rehearsed act. Many viewers myself included reacted in much the same way as the disflu-tioned baseball fan who said during the 1919 Black Soz scandals: "Say it isn't so, protested that they had no idea such shenanigans had been going on, the viewing public became indignant, Perjury charges were leveled. Congressional hearings were conducted in Washington. A network president was dis-charged. In addition to Twenty-One," other popular but regged game shows such as "The $64,000 Question" and "Dotto," were exed. To make certain that viewers would never again be similar-ly hoodwinked, Congress passed appropriate legislaYet, today, some 17 years later, a new kind of hoodwinking has appeared on the television game-show scene. It's been updated in style, the germent more subtly woven, the tailoring better designed to cover embarrassing bulges.

As a veteran game-show producer, whose television career began in 1950 as producer of "What's My Line?" I have special concerns about this renascent gimmickry. First, another scandal could duced in a straightforward fashion (I include my own shows in this category) must compete with fictionalized characes. Finally, tinkering with program reality is I hlush at the old-fashioned word-immoral.

Before I Illustrate the new breed of film-flam, it is assential to pose and answer a critical question. Why was there such superheated outrage in 1959 over the fixing of a few game shows? After give the coup de grace to all all, it wasn't Teapot Dome game shows. Second, it is m- or Watergate. Not even Pro-fair that game shows pro- fumo or Chappaquidick. This was "merely" some electromic show-biz hanky-panky. My belief is that the public reacted so strongly because two basic forms of entertainment had been deliberately shuffled: namely, "make-believe" and "actuality." The difference between the two is not a trifling matter. Each category must be judged by its own related criteria. Thus, at the movies, audience enjoyment is not dependent on "believing" that Charles Bronson is using real bullets to destroy his fellow tors Guild. On the other hand, at the circus when a high-wire act is being performed with no net, audience reaction is conditioned by a very different set of beliefs. One of them is that the performer is actually taking the risks he appears to be taking. If, in fact, he knows a net is there waiting beneath but the audience is not so informed, fraud is being perpetrated. This distinction between "make-believe"

"actuality" is central. Television, unlike movies and theater, offers both make-believe and actual news and events, Police dramas, sit-coms, comedy-variety shows, soap operats are examples of TV make believe. But television's cameras also focus on football games, boxing matches, press conferen-

WASHINGTON that obtains between art and the national ethos is, like most questions having to do with the relation of art to life, sometimes simple and straightforward and sometimes oblique and contradictory. No fixed approach to the question is ever likely to suffice for long. Both the relationship itself and our perception of it change according to shifts in the political and the esthetic climatewhich is one reason why the history of art is in constant need of revision.

Whether openly acknowledged or not, this question of the relation of art to the ougoing life of culture and society is the central issue under review in virtually all the exhibitions of American art inspired by the Bicentennial It is one of the many virtues of the big Bicentennial show called "America as Art," which has just opened at the National Collection of Fine Arts in Washington, that it confronts this issue directly and intelligently, focusing BRICKTOP-Nicknamed for the color of her hair, Bricktop left her West Virginia home in the 1920's with her whispery style of singing to entertain in cabarets in Paris and Rome for three decades. Today an octogenarian, she has just opened a little club on East 74th Street, called Atop Soerabaja, in which she will revive the days "when cebarets were places for good times and friendship, and nobody shoved you around or left you with an earache." Joining her will be performers who worked with Brick-top in Rome during the 1950's.

FASHION PHOTOGRAPHS — Horst P. Horst abandoned his architectural studies with Le Corbusier in 1930 to go on to become one of Vogue magazine's best-known fashion photographers. On Saturday, Sonnabend Gallery will open a show of his fashlon prints, ranging from the 1930's to the early 1960's. The works illuminate, through exaggeration of pose and decor, the relationship between conture and cuiture in general. As Horst himself wrote, "Again and again, as I photographed that opulent, nostalgic collection in 1939, I heard it said that this was fashion that could only be created by a Paris on the verge of war." # PERFORM Musicals That -MELGUSSON Don't Sing—An Don't Sing—And A Performance That Does nce upon a time there was a form called musical comedy, but some sort of wicked witch came along and took the comedy out of it, leaving sobersided narratives and thoughtfully motivated tunes-often good tunes-to do all of the , evening's work. Now they're trying to take the away, too, after which we can wear hairshirts and Example for the sin of having, for so many carefree and enjoyed ourselves.

W. Of E. May. All lok at what they're doing to Richard Rodgers. Not that in stop the man from writing melody altogether.

"which details with leaded persistence the efforts of England to beget himself a male heir (it im one act and four wives, if I counted aright, leaving th nobody to seduce, marry or behead in Act Two), rie at least two sweet songs that seem to have if the show's textbook blight. One is sung, early on, attier Ed Evanko, while Nicol Williamson as Henry me out from his fussbudget pacing in white shirt, tockings and itchy temper to seize a quili pen and ingly alterations in its lyric (it'a called "No Song easing," and the title is accurate). The other is done

Evanko and some richly brocaded ladies-in-waiting infant Elizabeth's cradle, which is rocked to its at the rest of the time? The rest of the time librettist

Yellen lyricist Sheldon Harnick, and everyone else any say about such things are loading Mr. Rodgers expository work, asking him to fashion into writtures all of the information that ought to have into the book or sent back, its dust ifffact, Museum. Thus if we need to know (and we on't) that Henry is having rather a breathless time of to get Anne Boleyn to the couch, the assembled en of the Court troop on to keep us posted on "The

Julie Harris in "The Belle of Amherst"—"vivacious, vigorous, teasingly honest"

Chase" ("He spots a new prey and off they go!"), while Henry and Anne rest up backstage. If we need to know (and we certainly don't) all about Henry's lineage, childhood, siblings and unexpected succession to the throne, Mr. Williamson is given what might he called a document in dotted eighth-noises ("What Now?"), ending with the entirely relevant plaint, "Why? Why? Why?"

Why, indeed, must the composer be asked to account, in long listings that cannot escape sounding like rambling recitative, for Henry's political, theological and even astrological beliefs? Strictly speaking, Mr. Rodgers has composed a great deal of music for the opulent spectacle. But it is not allowed to function as music, though the old pro is able occasionally, sneakily, to slip in a kind of tempo tantrum that turns out to be fun (as he does when a court prayer, with the ladies resplendent oo their knees in their spirited, unexpectedly arrogant march). Bot no one will help bim. Not the lyricist, who makes even the hallads as prosaically banal as "I could bring you here to me/To have you near to me." And oot Mr. Williamson, for all his willingness to halt his haughty, high-strung tyrant in mid-fury and warbte a proposition into yet another prospective wife's ear. We all know that Mr. Williamson is a splendid, if impulsively eccentric, performer ("Inadmissible stunning gauzes and golds, suddenly transforms itself into a

Evidence," remember?) And he has a perfectly acceptable singing voice. Unfortunately, whenever he begins to use that voice, he ceases being Henry and becomes a competent hireling performing a quite detached chore. The characterization doesn't carry over into the abruptly changed cadeoce. The actor is otherwise detached: one never feels that he is passionate about anything other than that need for an heir: eveo lust is lost in his too matter-of-fact, husy-schedule

And so "Rex." for all its visual splendor and its one eruptioo into cooveotional hut welcome dance (jugglers with oranges and flaming torches, feet flicking in a lively morris-jig), no looger seems a "musical," let alooe a musical comedy. It's a history trot for a high school exam, crammed with factual background too familiar to be of fresh interest or so arcane it'll he forgotten hy the morrow.

Neither can bald lyrics or, in this case, thin scoring do anything for "So Loog, 174th Street," transformed at the Harkness by Joseph Stein from his own earlier, already skimpy play "Enter Laughing."

What really hurts about "So Long, 174th Street" is watching Robert Morse, that faun-like combination of Tom Sawyer and Mad magazine's Alfred E. Newman, exhaust his whole repertory of amiable tricks before your eyes. He does everything that's been so funny before, listening hard with all his teeth (both of them), swiveling his head shyly until it comes to rest oo his or somebody's shoulder, shifting his voice from a woodland growl to a Minnie Mouse squeak, stabilizing his tilting form on a tilting planet by dropping his hands into his pockets as anchora. And it's as though an overtrained seal had been given oo props to work with, no beach-balls, no circus-drums, nothing.

Behind an irresistibly sheepish smile there's got to be something to play, to sing, to joio. Here he gets Stan Daniels lyrics that kill themselves off in their very titles: if the song is called "Undressing Girls With My Eyes," what else do you do with it? Undress girls, to be sure, but that's now dwindling aftermath, obvious restatement. Only George S. Irving, as a fantasy butler answering the Hollywood telephone for this would-be star (Mr. Morse is trying to escape. 174th Street and a career in pharmacy to become an actor) is able to make something of a number, perhaps because his is in tango rhythm and Mr. Irving has good tango fingers to snap with. Otherwise we spend the evening listening to "It's so nice being with you/Being with you/Beiog with you/I wish it would never end," and before long we've developed a slightly different desire.

After these two steadfastly unlyrical evenings, what a relief it was to come upon Julie Harris's generous, spiny, proud, bemusedly defiant, subtly yielding evocation of Emily Dickinson's mornings, twilights, and sometimes busy midnights (the poems might come at midnight, 19-egg hlackcakes would be baked by day)! Of course Miss Harris, in her onewoman "The Belle of Amherst" at the Longacre for a limited time, has a marked head start io the matter of offering some nourishment for the mind and ear. She has not only a handsome supply of Emily Dickinson's completed poems to weave in and out of her intimate, clear-eyed, often tart reminiscences, she has also—in the arrangement that William Luce has laid out for her—sassy family tales, stingingly phrased regrets, reluctant candors (her novelistfriend Helen Hunt Jackson "has the facts but not the phosphorescence"), suppressed memories ("I finally got so I could walk across that angle in the floor where he turned and I turned"), and those little notes scribbled on cards to acquaintances that helped her acquaintances think her just possibly demented ("We must be careful what we say/No bird resumes its egg").

The weave is vivacious, vigorous, teasingly honest in Miss Harris's hold-your-ground assumption of center stage. In the first half I wished she wouldn't so plainly let me know where a fragment of a letter or memoirs was ending and a poem beginning: in the second, all was seamless, and I admired her totally. I was also interested to hear, as Miss Harris ever so gently glided into "Because I could not stop for Death/He kindly stopped for me," a sound that was half gasp, half sighing approval coming from a woman seated near me. Tha lines can only bave fallen newly on her ears; the sound she made is one we should be bearing more often in the theater. "Tell all the truth/But tell it slant!" Miss Harris cries, following it not long after with a sly, rhapsodic smile and an announcement: 'There are words to which I take off my hat/When I see them sitting on a page."

Or hear them spoken, Or song, Where shall we find some mora of them?

But what about Mr. Papp's own revivals? Carefully, he makes a distinction between what he considers "revivals" and "classics." The difference, for him, is as wide as the Atlantic Ocean, Classics, he are Shakespeare. Brecht, Ibsen, Strindberg and Beckett-the latter being the only living writer that he would categorize as classic. ·One should of course add others to the list: Molière, Shaw, Feydeau, Pirandello. producing him."

So far as Arthur Miller, Williams, Kaufman and Hart are concerned Mr. Papp wants to leave them to others.

In contrast to Mr. Papp, other heads of institutional theaters are finding American plays worthy of revival. The Long Wharf Theater in New Haven, the Arena Stage in Washington and New York's Circle in the Square have all been leaders in this direction. The Phoenix and the APA are the parents of the movement Ellis Rahb, director (and co-star) of 'The Royal Family," is planningas his next revival—to bring back the APA itself. "We are beginning to discover that we have a heritage," says Mr. Rabb. "We are discovering that we have some really remarkable plays, and they should be done as long as we nave good actors to do

For Mr. Rabb, actors should be the primary inspiration for revivals. "In ballet and operas, works are chosen hecause of the nature of the talent on the scene at the have so many producers moment. Revivals should so much in the name - come out of the need of the performers." I would agree with Mr. Rabb, hut even the best actors, as he would probably admit, are no assurance of success.

It is not enough simply to

A revival must be motivated by an urgency. A particular play of the past must have something to say to today's audience. Or a new interpretation can shed new light on an original work. Or an aubeen undervalued. or even forgotten. Or a certain actor or actress may be suited to play-and wants to play-a certain character. Revivals are safer than new plays, but there still is a risk. In the course of a long season's journey into the past, I have never stopped wondering at the whims and vagaries of revivals. The ones that we most anticipate can turn out to be the greatest disappointments-and then along comes a pleasant surprise. Still there are lessons to be learned from this year's experience.

One curious conclusion is that there is nothing as dated as the supposedly timeless, and nothing so timely—or at least, lively—as a play that is enchored in its specific period. A play which may have been praised as profound when originally seen may now seem pretentious and there is no better example than "The Skin of Our Teeth." In revival earlier this season it seemed academic, at times even childish. One would suspect that other matinee "masterpieces" such "Winterset" and "J.B."

plier of old, American plays was the Kennedy Center in Washington, which, supported by money from Xerox, mounted a Bicentennial festival of eight revivals.

One could question the choice of some of the plays in the Kennedy Center series, but one that seemed entirely justified was "Long Day's Journey into Night." Its failure is proof that producing a great play is no guarantee of success. This production (which moved to the Brooklyn Academy of Music as did a number of the Keanedy Center presentations), with Jason Robards stepping up from the role of the older son to the role of the father, should have been the high point of any theater season. Mr. Robards cartainly is our foremost actor of O'Neill.

But serious miscalculations perience Mr. Robards was named as director. . Mr. Robards as director let down Mr. Robards as actor-and there were casting errors as well. This magnificent drama drifted and meandered, until we began questioning our memories. Was the work ever as good as it seemed? Of course it was and it is. But great plays demand great productions, And, as proved hy "The Royal Family," minor plays demand superb casting (which does not necessarily mean stars).

Of course O'Neili should be revived-frequently-and so should Tennessee Williams (which Kennedy Center did with "Sweet Bird of Youth" starting trece Worth), but someone should have reconsidered reviving William Inge. The theater world was not waiting breathlessly for "Summer Brave," Mr. Inge's final reworking of "Picnic." This playwright was a crestion of the fifties, overpraised at the time and now, perhaps, under appreciated. Years from odw, his plays, particularly "Bus Stop," may be con-

It became superficial and sentimeotal.

One would have thought it evive of moos out saw Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" The first production, so controversial in its time, was only 14 years ago, and the movie version with Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton is still fresh in our minds. But the new production was justified on several grounds. The casting (Colleen Dewhurst and Beo Gazzara) was exciting, and the author, by now an experienced director, wanted to stage the play himself. Through Edward Albee's eyes, we looked at "Virginia Woolf" again, and saw a play that was funnier and more human than we remembered. The shock has worn off. The drame remains, and the play has a great deal to say to new audiences.

Similarly, "The Threepenny Opera" has not lost its relevance. In fact in Richard were made. Without prior ex- . Foreman's production at Lin-.coin Center, it has gained in bite and anger. This new versieo (the adaptation is by Ralph Manheim and John Willett) goes back beyood the sanitized, popular Marc Britzstein translation Brecht's harsher original. Sometimes the best re-interpretation can be a returning to the source, the removing of embellishments with which a play has become encrusted.

> A crucial question is whether to recreate a play or to reinterpret it. The first is usually the saner course. And it is always too soon for. misinterpretation. Shepard Traube also had faith in a show that he had originally produced, "Angel Street," and attempted to reproduce it. He failed. The difference is that "Angel Street". is stale, while "My Fair Lady" is a classic of the American musical theater.

A look at next year's schedule suggests that time will continue marching backward, with such likely Broadway candidates as "Guys and

"The Innocents" starring Claire Bloom, "Roberta," "Anna Christie" with Liv Ullmann, "The Cherry Orchard" with Irene Worth, "The Creditors" with Bibi Andersson, possibly Glenda Jacksoo as "Hamlet" and "Man and Superman" with Lynn Redgrave (those last four all at Lincoln Center), Jerry Lewis in "Helizapoppin"-and perhaps Zero Mostel returning io "Fidler on the Roof," after six months on the road.

In the revival businessdefinitely a growth industry -one should learn not to make assumptions. Trends end and promises are broken. The success of "No, No.

Nanette" created a wave of nostalgia, which began to ebb with "Irene" and reached the shallows with "Good News." "Good News" forgot first principles. It banked on the box office appeal of faded stars and doubled its difficulties by being eclectic, by cribbing from other shows, instead of stressing authenticity. Audiences stayed away. In contrast, this year's excercise in musical memory. "Very Good Eddie," is faithful to its period and depends on a cast of young, talented unknowns to give the show vitality. They meet the show, as we do, for the first time.

Notes: Dance vs. Emmys and a New Nureyev

By CAROL LAWSON

Two nominations for the television world's coveted Emmy Awards have been captured by a couple of televised dance programs—the Joffrey special which was presented in Channel 13's "Dance in America" series, and "Three by Balanchine with the New York City Ballet," which was presented in Channel 13's "Great Performances" series. The awards will be announced May 17. Even if one of these shows is named a winner, however, it won't be singled out as the best dance program of the year, but rather as the "Outstanding Classical Music Pro-

With 68 categories of Emmys, why must the ballet companies of Robert Joffrey and George Balanchine compete with two New York Philharmonic concerts and Arthur Rubinstein's Chopin special? "It's because of the music," enswers the Emmy awards chairman, Larry Stewart, even though the only full-length ballet oo the Joffrey program, Gerald Arpino's 22-minute "Trinity," is danced to a rock score.

A spokesman for Channel 13, which produced "Dance in America," sheds more light on the situation. "The truth is," she says, "that they can't figure out where to put culture programs. These categories get bizarre. There ere too few dance programs for a separate category, so the only alternative to classical music is—believe it or not—a category called 'Outstanding Special-Comedy-Variety or Music.' But the shows nominsted this year for best special are things starring John Denver, Shirley MacLaine, Lily Tomlin, Monty Python and Steve and Edie. "Dance in America" producer Merrill Brockway, wbo has won three local Emmy ewards, is still trying to see the "wisdom" of it all: "I don't understand the categories. They're very strange for all those things—Emmys, To-nys, everything."

Rudolf Nureyev is dencing better than he has danced in years, according to several reviews of the Royal Ballet's current engagement at the Met. For example, Anna Kisselgoff said in The Times that "the old Nureyev magic has returned . . . the dancing has its old brilliance and techinique, the artistry its unique eye-riveting magnetism."

Such brilliance is especially remarkable since only two months before opening in New York, Nureyev bad been bospitalized with pneumonia. How did he spring back into shape? # Ashton Could Be Our Greatest Choreographer

he first thing you have to understand about Frederick Ashton's "A Month in the Country" is that it breaks all the rules. It is a ballet based on a play. Not a good idea. Words have a special precision that the poetic subtlety of dance can match in its own way but not really equal in sheer terms of definition. There is no dance equivalent for a phrase such as, "Would-you like to put the cat out?" And although unquestionably there are theatrical moments in dance that drama itself finds hard perhaps even impossible, to equal, the intellectual bite of a play is irreplaceable in terms of choreography. The idea of making a ballet out of Turgenev's mid-19th-century play "A Month in the Country" sounded, at first hearing, less than attractive, and probably less than practicable.

It is a marvelous but complex play. Its thematic natureis slight, but its impact can, if properly staged, be like a thunderstorm on a summer day, and yet something much more. Here are the sudden, unexpected transitions of lives-meetings, confrontations, loves, acceptances, partings, a feeling of summer languor, soistices and age differences; lovers not connecting and yet suffering with all those pains of regrets. Turgenev's play is about disturbance and unfulfillment. A young, bandsome tutor comes into a bourgeois Russian country household and throws everyone into a beadstrong lassitude of summer love and questioning. He rushes in like a calf at a bullfight and finds no lack of matadors. Probably everyone is hurt-yet there will be other summers, and presumably other builfights.

One would have imagined that the play is in no way translatable into ballet terms. Stories such as "Romeo and Juliet," "Hamlet," or "Eugene Onegin," yes, of course; even the stories happen to be the common currency of a cultivated mind. We know the ending of "Hamlet"all of us. Choreography to such plays becomes illustration rather than depiction. See here Hamlet rejecting Ophelia or questioning Gertrude-the acenes are almost from our childhood. But only a comparatively few literary persons will really know the Turgeoev. What was Ashtoo thinking of?

Who is Sir Frederick Ashton? He is one of the great choreographers of all time-he keeps e low profile very much like Henry James and Sbakespeare-but there would be many ballet cognoscenti who might claim that be is, simply in terms of passion and poetry, the greatest choreographer of the 20th century. He probably has less technique than Balanchine, less psychological insight than Tudor, less sheer imagination than Robbins, but his understanding of the way people react to life, especially the way women react to life, is unmatched. Ashton seems to understand the relationship between men and women in a

Everybody's talking about the Pennsylvania Ballet.

"Despite all probabilities, the Pennsylvania Ballet is absolutely one of the best troupes in the country." (Clives Barnes, The New York Times)

"The most important company outside of New York, however, is the Pennsylvania Ballet. The women are lithe, the ensemble work is solid." (Time Magazine)

ONE OF THE MOST DEVASTATING PERFORMANCES BY AN AMERICAN ACTRESS IN MEMORY Actresses trequently complain about the dearth of screen roles available to them. Joan Hotchkis did something about it with the hetp of another actress, Karen Arthur.

Hotchkis wrote and stars in a tour de force film. "Legacy" produced and directed by Arthur. After screenings at more than a dozen film festivats in the United States and abroad it finally is being

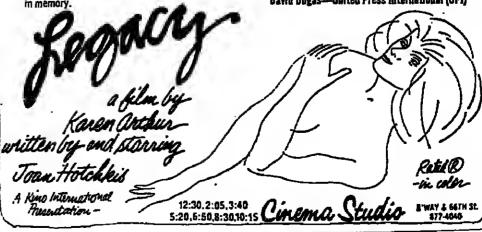

Hoschkis plays an attractive, wealthy and spoiled Pasadena, Calif., matron who in the course of a day visits her senile mother and then drives to her own welt-appointed home to prepare for dinner guests. In the meantime she talks on the phone, talks to herself, recalls her out-of-town husband and children,

She relieves herself sexualty in the bathtub to thoughts of the Japanese gardener. She finds the right decorations for a table center piece. Gradually she comes apart at the seams. If that sounds like "Mary Hartman" for the country club set, fine. There is a good deal of wit in 'Legacy."

"Clitoris . . . t can't pronounce it. He can't find it," she says in a soliloguy about her husband. Later she catts her anatyst. "t teel t'm going to commit suicide. t thought to ught to inform you."

Miss Hotchkis, who resembles a brunette Grace Kelly, is best known as the wife in the Thurber-inspired TV series "My World and Welcome to It," and as William Holden's wife in the movie "Breezy." With "Legacy" she now can be known for one of the most devastating performances by an American actress in memory.

'La Chienne'—Worth Waiting For

and when he allows Lulu's pimp, Dédé (Georges Flamant), whom he believes to be responsible for her treachery, to go to the guillotine. The accommodatiog rhythm that saves him is his resilience to life's horrors. He doesn't kid himself that life is any less bleak than it seems, but by acknowledging this, by rolling with the punches (but not too far), he maintains some measure of serenity as well as identity.

This, I'm afraid, is the kind of criticism that may put you off ooe of the most joyous films around at the moment. "La Chienne" is funny, ebuilient, a master entertaioment, a work of art that imposes on life's choos an artificial order that iso't, ultimately, any more artificial than, say, the spoken and written language. It's a wsy of communicating.

Such is the film's opening sequence, a close-up of a puppet theater with e hand puppet announcing gravely that what we're about to see is a drama. He's brushed aside by another puppet who announces that the film to follow is really a comedy. He, in turn, is batted off by a third puppet who straightens everything out: the film we are going to see, he says with just the slightest note of apology in his voice, is neither a comedy our a drama. It has no moral and it proves nothing whatsoever, he says. Instead it's about He, She and The Other Guy. At which point the sceoe dissolves into another framed picture, a dining room seen through the opening of a dumb-waiter.

Michel Simon was 36 when he played Meurice Legrand in "La Chienne" but he seems ageless, neither young our old but an embodiment of particular characteristics, physical as well as emotional. Maurice is moose-jawed, stooped but fastidious in manoer. The object of jokes at the lingerie firm where he works as e cashier, he accepts the jibes courteously, as if the most foolish remark might possibly contain wisdom. At home he eccepts his wife's insults without actually submitting. Maurice is a weekend painter, something that infuriates his wife who can say, as if genuinely surprised, "What right bave you to a pastime?" When she comes in ona afternoon and finds him painting, she announces that she hasn't got time for games, that she'a been working,

"collecting my dividends." "Our dividends," says Maurice firmly as he continues to paint,

Maurice is slightly myopic but not so myopic that when he meets Luhi he doesn't know her profession. He understands but be makes the mistake of trusting her when he sets her up in a tidy apartment that brings out all of her worst petit bourgeois tendencies. Lulu is a bitch though one with her own code of honor. She does everything for Dédé, the pimp whom she loves with the devotion of a mother. "Don't drink too moch and don't catch a chill," she says to Dédé as she packs him off to get drunk with the boys. To Lulu there is nothing especially wrong in her supporting Dédé oo the money Meurice gives her or in Dédé's selling Maurice's paintings and passing Lulu off as their mysterious American painter, Clara Wood. Even Maurice doesn't object to this fraud. He only snaps when Lulu reveals that she has never loved him and can't care less about being saved from the wicked Dédé. Though Dédé would certainly blacken both her eyes and perhaps break an arm or two if she lost Maurice, Lulu is the sort of mini-minded but romantie whore who would be happy with Dédé anywhere.

The late Janie Marèze is charming as Lulu, exhibiting what one of the puppets says at the beginning is "a vulgarity all ber own," something that is especially hilarious when she goes to a party for art patrons and society folk, to introduce ber as "Clara Wood," and acts like a booker-a very coquettish one. Georges Flamant is superb as the "mec," vain, none too shrewd, arrogant and, finally, the puzzled victim of circumstances he'll oever understand. Like Lulu, he has e very small brain. Two other performers must be mentioped, Madeleine Bérubet, who plays Meurice's wife with a mean-tempered conviction that is as funny as anything I've seen in any farce, end Gaillard (no first name) who plays Miss Bérubet's first busband, long thought to be dead but whose reappearance serves to liberate Maurice.

Maurice, of course, is not a victim io any conventional sense. He behaves shockingly but be's no more or less evil than anyone else in "La Chienne." Renoir doeso't point morals. You feel he may have tried it once but kept seeing the other side of every argument. It's the mystery of buman behavior that fascinstes him. We look with him. We observe. At times we marvel.

less? It could be that today's harsh headlines have deadened your funnybone. But save your tears, for all is not lost, Laughter will reign again, starting Thursday night when the Museum of Modern Art, presents Harold Lloyd's sileot, hilarious "For Heaven's Sake" as the opening attraction of its Biceotennial Salute to American Film Comedy.

The series, running through Jan. 4, will serve up a choice fun-feast for the humor-hungry, disaster-weary, "Jaws"ravaged moviegoers of the sober seventies. Besides Lloyd, comic artists of the silence-is-golden era who will be represented in the series include Buster Keaton, Charlie Chap-

After all, ad already shown it to wood insiders and their ents ranged from "A Freddie" to "Looks baby." For 15 years, Fields had been one most powerful of the pood power brokers, ao who could offer or

withhold the services of Barbra Streisand, Faye Dunaway, Paul Newman, Dustin Hoffman, Steve McQueen. Within 15 minutes he knew what it feels like to be on the other side of the fence-a first-time producer watching an audience shout obscenities at his film.

Two days after the preview, "Lipstick" went back to the cutting room, though hardly for major surgery. A few seconds of violence in Miss Hemingway's bethroom were removed as were half of rapist Chris Sarandon's four-letter Anglo-Saxonisms. But the violent rape scene which had so engered the Pasadena eudience could bardly be eliminated, since, according to Fields, much of the point of the film was "that rape is not an act of sex. It's an act of violence."

What the preview changed was not "Lipstick" itself but the advertising campaign. The film has since been damned by the critics as a sleazy attempt to exploit a serious topic, and the blatant advertising campaign has torn away the film's last shreds of dignity. Yet Fields seems absolutely sincere as be fumbles through police reports and F.B.I. records, quoting statistics: "In 1973, there were 3,735 attempted forciole rapes of adult females reported in New York City. In 1974, there were 4,054. And experts say that only one or two rapes out of ten are reported." Although male critics have been unanimous in their disgust, Pauline

Kael called "Lipstick" a major film that asks important questions, and feminist organizations have responded favorably to it-possibly because the woman who is raped is not powerless. Indeed, when Miss Hemingway kills her assailant her audiences stamp their feet and cheer the murder in much the same way they cheered Charlie Bronson as he slaughtered muggers in "Death Watch." "I don't think Freddie ever thought that he was making an exploitation film," says one of his associates. "He was trying his best not to exploit his subject." Nowhere in the publicity for the film had the word "rape" even been mentioned. Fields' production notes called the picture "a modern drama dealing with a highly charged issue facing women in contemporary society." The advertisements Fields had devised were extremely low key. Over a large blow-up of Margaux Hemingway's face were the words, "She believed she was the weaker sex until the day she was violated." In the wake of the preview.

Fields subtle advertising campaign was dumped. "Paramount felt there was no sense being subtla," he says. The studio decided it would be better marketing to warn the public beforehand about the subject matter." At the next few previews a large cardboard sign anpounced that "Lipstick' Is a Film About Rape." In newspaper ads, the tasteful closeup of Margaux Remingway's face was replaced by two explicit photographs: A frame from the film itself showing Chris Sarandon mounted on Miss Hemingway and a photograph showing the actressmodel with a rifle as she prepares to kill Sarandon. The new ads said that "Rape can turn a cover gurl into a killer" and offered the information that "In Los Angeles, there is one rape every 30 minutes" or, for the Chicago newspapers, "In Chicago, a rape is committed every 36 min-

Suddenly, Freddie Fields. the power broker, was simply a producer who had to dismantle his soft-focus campaign in favor of the studio's hard sell. Business at the box office in cities where the second advertisement replaced the first has turned from lukewarm to reasonably good, and forewareed audiences do not bolt from the theater during the rape scene -although one or two customers invariably leave and ask for their money back.

Chopping Classics, Rating Previews

Cut to the Quick

For years directors have been complaining ebout the cuts that television makes in their movies. But the unkindest cut of all comes from Continental Airlines. According to Action, the moothly magazine of the Directors Guild of America, Continental Airlines is offering "specially condensed movies along with fun food." Action asked for comments from some of the directors whose pictures had been "condensed." Otto Preminger, whose "Laura" had been sobjected to Continental's scissoring, said, "Continental Airlines themselves should be cut down if they iosist on cutting down the films that bave been carefully edited by directors and producers. I will do everything I can to stop them, sue them, and reveal what vandals they are. I certainly wouldn't trust my life to Continental Airlines if they behave so irresponsi-

Elia Kazan, commenting upon the absurdity of the situstion, said, "They beve takeo a film ["Gentleman's Agreement"] which won the Academy Award and hacked it down to 45 minutes." John Huston, whose disastrous "The Barbarian and the Geisbs" was condensed by Continental, responded tartly: They deserve The Barbarian and the Geisha.' It serves them right . . . I think it's awful, just awful."

Hypocritical?

The reel of film is labeled by a green celluloid band. The reel is a one-minute "preview of coming attractions" for "Taxi Driver," perhaps the most violent of this year's early crop of violent films. The 60-second trailer. however, is not violent. It consists of a close-up of Robert De Niro's face, accompanied by a disembodied voice praising De Niro's acting. The only hint of the content of "Taxi Driver" is a sentence printed in capital letters scross De Niro's body: THE MOST CONTROVER-SIAL FILM YOU WILL EVER

The green celluloid baod on the film means that the trailer for "Taxi Driver" has "certified by the M.P.A.A. director of the code for advertising as being suitable for exhibition to all audiences." A red band would mean that the trailer could only be shown with "R" or "X" rated films. "Taxi Driver," "Lipstick," "Dog Day Af-"Gable and Lomternoon." bard," "Chinatown," "The Godfather," "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "Blazing Saddles" are all pictures which have been rsted "R." In theory, no one under the age of 17 is allowed into a movie theater playing any of the films—unless be is accompanied by an adult. Yet the teasers for all eight films have been rated "G," unob-jectionable for children. Those trailers for R films are a big beacon sign for every pervert and for kids who want to be titilizted. It lets them know what to sneak ioto," says Robert Radnitz. Radnitz, the producer of "Sounder" and half a dozen other carefully handcrafted G-rated films, considers the rating systems for trailers "a reducto absurdum. I was called up and told the trailer for my new film, Birch Interval,' was given a red band because the woman who rated it objected to the line Whose baby you carrying around, Marie?' I protested and it was suddenly all a mistake "

Bethlyn Hand, director of the code for advertising, insists that the red band for "Birch Interval" was "a misunderstanding," but she admits that the ratiog system for trailers is "very subjective. To get e G rating, a trailer must oot have blasnhemous language, blood, or nudity; and it cannot show a weapon and a victim in the same frame. Beyond those rules, it's all subjective." She sees no absurdity in allowing so R-rated film to have a Grated traker. "After all, there's a tag at the end of the trailer that says 'This feature is rated R.' And the tag remains oo the screen for four seconds."

"Hypocritical," says Radnitz of the practice. "A protective coating of respectability on top of cynicism."

In any casa, any bypocrisy or cynicism about ratings does oot stop with the M.P.A.A. and its advertising code. "The exhibitors want to make as much money as possible," says Dan Polier, former film buyer for National General and Mann Theaters. "You don't have to be 17 to get into an R film at most theaters. Unless ao exhibitor is playing an out-andout porno film, be'll look the other way." And distributor Donald Rugoff—at a press conference called to anoounce the fact that his Cinema 5 would distribute "The Man Who Fell to Earth." starring rock singer David Bowie-showed no coocern over the fact that the picture would probably have an R rating.

"They get in." Rugoff said of the 14 to 17-year-olds who make up a good portion of the potential audience for the film. "They get in."

STREET SE S STREET

Today is the day to subscribe to civilization.

Civilization isn't a memory of times gone by.

Civilization is the spirit of every sight and sound that is worth treasuring in the history of art.

And nowhere is it more alive and more

And, if you have never been to The Met before, your first visit is certain to be an experience you'll never forget.

The design of the opera house, outside and inside, is that dazzling. And when the moment comes that the chandeliers rise, dim and disappear before your very eyes, the orchestra will begin, the curtain will open and, suddenly, you will sense that The Met is indeed the mark of a civilized world and the home of a national treasure.

And just think. The 1976-77 Season is on its way to proving it all over again.

It all begins on the evening of October 11, 1976. And it's a season of 20 different operas.

Six productions will be brand-new, including Puccini's La Bohème, Meyerbeer's Le Prophète, Wagner's Lohengrin and three operas which have never been performed before at The Met—Berg's Lulu, Poulenc's Dialogues of the Carmelites and Massenet's Esclarmonde.

Five productions will return from the 1975-76 season, including Wagner's Die Meistersinger, Puccini's Tosca and three of the newest productions in the repertory—Verdi's Aida, Puccini's Il Trittico and Mozart's Le Nozze di Figaro.

In addition, the season will feature several popular productions which haven't been seen at The Met for a season or more—including La Forza del Destino, Salome, Lucia de Lammermoor, Die Zauberflöte, Andrea Chenier, Il Trovatore, Die Walküre, Faust and Samson et Dalila.

And now is the time to select the operas and the seats that you prefer.

Starting on this very page.

And while you're thinking about the pleasure of subscribing, please think about the privilege of contributing.

For there always has been, and always will be, a place for civilization.

The place is in your heart.
And if your heart is set on the Metropolitan Opera, your help is needed more than ever before.

The economic fact is, the price of a Met ticket covers only 52% of The Met's costs.

The difference is up to you. And, if you become a Met Contributor, you'll enjoy much more than a tax deduction. You'll experience a sense of giving that can only be called timeless.

Because with one flourish of your pen, you'll be putting your personal signature on a growing conviction that the way of life called The Met embraces civilization so warmly and so strongly, this civilization can't afford to let it go.

The Philharmonic Ends an Era in Fisher Hall

n Saturday night in Fisher Hall the New York Philharmonic season will come to an end, with Pierre Poulez leading a performance of Gustav Mahler's Seventh Symphooy. The following day in will come the wreckers. Thus ends one of the shorter eras in New misical history. It was just 14 years ago that armonic Hall was opened, the new home of the York Philharmonic in the new Lincoln Center for the miog Arts. It was a grand opening, even if the ignished audience did have to pick its way through rguisnen aumente opening coocert revealed what been whispered around town: Philharmonic Hall was nsuccessful scoustic installation.

So now, after 14 years and several attempts at So now, area acoustician—Dr. Cyril Harris be atarting from scratch. Literally from scratch. er Hall (as Philharmonic Hall was renamed after a stiful cash infusion by Avery Fisher) is going to he enboweled. No time will be wasted. No time can be ed if the Philharmonic is to start its 1976-77 season

The first projections stated that the job would take it five months, at a cost under $3-million. That price escalated, as everybody knew it would. (The redone see Stadium, come to think of it, went through the process. The politicians, knowing that the actual price would scare hell out of New Yorkers, first talked about $24-million. Then there was talk about $50-million. Now it is said that the actual price is around $100-million.

Somebody at the beginning—uh—lied to us.)

Everybody hopes that something great will rise out of the mess. If the new hall is not finished by Oct. 21, and the betting in this corner is that it won't be, the Philharmonic will have to start its season elsewhere. The Beacon Theater on 74th Street and Broadway is being considered. Wouldn't it be funny if the Beacon Theater turned out to have the grestest sound since the opening of the Musikvereinsaal in Vienna?

But if the Philharmooic does not opeo its season in the new hall, it certainly will close it there. It also will be the last season with Pierre Boulez, who will theo surrender the baton and the musical directorship to Zuhin Mehta. The 1976-77 season in some respects will not be representative of the type of programming that Boulez has been giving us up to now. If nothing else, it will demonstrate that he is begioning to engage the standard repertory, which he generally ignores. He will be conductiog a great deal of Bach, as well as Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and Schubert's "Unfinished."

Wheo Boulez took over the Philharmonic five years ago, there was much talk about "themes" for the season. Boulez, just like Leonard Bernstein many years ago when he commissions honoring the American Bicentenoial, and the Philharmonic has come in for its share. Under a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, a series of joint commissions from the orchestras of Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Los Angeles, New York and Philadelphia was set up. What has resulted from this program are works by John Cage, Elliott Carter, David Del Tredici, Morton Subotnik and Leslie Bassett, all of which will find a place in next season's Philbarmonic programs. Boulez, that eminent specialist in contemporary music, will be conducting several of those, but he has not. preëmpted the series. Mehta, Daniel Barenboim and Erich Leinsdorf, three of the guest conductors, each have one of the new works.

season's programs, building them around certain thematic elements—the music of Liszt, say, or the Second Viennese School. In recent years that kied of talk has been

All over the United States, composers have been given forgoiten, just as it was forgotten a few years after Bernstein started much the same thing. There is no discernible "theme" to the 1976-77 programs, though there is one thread running through thanks to the Bicentennial.

Mehta's premiere is Subotnik's "Before the Butterfly." It is interesting that the newly appointed music director of the New York Philbarmonic will have only one week with the orchestra next season. That merely serves to show how recent the negotiations were that brought him to New York. Mehta will be conducting the concerts of the week starting March 30; and his program, in addition to the Suhotnik piece, will cootaio Mozart's Symphony No. 34 in C (K. 338) and the Berlioz "Symphonie

A study of the 1976-77 programs does not reveal any trends. There is an unusual amount of Bartok, the hon's share of which will be conducted by Boulez, though Leinsdorf and Colin Davis also have Bartok works. There is only one Mahler work during the course of the season, but that does not mean the Mahler craze is tapering off. Boulez will conduct the Mahler Third Symphony at the very openiog of the seasoo. But shortly before that, in Carnegie Hall, the Philharmooic will be having a Mahler festival. As for Bruckner, who willy-nilly is always associated with Mahler, two of his symphonies are scheduled: the Fourth (with Rafael Kubelik) and the Sixth (with Barenboim).

Boulez always has had a fondness for Ravel, and is indulging heavily. In addition to such standard shownieces as "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the "Rapsodie espagnole," he is bringing in the "Shéhérazade" Overture and the "Fanfare pour L'Eveotail de Jeanne." Throughout the season there will be a scattering of relatively unfamiliar works: Hindemith's "Schwanendreher," Martinu's Cello Concerto No. 1, Chausson's "Poème de l'amour et de la mer," Strauss's early symphonic poem "Macheth," Beethoven's "Egmont" music, Britteo's Csllo Symptony and Dvorák's "Soberzo Capriccioso." There also will be a scattering of contemporary works (in addition to the Bicentennial commissions). One of them will be by Boulez, who always has been very tactful when it comes to putting bis own music on his programs. On the series starting Jan, 13 he will be conducting the New York premiere of his own "Rituel." For his final performance, closing the season and his tenure, he has selected 'La Damnation de Faust" by Berlioz. No trends. But good, solid programs with just enough contemporary music to make the natives restless but oot so much that they will revolt. Boulez slways has been canny that way. In a year or so the Philharmonic will be coming forth with the 1977-78 programs, reflective of the taste and philosophy of Zubin Mehta. The chances are that Mehta's programs will be of an entirely different nature. So enjoy Boulcz while you can. In years to come be will be doing less and less conducting in New York as he gets more and more wrapped up with his experimental and laboratory music in his new Paris studios.

Notes: A Summer Of Premieres For Menotti

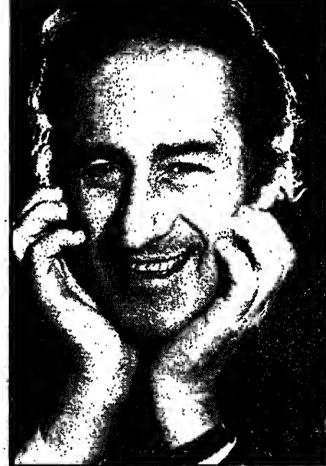

By SHIRLEY FLEMING

Gian Carlo Menotti is in for a busy summer, by anybody's standards: from the middle of May to the middle of June he will be represented by no fewer than three premieres, followed in August hy a fourth. On May 18 comes "Landscapes and Remembrances," commissioned by the Bel Canto Chorus of Milwaukee. A cantata in nine parts for soloists, chorus and orchestra, it recalls memories and incidents of the composer's own life in America, "I didn't want to do the usual patriotic kind of thing — that's a bit of a bore," ha says. "The best way seemed to me to express what you feel about a country in perconal terms. The piece begins with my arrival in New York and the last section is called 'The Sky of Departure'."

June 1 marks the premiere hy the Opera Company of Philadelphia of a comic opera called "The Hero," which Menotti describes as a gentle

It has now come to fruition, uoder the directorship of New York University professor Martin Chusid with the assistance of Verdi biographer Mary Jane Matz and New Yorker critic Andrew Porter.

Next, opening on June 17 and running through the 23d, the Washington Cathedral produces the first U.S. performances of 'The Egg," a church opera which was commissioned some years ago by England's Canterbury Cathedral and aubsequently rejected by the Archbishop of Canterbury. "It poses a ticklish theological question," Menotti com-ments, not without satisfaction. "A boy must choose between love and truth, and be chooses love. I think love is more important than truth." . Finally, there is to be Menotti's First Symphony, commissioned by the Saratoga Festival and scheduled for performance there oo August by the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy (New York will hear it on October 12). "It is called The Halcyon'—the bird who brought peace and good will to the Greeks. Why has it taken me so long to write a symphony? Well, everyone kept commissioning operas. and I-had a lot to get off my chest. Now my theatrical obsessions are gone, After one more work I'm through with the theater."

As more and more young jazz musicians from Chicago and St. Louis move eastward to New York and New England, their originality becomes more and more evident. Their improvisation ranges from solo saxophone recitals to little-tried combinations of horns, rhythm instruments and electronics. They have rendered the clamorous playing characteristic of much of New York'e jazz avant-garde all but obsolete with their more thoughtful approaches to improvisationstructure and content. organization men of the new York earlier this year to record with saxophonist Anthomy Braxton, who was one of the founders of the Creative Construction Company. Braxton's "Creative Orchestra Music 1976" exemplifies the unusually broad expressive range of the new Midwestern jazz. It includes two Ellington-inspired pieces which swing in traditional fashion, several group improvisations which develop texturally rather than harmonically, some eustere notated music with a post-Webern orientation, end, of all things, e Sou-

> As the album's variety suggests, the Midwesterners are tireless experimenters who will try almost anythiog once, But their work is rarely superficial or cepticious. One never encounters among the self-indulgent them squawking, endless onechord ostinatos, and unmitigated collective hysterias which plagued much avantgarde jazz in New York during the 60's and early 70's.

after they recorded with Braxton was fairly typical of what one does encounter in their music. Rather than assemble a group with typical instrumentation, the Chicagoans used two saxophonists, two trombonists, two drummers, a pianist and a violinist. The entire ensemble pleyed together only briefly: most of the evening consisted of incendiary unaccompanied solos, duate and trios (including a growling interaction between trombone, bass trombone and bass saxophone), and occasional wry wisps of thematic material.

Tha music is finding its way onto recordings, but slowly. An LP devoted to the first important AACM group, Roscoe Mitchell's original quartet, was recorded in 1967 but appeared only recently. "Old Quartet" suggests, in germinal form, many of tha directions later pursued by the Art Ensemble of Chicago, of which Mitchell was a founder. By 1969, when the Art Ensemble recorded 'The Paris Session," the new style had matured. Mitchell had been bringing in bicycle horns, toy xylophones and other little instruments to extend the range and color of the group'e sound, but saxophonist Joseph Jarman soon outdid him by accumulated gourds, drums, gongs, a guitar, a harpsichord, and a very nearly complete set of saxophones and woodwinds.

Muhai Richard Abrams stayed in Chicago while the Art Ensemble conquered Europe, just as he has remained behind the lines during the Midwesterners' assault on New York. His latest recordings are "Sightsong," in which his probing piano is supported by Art Ensemble bassist Malachi Favors, and Things to Come from Those now Gone," which tries to crowd too many ideas into a single album but does introduce an entirely new group of young AACM-trained musicians. Mitchell's most recent LP is "The Roscoe Mitchell Solo Saxopbone Concerts," an unaccompanied performance which combines intense energy with deliberete developmental logic.

Although saxophonists have dominated the new Midwestern jazz, trumpeters Leo Smith and Lester Bowie have also played important roles. Smith, who helped Braxton found the Creative Construction Company, now lives in New Haven and leads a group called New Dalta Ahkri.

Their "Reflectativity" documents a live performance which was lyrical, restrained and at times off-handedly brilliant. Smith is featured on Braxton's "Trio and Duet." a superlative example of improvisational interaction at its most intimate, and he is also sensitive and cogent on albums by two New Yorkbased saxophonists who have learned much from the Midwesterners, Marion Brown's "Duets" and Frank Lowe's The Flam."

L-ster Bovie, a cigarchewing former thythm-andblues trumpet player from St. Louis who was often the Art Ensemble of Chicago's most succinct soloist, is reunited with several musicians from his hometown on "Under the Sun," a celebratory "free music symphony" by the Human Arts Ensemble. The listener epproaching the Midwestern avant-garde for the first time would do well to begin here. Fender bass and electric plano provide a familiar, rocklike rhythmic foundation, but the solos by Bowie and saxophonist Oliver Lake are unadulterated. Lake, who has been leading an outstanding group in New York, is responsible for the finest LP to date from a single BAG musician, the intense but judiciously eclectic "Heavy

The exciting debut album from america's newest major group!

FOOLS GOLD is already attracting the unstint ing praise usually reserved for major stars. They first stepped into the national spotlight As Dan Fogelberg's masterful accompanists
Now they have arrived with their own excit melodies and the great musicianship which makes this debut album a rare delight.

Notes: The Rewards of Being A Network Ex-President

By LES BROWN

One reason Robert Wood received a handsome fouryear deal to produce programs exclusively for CBS after his recent resignation as president of the network was that it would keep him from doing what Fred Silverman is doing. Silverman, who had been program chief for CBS until last spring, went to ABC in a similar capacity and is using all the skills he mastered at CBS against his old team.

Silverman is noted for his ability to maintaio a kind of "quality control" with series programming. He pores over scripts, carefully watches casting and prods producers when he suspects that they are falling into a rut or taking shortcuts to save money. Producers in Hollywood respect him for his close supervision and ofteo credit him with making good shows better. This talent, lost to CBS and gained by ABC, has unquestionably been a factor in the phenomenal ABC ratings surge since January that has made it the leading network.

Eveo more unsettling to CBS is that Silverman has stolen the - thunder of its chairman and patriarch, William S. Paley, who is considered to be television's alltime programming champ. Paley was always a staunch believer in star power and put his network into first place by staging a series of talent raids on NBC in 1948 for some of its higgest stars -Jack Benny, Red Skelton, Amos 'n' Andy, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy and Frank Sinatra, Audiences followed the stars, causing the trade publication Variety to dub the soaring CBS "Paley's Comet."

Silverman appears to be fashioning a comet of his own. Recently, be raided NBC for Redd Foxx (meaning NBC will have just one more season of "Sanford and Son") and CBS for Nancy Walker (meaning she will give up ber role as the mother in 'Rhoda").

steeped in the CBS philosophy and has learned many of the secrets that made CBS No. 1 for 20 years. There was a hot rumor before Wood resigned that NBC was trying to hire him. Whether or not there was any substance to the rumor-Wood claims there was notmany industry observers be-lieve it clinched the CBS decision to set him up in his own production company. Keeping Wood from working for the competition heads off the kind of damage that is being done to CBS from the network's not having taken care of Silverman in a ones by far are those operat-

Think Big

Paul Klein, a leading student of the television audience, returned to NBC after an absence of five years just in time to belp out with the upcoming fall schedule. The new blueprint clearly re-flects tha Klein influence in at least one time period. On Sunday nights, from 9:30 to 11, there is—in place of a regular weekly series — a wide-open space that has been given the name "The Big Event." During his previous hitch with NBC, Klein had pushed for increased coverage of real events sports, pageants, awards presectations and the likearguing that television is at its best, and gets the cream of the audience, with such programming.

The Sunday time period. is to be expandable, as the event of the week may require; for example, it will be stretched to four hours of prime time for the November special celebrating NBC's 50th anniversary in broadcasting. But the question is: How many real events can there be, which are worth televising and which NBC can secure the rights to, that occur at the designated hour of 9:30 on Sunday nights?

Obviously, Klein, who is now program officer for "The Big Event," will have to scout up some suitably significant happenings to keep his time period from becoming a catch-all for routine TV speclais. He has already indicated that the television premiere of the film "Gone With the Wind" is worthy of "The Big Event" and that the dramatization of Arthur Hailey's novel "The Moneychangers," starring Kirk Douglas, might be, too. There has also been some talk at NBC of televising a heavyweight championship fight in the time slot. Along with the 50th anniversary special, that makes four events Klein can count on, leaving only 22 to go to make up a season. Anemia in Like Silverman, Wood is Academe

The notion is not uncommon, especially among intelthat television lectuals. would be a better medium if it were in the bands of humanists or the other idealists of academe. But the field work of Lawrence K. Grossman, the new president of the Public Broadcasting Service, would seem to give the lie to such thinking. Grossman has spent bis first two months in the job touring the stations in the PBS network and bas found that the most timid and weakest ed by universities, school boards of regents or state boards of education.

Admittedly generalizing. Grossman says it is these stations that most often shy away from programming dealing with current issues and public affairs, shunning anything controversial and making no attempt to become part of the community at Stations run by educators tend to be much more in the mode of instructional TV than those run by civic corpora-tions [like WNET/13]. They don't understand the forum that television is, and they really don't have any interest in the medium," Grossman says. "Because of this, they are uninteresting stations and do not get much viewing."

The problem worsens, Gressman points out, when the schools face a financial crisis, as they do now. The television stations are the first to get hit by budget slashes because, in the educational scheme, they have bottom priority. As a result, the public TV stations in Jersey, Atlanta and Louisville, to singla out a few, are weakened "to the point of virtual helplessness," Grossman says.

End Runners

Most television series are designed with a particular time period in mind. Some are aimed toward the earlyevening audience, which is heavy in juveniles and senior citizens, while others are geared for the late-evening audience, which is predominantly younger adults. But each fall ooe show in the schedule has to appeal to both kinds of audience: the ABC series scheduled on Monday nights as a companion to the televising of the National Football League's games.

The show has to do double duty because of the time difference in the East and the West. Because the gridiron events are televised live, the 9 o'clock starting time in the East is 6 o'clock on the Coast. Therefore, the program that occupies the 8 P.M. slot in New York-just before the football telecastgoes on after the game in Los Angeles.

For several years, the flipflop worked just fine with "The Rookies," but this past fall when the family-viewing policy was put into effect, the police show was deemed unsuitable for tha 8 o'clock slot. Last September, an adventure series called "Barbary Coast" formed a rotten parlay with football and was cancelled after the final game, Next fall, the hand-off is to the Captain and Tennille, the hit record artists who will have a music-vari-is a game-show entitled "Celebrity Sweepstakes." In this program's format, six celebrity panelists are presented with a quiz question. The studio audience, using electronic buttons, judges which celebrity is most likely capable answering the question. This is translated into "odds." Contestants then bet on any panelist at the stated odds. If the celebrity can answer, the contestant wins the money, if he cannot, the contestant loses. So far so good. But when the program is over and the credits are rolling by, this disclaimer makes a silent appearance on the home screen: "Some of the questions were based on general and specific knowledge and information furnished by the celebrities to the production company prior to the show. Celebrities have been furnished

For non-graduates of the Yale Law School, what's the message? What kind of game" are viewers being invited to play here? How can contestants (and viewers who play along) make educated guesses as to which celebrity is most likely to have an answer, when the producer has dealt answers to celebrities of his choosing before the show? Are viewers sunposed to mind-read the invisible producer?

Whatever the game is, it does not seem to be the one viewers are asked to believe they are watching during the course of the show. Does the fine print disclaimer discharge the network's responsibility to the audience? One wonders whether the craftsmen who prepared that disclaimer were really eager to have viewers read and comprehend it.

Consider another example. On "Hollywood Squares" an array of celebrities reply to questions, either with the correct answers or by making up adroit hluffs. The celebri-comedy writers. The disclaimer for this show has gone through several revisions, this being the latest: "The areas of questions designed for the celebrities and possible hluff answers are discussed with some celebrities in advance. Until recently, the disclaimer mentioned that actual questions and answers might have been given to the celebrity panelists, while the current one indicates only that they "may be discerned." In actuality, the audience is forced to vote on the problem before having had the chance to hear the discussion. Yet, the camera clearly shows the vote taking place after the debate.

At the end of "Break the Bank," the audience is cautioned that during the prior half-hour: "Celebrities have been furnished with the questions and answers. Comedic material has been made available to some of the celebri-

That would seem to be the candid disclaimer around. Yet, it would be even more forthright if the program's master of ceremonies laid it on the line during the playing of the game, while the audience is paying attention, and explained frankly that the show's questions, answers and gags are all writ-

What motivates all this current staging and gimmicking of TV game programs? Why are the networks coopted into providing supportive disclaimers, which are most often not seen or really understood by the home viewer? Why not play the game straight? The answer is that even the wittiest celebrity can dry up. He can appear to be dull Since—like most of us-he can't know everything, there will be times when he seems less than brilliant. So why accept the risks of reality? Thus it is that ratings-conscious producers offer the audience cosmeticized actuality, But if a security blanket is considered necessary, why not at least level with the audience? Instead of an artful discheinner, tell viewers deliberately and openly that fail-safe devices are in operation. Make certain that viewers know who got what help in advance. Of course, such a radical solution might not be too popular; when the audience is shown the net, the thrill might vanish. Packaged jokes would likely get a very different reception from ostensible ad-libs. Worst of all, audiences would know they were watching a pseudo-

fire. They might experience the game as they do a TV wrestling match, as an exhibition, not a genuine contest.

But the time for reform is here. My suggestion is quite simple. Tell the truth. Play it as it lies. I know there are celebrities who are clever and quick-witted enough to go on the air without being primed, I can vouch from experience, and other producers can likewise attest, that there are successful game shows that do not resort to deceptive gimmickry. There may be intermittent dull spots, hot audiences are aware of the nature of real events and. in my opinion, will applaud an end to sham.

The networks should do more than insist on mere literal conformity to the Federal Communications Act. Regardless of the precise language of the law that proscribes game rigging, the networks owe audiences a larger moral responsibility. They should assure the public that actuality programs, of whatever kind, are what they seem to be. They should once and for all withdraw the imprimatur of disclaimers on game shows which only pretend to disclose while, io fact, protect the dissem92.7

don. Nureyev will bave the longest rest from dancing in his life. He will continue to take class daily, but the only performances scheduled are a couple of Martha Graham galas in Paris. Does he have any second thoughts about this long respite from the stage? "I need two months off from dancing-not really to rest, but to quiet down." Nureyev says, "but one always wonders about it when things are going well."

Meanwhile, Nureyev is preparing for his tango scenes in "Valentino" with the same kind of Intensity with which he prepares for a "Swan Lake." He will be taught the tango by none other than Sir Frederick Ashton, former director of the Royal Ballet and England's most distinguished choreographer. Nureyev says enthusiastically, "Ashton's tango is great. He grew up in Lima, so he knows it-really knows it."

Dance Publisher

Robert Gottlieb, who is widely known as editor-inchief and president of Alfred A. Knopf, is also becoming known by another, unofficial title—the dance book publisher. Knopf's latest dance book, Margot Fonteyn's autobiography, arrived in the book stores last week. Meanwhile, back at the office, there are eleven more dance books in the works-an unprecedented list for a large, commercial publishing house. Why is Knopf so interested in dance? "A publishing bouse reflects the enthusiasms of its editors," says Gottlieb, a self-proclaimed "crazed ballet person" who personally edits all of Knopf's dance books. Gottlieb became "serious" about dance in the late 1940's. when he was a student at Columbia, "Everyone thinks the dance boom is something that just started," he says. 'but those days were a time of great activity and excitement in New York. The New York City Ballet was getting started, and my friends and I were there all the time, drifting silently downstairs from the balcony during the performance. Also, Sadler's Wells made its first visit to New York in 1949. The first time I saw Margot Fonteyn, my heart stopped-so you can imagine the special gratification of being her American editor so many years

Gottlieb's first dance book was Lincoln Kirstein's "The New York City Ballet." which was published in 1973. "I learned a lot while we were working on it," recalls the publisher, who is now a member of the City Ballet board. 'I started going to City Ballet obsessively. I had to know everything." His next dance book was Kirstein's "Nijinsky Dancing," which came out last fall.

Knoof has two dance books scheduled for publication thia fall-Jill Krementz's story of the life of a 10-year-old ballet student and a book by Mikhail Baryshnikov, with photegraphs by Martha Swope. "Several Baryahnikov picture books were offered to me," Gottlieb says, "but I turned them down because I am not interested in publishing books about current dancers that don't involve the cooper ush advertisements for dancers. Baryshnikov'a book is a book about work. He is taping his feelings about each of the roles he has decided. since he came out of the Soviet Union. The title is Baryshnikov at Work' hecause that'a what he is-a real worker." Gottlieb does other things

he Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, a quintessential Victorian building by Frank Furness, the Philadelphia master of the style's boldest extravaganzas, opened on April 24, 1876 for the nation's Centennial year. The cerulean blue ceiling of its grand stairhail ded with silver stars, the walls were a gilded y of stylized flowers on a rich, red ground above floral patterns; ornamental bronze stair rails boasted a of clustered-globe gas lights sprouting from elaboiky stems. Colors were plum, blue, gold, sand and sen. There was no "Victorian brown" anywhere. ly one hundred years later to the day, for the mial, the Pennsylvania Academy has reopened. It n closed for two years for restoration. By the time is were shut, a century of neglect and renunciation fictorian esthetic had reduced its showy glitter to mud. What had not been suppressed by changing ad simply succumbed to grime. If the Academy had Formers bank or insurance building, or one of ly Furness works in the path of downtown renewal that super-Victorian fruitcake, Philadelphia's City hich proved too solid and too expensive to demolish), i be gone: More than half of Furness's Philadelphia s have been destroyed, and much of the rest of cy has been severely mutilated. the tables are being turned again. By 1973, the the Academy hung in the balance; it was saved by a vote of the Board, edvised by arts experts and preservationists. The reopened hullding is spectacular, the colors glow again, the gold glitters, and all is radiantly diffused with the light of the double skylit roofs that make the structure a giant greenhouse. A little inevitable dust will serve to dim the brand-new luster and place the building and its style more legitimately in time. But the original intent of its superb spatial organization and intricate artisanship is revealed with clarity. This is not only the rehabilitation of a building, and of an extraordinary architect's reputation; it is also a pivotal step in the reevaluation of this country's Victorian architecture.

The $5.1 million restoration has been carried out by Hyman Myers of the architectural firm of Day and Zimmer man. It involved meticulous research, including scrapings, archeological-type digs, study of old photographs and an obvious devotion to the cause. (That spread to the workmen, as well.)

Construction of the building, which housed both the galleries and an art school founded in 1805, was the last word in fireproofing in the 1870's: shallow brick vaults carried on cast-iron beams. New mechanical systems have been inserted into the ample spaces provided by Furness'a ingenious original arrangement for heat and ventilation. There are new skylights and lighting, and some discreet remodeling has added extra levels for the school and a restorer's studio. Polychrome iron columns have been imcovered where encasing plaster was stripped away, as well as chamfered rooms that had been panelled over. Purists will find some fudging where missing, heavy cast-iron parts were replaced by lighter, modern ma-terials. But the 20th century has been as true to the 19th century as it is realistically possible to be.

The timing of the restoration, ostensibly for the Blcentennial, actually coincides with a growing consciousness of the excellence of the best 19th-century architectural design. The zeal of preservationists, based largely on sentiment and history, is being matched by a sharpened and increasingly knowledgeable appreciation of the virtuosities of Victorian work by both practicing architects and architectural historians.

In fact, it is not without significance that the installation of the huilding's opening show, "In This Academy," which includes the excellent choice of temporary gallery colors from clear white for contemporary work to plum, sand and gray-blue-violet for older pictures, is the work of the Philadelphia firm of Venturi and Rauch, currently embattled for its colors and backgrounds for the Continued on Next Page

It seems to me, for instance, that it is no longer necessary to drape. yards of felt on a wall in the manner of Robert Morras some years ago. But in general these young artists are making intelligent and imaginative application of a dozen or so movements now current and viable.

The one direction that is short-changed is objective realism, but this might be because it is so popular and so salable at the moment that most of its expert practition- background almost impercepers have found dealers. The median age of the 70 artists is around 30, with the roster divided about half and half between men and women. Without having been cad enough to ask whether this reflected a concession to Women's Liberation pressures, I found that when I came to making up my own list of awards (a gratuitous exercise, since no awards are offered) it was, indeed, Ladies' Day. Four of my six favorites, including the choice for top place, Sandra Gross's "Tao Series 4." were by women, a spontaneous vote of confidence since. I visited the ful painting that raises a serious question. Seven-and-ahalf feet high and ten feet wide, It exists as a single dellcate area without dramatic accents, a subtly unified surface more like a page from a book, in spirit, than the wall-sized composition that it is, making use of collage, impasto, stains and semi-calligraphic squiggles against a tibly divided into rectangular sections. On either side, two large forms, like ghosts of the ancient trumpet-shaped Chinese bronze ritual vessel called ku, invest the painting with echoes of ceremonial functions. The tonal values are so close that they virtually disappear in a photograph—hence no illustration here.

The question is, what can you do with e painting of this size, if you aren't a museum and don't live in an enormous house? I know that one enthusiastic prospective purchaser went back to New York to check the dimensions of what he thought was the perfect spot in his study, and found the union impossible. Maybe, as one solution to the producer-consumer imbalhig, airy studios should contract into the dimensions of a New York apartment in order to develop a sense of salable scale.

The other five works that appealed to me most were. Cora Cohen's "Tournai," a large painting that, without intending irreverence, 1 can

(There is nothing here sley or Homer, Eakins or Sargent.) Nor is it, either, sly an ettempt to document American life through of art. "Simply for an artist to picture America is ough to bring his art into this consideration," Dr. tells us. What is under examination here, rather, "are rying ways in which some ideas and attitudes about ca became inseparable from the country's art and, rsely, how in some instances art itself became an ying mark of America." Nature" in which the eppetite for grandeur and the "unlversal" is addressed to visions of the wilderness, An impressive anthology of romantic landscape painting, from Cole to Blakelock, fills this section of the show, but something important is missing-the great 19th-century landscape photographs of the West that are as much a part of this story as the hetter known paintings. Elsewhere in "America as Art," Dr. Taylor has integrated photography into the exhibition in an exemplary manner, but here-where photography first begins to count-he has overlooked it, and the omission is repeated in a section devoted to "The Frontier and the Native American."

We see these pendulum swings of the imagination in the 20th-century "moments" of the exhibition as well. "The Image of Urban Optimism," with its emphasis on the "abstract" dynamism of the machine, the romance of modern engineering and the grandeur of the skyscraper in the 1920's, contrasts dramatically with "The Folk and the Masses," with its very different romance of rural life, regional identity and homely folkways in the 1930's. Somewhat more surprisingly, one discovers a similar division between the "universal" interests of the work represented in "A Center for Art," which concentrates on the formation of the New York School in the 40's and 50's, and "Identity From Uniformity," which focuses on the Pop Art and Photorealist painting of the 60's and 70's. In the perspective of "America as Art," the latter often looks-to my eyes, at least, if not to Dr. Taylor's—as "regional" and restricted as the work of Grant Wood and John S. Curry, though the "region" being evoked is advertising and the mass media rather than some Iowa farming community.

But the pleasures and insights to be derived from "America as Art" are to be found as much in the particular objects it has culled from every corner of the country as in its larger themes. The National Collection has always made a point of surprising us with the unfamiliar, and it does so egain in this exhibition—with individual pictures like Christian Mayr's "Kitchen Ball at White Sulphur Springs" (1838), an extraordinary glimpse of black life in the age of slavery, or Ilya Bolotowsky's glimpse of Depression life, "In the Barber Shop" (1934); with an entire series, like Louis Lozowick's paintings of American cities in the 20's; or with a picture like Thomas Hart Benton's "Engineer's Dream" (1931), which offers an oblique, sardonic commentary on the machine-inspired dreams of "Urban Optimism." It is safe to say that very few visitors to this exhibition, no matter how knowledgeable about American art or American life. will not encounter something they have not known beforeand something worth knowing.

Whitney Museum's "200 Years of American Sculpture." (The Academy's refurbishing was started under Tom Armstrong, who moved oo to head the Whitney, and has been completed under the current Academy director, Richard J. Boyle.) The younger "Philadelphia school" architects, in today's vanguard, find much to support the Venturian thesis of "complexity and contradiction" io the rediscovery of the Victorian richness that the modernists rejected. In the past few years there has been a rising tide of turn of the century, led by a coterie of Furness buffs. The Philadelphia Museum held a Furness show in 1973, accompanied by a fine book and checklist by James F. O'Gorman, working with George E. Thomas, Mr. Myers and Cervin Robinson, Professor O'Gorman has characterized Furness's buildings as "among the most boisterous and challenging in an age noted for aggressive architecture." He was an original, in the sense of a talent that takes the taste of his time and transforms it into an overwhelmingly. personal expression. That taste, as the historian Carroll Meeks defined it some time ago, was for the "eclectie picturesque." In the work of Furness it became, in O'Gorman's words, "a bediam of heterogeneous parts."

Turrets, textures, polychromy, rounded and pointed arches, mansarded and decorated pavilions, dwarf columns, diaper-patterned brick, strangely placed windows, warped levels and fulsome ornament were combined in compositions of almost volcanic intensity. Deliberate oddities of arrangemeot and scale created explosive visual pressures. This is oot the oaive "bad taste" that has been so simplistically disdained by later generations; it is a deliberately manneristic style that richly rewards the informed eye. The facade of the Academy, dooe early in Furness's career when the firm was Furness and Hewitt, is actually one of his more restrained works.

All of these features can be traced directly to the Butterworthian ecclesiology, French neo-Gree class the parallel urges for structural rationalism and a tive romanticism, and the elegant ornament of Own Jones. ### A Box of Posies Will Brighten The Window

By OLIVE E. ALLEN

Like so many other things, window boxes have been edapted to modern living and may be found in many places. They are attached to window sills and porch railings or are built as part of a new home.

The low, ranch-type house is particularly adaptable to certain kinds of window boxes. They are often made of wood, flagstone or concrete or a similar material that blends with the rest of the house. The box may run along the entire front of the house or around the edges of a terrace or patio.

Those who are new at this sort of thing can buy green metal window boxes as well as the newer ones made of plastic, which I do not recommend since the plastic, is brittle and cracks easily. More expensive are redwood containers which come in different chapes and sizes.

Plants that need full sun cannot flower successfully in a window or planter box that is shaded most of the day. On the other hand, those that need the protection of shade will look sickly after a few veeks in the sun.

Before any planting is done in these boxes, drainage conditions and proper soil must be taken care of. There should be holes or some kind of outlet in the bottom for water to run off. Otherwise in periods of heavy rainfall, the soil would become saturated and the plants would rot. A twoinch layer of broken crock (flower pots) or cinders

The soil should be rich in compost or humns, even more so than the soil in a flower bed. After all, the roots of the plants in the boxes are in comparatively small space and need excellent growing conditions. A mixture of good garden loam, a little coarse sand, leafmold or humus or peat moss and, if available, some well-rotted manure will make a good growing medium. A light feeding with liquid fertilizer every other week will take care of food requirements.

To maintain a succession of bloom in a planter or windom box, two complete plantings usually are necessary. The first one in early spring may be pansies, English daisies or other hardy annuals and biennials. After mid-May, when nights as well as days are warm, the main planting of geraniums, petunias, begomias, etc., may be done for five to aix months of bloom.

Nothing could be more colorful in spring than a box outside a dining or living room window filled with pansies of every hue. Then there are the low-growing English Continued on Page 41

the taking of photographs to millions with the edvertising slogan which said, "You rest." Thus, from the begin-taking one.

Most people think of "instant photography," or the concept of seeing finished prints within minutes after the film is exposed in the camera, as a comparatively modern innovation that first came along when Dr. Land invented the Polaroid camera. Yet the idea is in many ways as old as photography

The daguerreotype of 1839, as well as the ambrotype and the tintype, were handled in this manner. In the middle of the last century it was possible to walk into any one of the 86 portrait galleries in Manhattan and walk out in ebout 15 minutes with a finished daguerreotype.

In other words, from the beginning, the emphasis in photography was on taking the picture, and then with a minimum of fuss seeing the results shortly after the exposure had been made. It was ooly after the more compli-Arthur Rothstein is photo editor of Parade magazine.

Eastman Kodak Company has always been to make the taking of pictures as easy, simple and trouble-free as

It is, therefore, surprising that so much time elapsed before the introduction of the Kodak Instant Camera as a challenge to the mooopoly that Polaroid has had for 28 years. One reason may be that any method for developing instant color prints is a complex chemical process on which Polaroid has many hasic patents. In order to create their competitive system, Kodak research scientists in London, Paris and Rochester worked on the chemistry, film and camera design, and oew machines and production facilities took years to construct.

Nevertheless, Polaroid has filed suit against Kodak for alleged infringement of 10 Polaroid patents. Four of these patents relate to the camera and involve devices such as the film advancing apparatus and the datachable roller system. Six of the contested patents deal with the CODAK ENS HETAILT

Film pack fits into bottom of new Kodak camera. film and include the method for trapping excess process-

using polymeric acid spacer The Kodak system differs in several ways from that used by Polaroid, although there are some similarities. They both have camera models in which the film is automatically ejected after exposure. However, the six-voit batteries that power the Polaroid's SX-70 and Pronto

ing fluids and the concept of cameras are incorporated as an integral part of each film pack and thus included in the purchase price of the film. The Kodak EK-6 requires two six-volt replaceable hatteries thet are inserted in the camera and are good for a year of oormal use. The Kodak EK-4 model has a hand crank to manually orank out the film, but uses one hettery for exposure control and flash operation. Differences in film and in methods of exposure have also resulted in variations in camera design. With the SX-70 system, the image appears on the surface of the film being exposed. Thus only one mirror is necessary to prevent reversal of the subject. In the Kodak PR-10 film system, exposure is made through the back of the sensitive material (the image migrates through 19 layers to reach its final support). The back of the film sandwich then becomes the front of the finished photograph. As a 16sult, the Kodak camera needs two mirrors to straighten out the subject. This edlows for a slightly looger focal length lens. Kodak's cameras have a three-element, plastic 137mm f/Il lens, as compared to a 116mm f/9.4 in the Pronto. The more expensive SX-70 models employ a four-element 116mm f/S glass lens.

Polaroid's SX-70 and Kodak's PR-10 films are both the reversal type in which the subtractive dyes cyan, magenta and yellow form the picture on a white surface (Kodak's reversal emulsion was originally discovered by their scientists at Harrow, Englarid, in 1950). Both filma are also rated at 150 ASA, although Polaroid hes eoother color film, called Polacolor, that is rated at 75 ASA.

same in area, but the Kodak picture is rectangular while the SX-70 is square. Kodak feels that since the camera is expected to be used mostly for family group pictures, the rectangular image size is more appropriate for group pictures. In both systems the pictures produced take about 10 minutes to develop fully, but Polaroid's material has a greater temperature latitude than Kodak's.

The Kodak Instant Camera may be considered an evolution of a technique rather than a revolution. Although another model made in Germany, the EK-8, is planned with more advanced features. Polaroid will continue to provide a greater variety of oneprocess sensitized materials and a wider range of accessories for this type of photography. Kodak's silk finish, named Satinluxe, is a concession to the majority of consumers who prefer this. It reduces glare and disguises a multi-

Announcing: A very limited minting of Proofs of the first gold coin of Guyana (formerly British Guiana).

THE GOLD OF ELDORADO

The 1976 One Hundred Dollar Gold Coin of Guyana

CONTENTS: 500/1000 FINE GOLD / WEIGHT: 5.74 GRAMS / MINTED BY THE FRANKLIN MINT Available only until May 26, 1976—Guyana Independence Day.

o appropriately commemorate the tenth anniversary of Guyana's independence, the Government of Guyana is about to issue the nation's first gold coin: The 1976 One Hundred Dollar Gold Coin of Guyana. In keeping with the significance of the occasion, and with the importance of the coin, Proofs of this historic issue are being made available to collectors outside Guyana as well as to the nation's citizens. And to assure the coin's quality, the Government has selected The Franklin Mint, the world's largest private mint, as official minter for these Proofs.

The design of this new gold coin is based upon the tale of "Eldorado"-the Golden Man. For the early explorers of this bountiful South American land took the timeless Indian fable of "the Golden Man" to mean that there was a lost empire of the Incas, east of the Andes, where gold could be found in quantities beyond the wildest imagination. None of them ever did find Eldorado. But, as a consequence of their search, north-central South America was explored and settled, and an economy-based on the land's natural wealth—was born. The result: the nation once called British Guiana, but known today as Guyana,

Thus, the obverse of the new coin portrays the legendary Golden Man casting gold upon the water, as a symbol of the natural and mineral wealth Guyana has given to the world. The reverse carries Guyana's Coat of Arms.

The deadline for ordering Proofs is May 26, 1976

Proofs of this historic gold coin will be issued in strictly limited edition, for collectors and dignitaries. By order of the Government of Guvana, the total number of these Proof coins will be permanently limited to the exact number ordered by May 26, 1976—the tenth anniversary of the day Guyana achieved independence. There is an absolute limit of just one gold Proof per collector.

Guyana lies on the northcentral coast of South America, between Venezuela on the west. Surinam on the east, and Brazil on the south. The Dutch established the nation's first settlement in 1596. However, England finally won the competition among European powers to colonize the country, and founded British Guiana in 1831. Guvana became a sovereign nation upon declaring independence

... Residents of Guyana may obtain a Proof of this historic 1976 One Hundred Dollar Gold Coin from the Bank of Guyana. Collectors in the United States may use the order form below. But please remember that orders for this extraordinary coin must be postmarked by May 26, 1976, to be accepted.

Canada and Florida as British possessions, the Colonial postal system was divided into northern and southern districts, with the northern district extending from Virginia to Canada. This area was under the administration of Franklin, so that he is regarded as the first Postmaster General of Canada. In 1775, Franklin was se-

only a man of many parts

but of great reach, so great that in the decade before the

serving the British Crown as a Postmaster General of the Colonies and also of Canada.

After the acquisition of lected by the Second Continental Congress to be Postmaster General of the Colonies. He was serving in this post when the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed, and thus became the first Postmaster General of the United States.

In a tribute to Franklin and in observance of the Bicentennial of the American Revolution, the United States and Canada are jointly issuing commemorative postage stamps with nearly identical designs for the man who served each country as its first Postmaster General.

The Franklin stamps will be the second joint U.S.-Canadiao issue. Stamps commemorating the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway were issued at Massena, N.Y. and Ottawa on June 26, 1959.

The new commemoratives will be issued on Juoe I at Philadelphia during Interphil 76, the seventh international philatelic exhibition to be hald in the U.S., and heralded os the oreatest ever. The exhibition begins on May 29 and runs for nine days through:June 6.

Both stamps make use of 'ha sime des'on with a domineat portrait of Franklin on the right and the rest of the ctamp made up of a backdron of an adaptation of an early North American map.

The stamps differ in lanquage, denomination and all-hthe in size, The U.S. denomination is 13 cents and er two-thirds of the stamp is in the orange-brown that is the traditional land color on maps: The Atlantic Ocean and the Great Lakes are also light blue. In the upper leftcorner, in large, dark blue capitals, appears "USA." Just below this, spanning the two Great Lakes farthest west, also in dark blue, is "Bicentennial 1776-1976" in two lines. In the lower left corner is the denomination, "13c" in dark blue.

The Canadian stamp bears the inscription . 'Canada. United States Bicentennial, Bicentennaire des Etats Unis" and the 10-cent denomina-

The image area of both Franklin stamps is the same, 1.42 by .79 inches, a tiny bit smaller than the usual horizontal commemorative Overall dimensions of the stamps vary slightly, however. The U.S. stamp measures 1.56 by .99 inches, perforation to perforation, while the Canadiao stamp measures 1.6 by 96 inches, perforation to perfo-

The "S. stomes will be arthicd by the offset and intaglio processes in three colors. The offset colors are "tec. creace and broam and a second blue for the nortrain and the lettering will be added by intaglio on a Giori rect. There will be nne plate number per post office pana. of 50 stamps.

The Canadian stamp is being pristed by the American some machines are available with a key or lever that permits switching from orbital action to straight line action (for final finishing). This type of machine would be a good choice for those who do much familiare or cabinet finishing.

. The least expensive finishing sanders are those that are powered by a vibrator, rather than a regular motor. Though these can be useful on some very small projects. they are scarcely faster than hand sanding on most jobs, and are of very little value for removing old finishes or smoothing of even moderately rough work.

Motor-driven good quality orbital finishing sanders, on the other hand, will do a fairly good job of smoothing rough surfaces when a coarse paper is used, but they are much slower than disk or belt sanders for removing old paint or varnish.

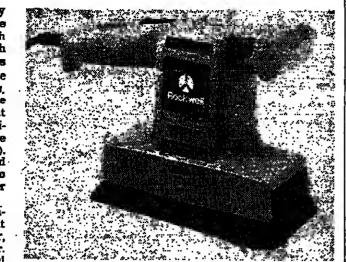

Belt sanders use continuous belts of abrasive paper that go around two drums, one at the front of the machine, and one at the back. A flat, spring-mounted plate between them provides backing for the abrasive and insures firm contact with the surface. Belt, sanders are the most powerful of all sanding machines, and they are the fastest working..

They are ideal for heavy duty jobs such as fast removal of paint and varnish, as well as smoothing down rough lumber and cupped or warped boards. (They are designated by the width of the belt they take, with the 3inch size being the most popular for home use.) Equipped with finer grades of abrasive belts; they will do just as good a job of final smoothing as the finishing sander, although more care is required when handling them because they cut so fast.

Because it works so fast, a belt sander should never -n or with an orbital _ be held in one place while circular) motion the belt is moving. It should ing back and forth be started before coming ne time. Those with in contact with the surface, then stopped is it is lifted.

Motor-driven finishing sander has orbital action achieved by moving parallel moves in a straight line, but when necessary for faster cutting the machine can be moved diagonally across the built-in tracking system that permits adjustments while in use to keep the belt centered so it doesn't creep off to one side. Most are also designed so that one can sand

With any cander it is important to remember that one should not bear down hard on the machine while working. On horizontal surfaces the weight of the machine is often enough. Pressing too hard only slows up the motor and the cutting action, and may overheat the unit or scorch the paper. Also, when working on flat surfaces care is required to keep from rocking over the edges or allowing the machine to dip past the edges especially with a belt sander. This can cut off the corners, or cause gouges that will be difficult

Q: The white tile floor in our upstair bathroom has rust stains on it that we cannot seem to remove. Can you recommend a procedure that might work?-Mrs. V. M., Bay Shore, N.Y.

A: Since I assume you are talking about ceramic tile, the first thing I would try is scrubbing with ammonia and a mild abrasive pad (the type sold for use with Teflon pots). If this doesn't work, then try using a regular rust remover of the kind sold in most hardware stores, but be sure to rinse the residue off promptly after the rust is softened to keep it from soaking further into the tile.

Q: Can you explain why I do not have as much water pressure in the shower as I do in the kitchen and bathroom sinks? The shower pipes are back to back with the water heater, and there is 59 inches of pipe between the shower faocet and the shower head. Is this an unusually long distance that could be affecting the pressure at the shower head?-Mrs. H. Y. Lakewood, N.J.

A: The distance between the faucet and the head would have no bearing on the water pressure. Chances are that your shower head is partially clogged. Try cleaning it or replacing it with a new one. If this doesn't solve your problem, then the next likely source of trouble is the faucet or valve—it could have a defective washer or a piece of dirt may have lodged in the seat. The last, and least likely cause of trouble would be in the pipe leading to the shower head; if it is badly corroded or orimped this could slow down water flow,

Q: Is there anything on the market you can apply to a dining room table top to make it waterproof so that we can eat on the table without using table pads?-Mrs. B. A., Bronx, N.Y.

A: Depends on what you mean by waterproof. You can refinish the table top with a good quality bar-top varnish, preferably the kind with a urethane base. This will make it alcohol and water resistant for normal use, but spills and food stains should still be wiped up promptly. Also, it is a good idea to keep a light coat of paste wax on the surface at all times, buffing it regularly and renewing it as necessary.

A play-off to decide the world title was used in the Bermuda Bowl, an inter-zonal contest which ended yesterday. (A report on this event is given in Section, I.)

Bill Eisenberg of Los Angeles is the American holdover from the 1975 team which lost in Bermuda to Italy. In the diagramed deal from the qualifying stage last year he played skillfully to bring home a difficult game.

Against opponents who remained obligingly silent, Eisenberg was able to reach the no-trump game by a simple route. In the replay one of his team-mates opened the West hand with three-hearts; boldly or rashly according to one's viewpoint. This gamble paid off when South doubled and North bid four diamonds, thereby missing a game. It was difficult to pensize three hearts, but South would have

By this time South had a good idea of the distribution: It seemed that East was trying to keep valuable cards in the minor suits. So the heart ace was cashed and a spade was thrown from the dummy.

East chose to throw a diamond, after which South had various winning plays. He chose to cash his spade king and diamond ace before ducking a diamond to East. This was the salest way to make nine tricks. An overtrick could have been made, at some risk, hy cashing all the available winners and leading a diamond to endplay East. If East had not thrown a diamond, South would again have cashed his high spade and would again have been able to mansuver a ninth trick in the minor suits.

After Bulbs Bloom

New gardeners often neglect their bulbs after the blooms bave faded. But this is one of the most important times in bulb life. The care they receive in spring will determine how well the bulbs will last Bulba are self contained packages, complete plants with their own stem, food supply, embryo flower and leaves. When the new bulbs were planted last fall, these complete packages were ready to produce blooms. Inside were the leaves and flowers for spring of this year. The cool winter season chilled them down and kept them dormant. Then the warm spring weather initiated their bloom.

After bloom, the bulb is spent and must renew itself, form new storage food, new leaves and a new flower or another new "package" for the 1977 season.

The bulb does this immediately after the blooms fade. Renewal starts at once. Therefore the post-bloom period for all hardy bulbs is critical. That is the time to see that the bulbs have additional fertilizer, water and care. Steamed bonemeal is often used. So is the general garden formula 5-10-5. Apply it around bulbs as flowers fade and scratch it in lightly.

Bulbs should be watered, too, after the bloom to be sure there is enough moisture in the soil to keep the development of next year's flowers going aloog steadily.

And most important: never let bulbs form seed. The only exception is a grower who is tinkering with hybridizing of new kinds, but that is another story. Seed formation saps the strength of the newly forming bulb. The flowers should be cut off as soon as they fade. Faded flowers of hyacinths and daffodils usually need to be cut off, but the faded tops of tulips snap off easily. The little bulbs should be checked, too, to be sure that there are oo tiny nobs of seed beads forming.

And finally, oever cut bulb toliage. Allow it to yellow naturally and die. This means that the bulb will have foliage to supply the energy for the renewal. If the foliage is cut from the bulbs, the cycle is stopped and the bulbs usually oever bloom well again. Daffodils and crocus naturalized in the lewn cause problems because the grass cannot be cut until the bulb foliage is yellow. For a while the area where the bulbs are planted looks untidy. But the reward of good spring bloom, makes the mess worthwbile.

Usually daffodils and crocus naturalize well lo the lewn area. The plantings last for a long time if managed properly and the bulbs increase over the years. Tulips and hyacinths are less loog lasting and in a few years must be replaced with new varieties.

Answers/Questions

OAK PROBLEM (April 18)

C. P., Moorestown, N.J., ooted that their eightyear-old oak tree has developed white spots on its bark as if it had been speckled with white paint. He asked what caused it and what could be done about it. We consuited Dr. Philip Wargo, research pathologist with the U.S. Forest Service. He pointed out that anyone who seeks help on a disease or insect problem needs to supply more detail The oak may have scale and the local office of Cooperative Extension may be aware of a

ZOYSIA GRASS (April 18)

R.A.S., Rushland, Pa., asked if there is a way to permanently get rid of zoysia grass and replace it with regular turf. It is taking over his lawn and has large dead spots caused by fungus infection. We checked with the Cooperative Extension Service, Cook College, Rutgers University and they recommend two methods. The slow method: Fertilize late in the season, September or October. Raise the height of the mower to cut zoysia at three inches or higher. After several years, this type of management causes the cool season grasses to overtake the zoysia. Fast method: Use one of two chemicals: dalapon, sold as Dowpon, or amino triazole sold as Amitrol-T, Cytrol or Weedazol. These materials are mixed with water and sprayed on zoysia when growing best in the middle of the summer. Wait 10 days or two weeks and retreat any new growth. Wait one month after final treatment. Then spade or rototill before planting other grasses. Ed.

FORSYTHIA IN VERMONT (April 25)
Mrs. G.P.C., Cranford, N.J., planted forsythia last year around their Vermont bome and this spring it was all dead. She asked if forsythia is tender in Vermont. Mrs. William B. Derick, e Vermont reader, replies, "Yes, forsythia is tender in Vermont except possibly in the southernmost part. Occasionally a forsythia does bloom and often only when it is below the winter snow cover. There is an excellent 80-page booklet, Landscape Plants for Vermont published by the Extension Service. It is $1 and available for all oewcomers to the state who want to garden here."

FROSTED RASPBERRIES (April 25)

J.U., Hastings-on-Hudson, asked how to save their fall raspherry crop from being nipped by frost before it can be picked. Jerry Sussman, a New Jersey reader, suggests, "Listen to the weather forecasts for frost predictions. Then in late afternoon, cover the raspherry plants with old plastic sheeting (the kind used for paint drop cloths work fine) or old bed sheets. Be sure to remove them every

MAGNOLIA FROM SEED (April 25)

B.P.T., Bangor, Pa., has never been successful in germinating Magnolia grandiflora seed and be asked for some clues for success. Richard Clegg, an upstate New York reader, writes, "Magnolia grandiflora seed requires specific cold treatment, stratification, to break its dormancy. It has to be stored between 32 and 40 degrees, moist, in a sealed container. Otherwise its viability is decreased. Gether seed in fall after fruit ripens. Clean and sow in fall (natural stratification) or store for two to three months as described and sow in spring."

HOSTA LEAVES

I have many nld clumps of striped green-andwhite hosta in my garden. When I divide the clumps and replant the small divisions, the leaves often turn solid green. Has anyone else experienced this and what is the reason? Mrs. R.S., Brooklyn, N.Y.
CITRUS LEAF PROBLEM

I have started e number of grapefruit, lemon and tangerine plants from seed. Eventually the leaves have a "gathered" look to them. Does anyone know what causes this?

My five-year-old dieffenbachia is sprouting three flowers.

No nne here can tell me if I should be thrilled or concerned.

ROBERT BYRNE

Using Time Wisely

Correct management of the clock is essential in tournament play, and there are several ways to accomplish it, depending on capacities and approaches to the game shown by one player or another.

I think it is over-disciplined to follow Mikhail Botvinnik of the Soviet Union, a former world champion, in dividing the 40 moves into 10-move segments and allotting an equal 37½ minutes to each. The problems that arise in egame are not equally difficult, requiring instead vastly differing amounts of time to solve them.

On the other band, it is ridiculously impractical to burn np so much time on an original opening that one must conduct the rest of the game as though it were lightning chess.

An amusing example of this excessively contemplative approach occurred in the encounter between José Garcia Padron, a 17-year-old Spanish master, and Vitaly Veshkovsky, a Russian grandmaster, in the eighth round of the Las Palmas International Tournament.

Veshkovsky's unusual 4...
Q-B3 is mentioned in "The Encyclopedia of Chess Openings" with the bare suggestion that White might try 5 N-N3, leaving both players on their own. However, that leeway proved too much for Veshkovsky, who indulged himself by taking two bours and 10 minutes for his first eight moves.

Now there is no question about the quality of Black's opening play—Garcia Padron was forced into e disharmonious, lagging development—but where was the need for all that time on moves that were natural and straightforward?

Veshkovsky achieved the center advance 9... P-Q4 and increased his lead in development with 12 . . . B-KN5, yet, harried by the clock, he found no way to sidestep the simplifying exchange 16 NxB.

OxN.

Worse yet, he created a weakness by the pointless 17 ... P-QR4, and, although Veshkovsky won a pawn by 20 ... NxP, Garcia Padron got the Mng file with 23 R-KI, while the black bishop was hampered by its own pawns. By the 26th move, Veshkov-sky was down to one minote for the rest of the game and he tumbled into one tactical shot after another. First he lost the precious pawn-ahead with 26...Q-B3?; 27 RxP; given White's aiready existing positional advantage, that was probably enough to ensure Garcia Padron's victory.

But Veshkovsky's time panic continued. With the clock flag perched ready to fall and register a forfeit, the Russian blundered egain with 30 . . . P-KB3? 31 BxBP. A desperate glance told him that 31 . . . PxB? would lead to 32 Q-N8-ch. K-K2, 33 R-N/mate.

Garcie Padron bammered at the wreck that was once Black's kiogside with 32 P-R4 and shut off any possible counterplay with 33 R-K4. The young Spaniard instantly jumped on Veshkovsky's final blunder, 33 . . . Q-B4?, to part black king and rooks by 34 B-N7ch!

Veshkovsky barely had time to resign before his flag dropped.

knife, or small putty knife. Then use a more pointed one—a small steak knife will do. When the piece has been taken down to bare wood, it will need drying out, so place it aside in an opeo challent.

shed or garage. After the piece is dry, more delicate tools are used to continue the cleaning. Two favorites are brass ceramic tools - one a tiny round spoon shape that never gouges the wood, the other only e quarter inch in width with a soft, rounded off blade. These work with the natural grooves in the wood; cleaning but not cutting them. A steak knife is still useful for scraping and picking out crevices, as is a worn screwdriver (using the side of a blade for scraping broad surfaces). Avoid woodcarver's tools because all wood bas whoris, grains and rhythms that should not be destroyed.

For final stroking and cleaning, a soft brass potsorubbing brush and a small paint brush are used. The procedure is roughly: scrape, probe, stroke, scrape, brush out, blow out, blow gently, brush scrape, probe—and then brush again. If a tough, jagged end causes problems, a rasp or coarse sandpaper may help, but it is best to avoid them. All soft spots must be removed and crevices taken down to hard

The next step is choosing clear finish. Roots come varieties and many shades of browns, golds, greys and in-betweens and should be preserved. Occasinnally the drama of the form is in wide, strong curves and smooth surfaces, so a hard, polished look may be desired. Any clear acrylic, shellac, lecquer or varnish (preferably sprays) can be used. Polyurethane tends to give a darker, harder gloss that may be good for pieces with a solid, sculptured look. They usually take three piece will "take" the finis. in the same way, depending on bardness, texture and grain, some parts may show a high gloss and others remain dull.

Mounting may or may oot be required, depending on how the sculpture is balanced It helps to keep a few sample bases bandy and move a piece from one to another to judge the effect. An odd length of lumber or pieces of slabwood (with bark) from about 4x8 to 5x10 (and one to three inches thick) can handle most root sculptures. Interesting rock slabs, too, will serve for smaller pieces. Of all the bases possible (excluding plastics and metals which detract from the wild beauty of roots) smooth blocks of wood painted matt black and free-form shapes of slabwood, stained to barmonize, with the sculpture seem to work best. The wilder and more rugged the root, the better it will look on slabwood (bark and all). If the piece is abstract or rather regular in form, then use finished wood.

Once a wood base in proportion and harmony with the piece is selected, the question is how to mount it. If, the base is heavy, then it may be necessary to drill a hole in the base so that a long screw can be driven up from the bottom. A pilot bole is drilled to the depth needed, at the correct spot in the sculpture. Some sculptures are too tall or heavy for screws, in which case a steel rod (they come threa ed or r'ain) is used. Matching holes are drilled rod is cut to the appropriate length and bammered up. through the base and gently up into the piece itself. (Drill necessary.) An illusioo of flight can be created by perching the root on top of the rod after it is anchored.

give a darker, harder gloss that may be good for pieces with a solid, sculptured look. They usually take three coats. Not all parts of each Smaller root sculptures do not need rods or screws—they can often be glued to the base with wood glue or coats. Not all parts of each

Serve something unusual, something great, something you discovered in The New York Times.

Try something made with green peppercoms, a spice that gives the flavor of pepper without overwhelming you. It was one of the most popular of all the recipes The Times published last year.

Steak au poivre Vert

- 1 (1-to-114-inch thick) strloin steak (about three pounds) Salt
- 1 tablespoor Cognac or whisky
  1 tablespoor drained green peppercorns, coarsely crushed in a mortar with a pestle
- 4 cup heavy cream
  4 teaspoon Dijon mustard
- 1. Cut off a piece of fat from the steak and render it in a heavy skillet. Pan-fry the steak to desired degree of doneness. Transfer to a warm platter, season with salt and keep warm.

2. Remove any excess fat from the skillet. Add the Cognac or whisky and heat, stirring. Add the crushed green peppercouns and cream. Bring to a simmer, stirring. Stir in the mustard and pour sauce over the steak. Yield: Three servings.

Note: Green peppercorns in vinegar are available at Bloomingdale's and Lekvar-By-The-Barrel, 1577 First Avenue (at 82d Street) and 968 Second Avenue (near 51st Street).

Dig and pulverize the soil to a depth of at least ten inches. Before planting, add peat or compost and apply an all purpose fertilizer such as 5-10-5 turned under and incorporate into the upper four inches of the soil.

With the exception of those that need a long season to come into bloom, seed can be sown by May 1st directly in the garden where they are to grow. Rake the area smooth and mark out rows. Fine seed should not be covered but patted lightly into Small seeds need only the barest of covering while larg-er seeds like that of marigolds and zinnias need be covered only so they are not seen. Mist the area daily until good germination is evident. This is especially important if soil is heavy and has a tendency to crust which makes it difficult for seedlings to emerge. With suitable weather conditions, annuals will germinate within a few days while others take longer. Asters may take ten days to two weeks and Bells of Ireland three to four

Plants are also available from garden nurseries. There was a time when only mixed colors of annuals could be obtained in flats but within recent years the bedding plant growers have become more responsive to the needs of gardeners and many varieties are available in separate colors and come in small pack units of six to eight plants. Always select plants that are stocky and bushy.

There also are many new varieties of annuals with variegated flowers and foliage. A Judicious selection of some of these newer kinds can make an interesting display when flowers are cut for a bouquet. These are some of the first pack units to be sold and they bave to be selected early.

osa daisy at the same level they were in the flat. Water each one as it is set in place.

The seeded rows will need hand weeding at first to climinate small weed seedlings as they emerge. The area between rows must be cultivated early and often to destroy weeds as they appear. When the plants are two to three inches high, start a thinning process to give them room to grow. A mulch of grass clippings between rows will help retain weeds. Annuals should be encouraged to grow fast and if showers are infrequent water them deeply at least ooce a week.

For profuse bloom, side dress with an all purpose fertilizer ooce or twice in the growing season and wa-ter in well. As they grow those with tall stems should be staked to prevent them from sprawling. To encourage a succession of bloom, it is most important to remove faded flowers promptly before they start to set seed.

Blooms cut in early morning or late afternoon condition satisfactorily. Choose those with half opened buds or fully opened flowers but before they have started to fade. Take a bncket containing several inches of quite warm water to the garden.

As flowers are cut, place each stem in the container taking care not to crowd the blossoms. After bringing flowers into the house, I like to gently wash them off with warm water while supporting the blooms so they will not be damaged. This treatment eliminates dust and any insects that may be present.

The bottom of stems are then recut and any foliage that will be submerged is removed. Keep flowers in containers stored in a cool place out of draughts several hours or overnight before arranging. This will condition them so they are not only crisp and turgid when ready to use but they will last daisies, primroses and forgetme-nots, blue Phlox divaricata, yellow alvssum and many other dwarf perennials, If the perennials are chosen, they can be removed to some place in the garden in tate May or June to make room in the window box for the summer-blooming plants.

Many pleasing combinations can be made, especially of these spring-flowering plants-for example, Delft blue pansies, with yellow alyssum, gold and brown primroses with forget-menots. The important thing always in planting these window boxes, whether for spring or summer, is to crowd in the plants. They seem to thrive and bloom better and certainly they are more colorful. To keep plants blooming flowers should be picked off as they fade. I suppose most of us think of red geraniums, begonias and blue ageratum for a summer-blooming box. In a sunmake a good showing all summer long. There are many other equally good plants, and it is fun to try new combinations each year. Instead of red geraniums, there are many fine shades of pink, from pale to salmon, that combine beautifully with white petunias and blue ageratum or lobelia. Pure white geraniums are stunning with rich purple petunias. For a colorful, exotic looking window box try brilliantleaved coleus in various patsmall yellow or orange French or Petite marigolds are constant. In a shaded location, fancy-leaved caladiums in shades of pink, red, green and white are equally

Other shade-loving plants are the begonias-both the semperflorens varieties and the tuberous-rooted kindsimpatiens, fuchsias and dwarf bleeding heart. The little wax begonias B. semperflorens is the easiest to grow. Flowers are in shades of pink, red and white single or double blooms.

When planting, place a few tall plants toward the back. Others, lower growing, should be toward the front and still others, lower growiog, should be toward the front and still others may be trailing to hang down over the edge of the box. For height, I like to use fuchsias, Vinca rosea, petunias, marigolds and impatiens. Any of the plants that start growing too tall may be pinched back.

Low-growing flowers for the front are sweet alyssum, ageratum, verbena, hrowailia lobelia aod portulaca. Vines or trailers may be ivy, Vinca major, trailing nasturtiums or Cascade or balcony petunias and perhaps Asparagus

Whether or not watering of the window or planter box is necessary will depend on its location. If it is partly sheltered by overhanging eaves, watering once or twice a week may be necessary. Even though it does rain regularly, check boxes often to be sure moisture penetrates

Large and many petaled blooms require a longer drying time than the more delicate types. Air drying time will vary from ten days to three weeks depending on temperature and bumidity.

There was a time when flower arrangers used to dry flowers in fine dry white sand or o mixture of borax method is still being used. However, to produce dried flowers that will retain their octural colors and form, one of the desiccants cootaining silica gel is best. There are a oumber of these available in gardeo shops especially formulated for drying flow-with a tight cover such as a sweater or shirt box. With single or double flowers like gloriosa daisy and zinnias cut off flower heads leaving one incb of stem. Insert a two or three incb-piece of medium weight florist's wire into the calyx and bend the wire horizontally placing flowers face up on at least an inch of the desiccant and cover petals carefully with desiccant.

To preserve flowers in the desiccant use a plastic box

In the case of double flowers like marigolds permit some of the material to flow between the petals as the are covered. Stemmed flowers like snapdragon and larkspur should be laid flat on the desiccant material. Push a little of the silica gel into each floret then cover stems and flowers. Seal the box with tape and allow three to seven days drying time. When dry, the flowers should feel crisp to the touch. If permitted to remain in the desiccant too long the colors will fade.

To remove flowers from the box, tip it to allow some the material to slide out revealing the flowers. Lift each one carefully, supporting it with fingers. Use a soft artist's brush to remove any desiccant remaining on the petals.

Store dried flowers face up in air tight boxes containing about a third cup of the desiccant until ready to use. When arranging the flowers, the stems can be leogthened as needed with florist's wire covered with tape. ELDA HARING

> But in Liberia (up $49 million to $258 million) American interests are more mixed. While petroleum investment accounted for $103 million in 1974, Firestone Tire and Rubber has substantial rubber interests, Bethlehem Steel and Republic Steel have a stake in the Lamco iron ore mines and Amex Inc. is developing the Wologisi iron ore deposits.

> Elsewhere on the continent, socialistic countries like Tanzania, Mozambique (where Bethlehem Steel had rights to a fluorite mine before independence) and Somalia are bostile to foreign investors and American interest in them is low. ## How Ronald Reagan Would Run the Economy

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM

WASHINGTON-There is a single theme that runs through nearly all of Ronald Reagan's speeches, position papers and statements io interviews.

It is that inflation must be avoided at all costs and that the only way to do this is to balance the Federal budget at once. He made that view succintly in a position paper.

"The one basic cause of inflation is Government spending more than it takes in. When Washington runs in the red, year after year, it cheapens every dollar you earn; it makes a profit on your cost-of-living wage increases by pushing you into higher tax brackets; it borrows on the capital market to cover its deficits, cutting off business and industry from that capital which is needed to fuel our economy and create jobs; it robs your savings of value, and it denies retired people the stability they need and expect for their

"The cure is a balanced budget. The Federal Government must set a timetable, a systematic plan, to halance the budget-and it must stick to it."

If the reduction in Government spending that a balanced budget would require leads to a slide back into recession. Mr. Reagan says, then so be it. "To cure inflation," he remarks in one of his standard stump speeches, "there will he a temporary period of economic

As the political fortunes of the former California Goveroor bave taken a dramatic turn for the better, the interest in his position on economic issues is increasing. Mr. Reagan's basic economic philosophy is that of a traditional conservative Republican: If the Federal Government minds its own business, leaving commercial interests unfettered as well as spending no more than it earns, then, he believes, the entire country will prosper.

The improvement in the economic picture this year is illusory in the Reagan view. He accuses President Ford of having stimulated the economy as an election year ploy and argues that, before long, under current policies, there will be another period of rocketing inflation.

As for unemployment, be opposes public service jobs, expanded public works programs and other Government financed efforts to stimulate employment. He looks more favorably on incentives to husinesses-tax breaks and the like—to encourage the hiring of more people. He would also allow businesses to hire teenagers at less than the Federal minimum wage in an effort to reduce the jobless rate among young people. Mr. Reagan bas also proposed "an expanded job data bank—a computer-linked system to make it possible for yoo to walk into your local employment office and get information about jobs requiring your skills anywhere in the country."

Ghana and Nigeria also want

But, basically, the Republican challenger's position on unemployment is expressed in terms of controlling infla-"The long-range solution to unemployment," he says repeatedly in his speeches, "is to bring an end to inflation which, in turn, causes recessions."

Product Potential: Does Marisa Have It?

"In cigarettes, one smokes he advertising. In fragrances, one wears the advertising. And in our case, one believes in the imagery."

Speaking was Adrian M. Butash, a 39-year-old marketing man about to attempt to market his latest "product," the movie actress and model, Marisa Berenson. There are very few image bearing people of importance who are available for commercial communications tie-ins," Mr. Bntash continued. "Marisa's esthetics become prime attributes for product where there is no demonstra-ble product to sell or buy. Her substance and value from a commercial standpoint is essentially her thoroughbred family name and the classic cultural clues it implies." The marketing of Marisa is similar in many respects to other licensing programs of sbow business and sports personalities, although her name, of course, is less likely to be associated with golf chos or fish and chip stands. The marketing plan envisions "Marisa" products in various fields such as cosmetics, perfumes and clothes. Also planned are a group of silk screen art prints signed by Miss Berenson, an educa-tional television program about the late Bernard Berenson, the art historian and distant relative, a five minute syndicated radio program called "The Beautiful Life," a book of photographs to be titled "The Best of Marisa," and a biography covering her first 29 years.

Mr. Butsh has yet to sell his first license, but his hopes are high. He is even planning other Marisa ven-tures if the initial efforts are

The universal ousiness problem is to conceive a business, develop quality products which can be sold widely to create mass distribution and mass profits, and have your product and product name over the years be-come a household word. Why not start with a household word and, building backwards, construct a business under the name?" To be sure the licensing business (in which the licenser's name is actually attached to the product in contrast to the simple "I usa" endorsement) is full of pit-falls. Entertainers such as Al Hirt, the trumpeter, and Zsa Zsa Gabor have licensed their names with great hopes but heen disappointed. Mickey Mantle and Joe Namath, New York sports beros of yester-day, have had failures. Mark Spitz, the 1972 Olympic swimming champion, says his "lifetime association" with Schick Inc. (the shaving people) ended last year. Yet Arnold Palmer Enterprises is considered a major success in trading on the name of the golfer. Golfer Johnny Mil-ler's label is an important part of the men's clothing operation at Sears, Roebuck Company: Johnny Carson of TV fame has his name on clothes produced by Hart Schaffner & Marx with annual volume of $85 million.

The carrot, of course, is the royalties, which would range from 5 percent to 15 percent for Miss Berenson, with Mr. Butash's own company, Ad-rian Inc. to receive 10 percent of her income from any licensing arrangement.

He envisions that a single clothing licensee could have a Marisa ready-to-wear line with sales of $1.5 million in the first year, $3 million in the second, and $8 million in the third. At a royalty rate of 10 percent, this would mean SI.2 million to Miss

He began thinking of merchandising Marisa in 1972, and a year later made the proposition through her sister, whom Mr. Butash had used as a model. She replied with the word "interesting," in a note and they signed their contact last February. Miss Berenson, whose full

if one competitor were the recipient of a large number of new accounts from quickpaying Citibank customers, that bank would be forced to impose a charge of its own to protect itself from the cost of carrying too many card users in the habit of not paying Interest.

At the few banks where sees have already been tried, results have appareotly been heartening.

The Marquette National Bank of Minneapolis Imposed a $10 annual fee on all credit card holders late in 1973. At the time, It had 200,000 Bank-Americard accounts out-standing.

After imposition of the fee, the number of accounts cropped to 80,000, but 60,000 of these were active accounts which meant that the bank had lost only 20 to 25 percent of customers who actually used the credit card.

One thing that may have made Marquette's fee imposition easier to swallow is the fact that in Minnesota banks may only charge a maximum of only 12 percent a year on credit card transactions, as opposed to 18 percent in most other states, including New York.

In any case, since 1973 outstanding BankAmericard accounts at Marquette have grown steadily, to about 160,000 at present of which 70,000 are active

Turn kids on to real grass.

This summer nice city kids will get into some really good grass. The kind that tickles your toes when you walk through it barefoot. The kind a kid would never get to experience if there wasn't a you and there wasn't a Fresh Air Fund.

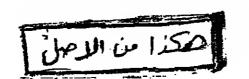

Each summer you and the Fresh Air Fund give thousands of city kids two weeks in the country. Two weeks when the grass, the sun and the fresh air can work their wonders. And give a kid a clear head for the rest of the year.

Real grass doesn't cost much. Just $30 buys a kid two weeks' worth. But even 30¢ can help.

So please help again now.

Kola pepheline is now heg used at two alumina ants-Volkhov (since the urly 1950's) and Pikalevo pened in 1959)—and suports a cluster of three small. tuminum-reduction plants in porthwest Russia.

About 1.5 million tons of nepheline yield 350,000 tons of alumina. Bauxite, by contrast, yields about one-half ton of atumina for each ton of ore. (Alumina is again reduced by balf to produce aiu-

The Kola success induced Soviet planners to develop-a Siberian nepheline deposit and an associated 800,000ton alumina plant at Achinsk. - However, the technology in Siberia proved tess success-ful. The Achinsk plant opened in 1970, after 15 years of construction. By 1975 it was producing 550,-000 tons of alumina, or just two-thirds of designed capacity.

The associated large cenient output—seven tons for every ton of alumina—was in excess of local needs and threw the economics out of Achmsk evidently cooled. Soviet interest in the entire nepheline approach.

"Enough experimenting." Izvestia, the Soviet Government newspaper quoted planners as having said. "Let's get back to plants us-ing banxite."

Earlier plans for expanding the use of Kola nepheline have been shelved, and an Armeniao nepheline project that has been stumbling along since 1960 is nowhere near completion.

Nepheline being mined in The Soviet Union.

The apparent disillusionment also extends to alunite, which the Soviet Union has been processing into alumina at Kirovabad in Transcaucasia since 1966.

By 1975, after nearly a decade of operation. Kirovabad was producing 200,000 tens of alumina, hatf of its ultimate designed capacity, as well as sulfuric acid and potassium sulfate, a fertilizer, as byproducts.

The aim is still to reach full capacity by 1980, but the current five-year plan also provides for the use of Imported bauxite at Kirovabad, starting early next year.

The Soviet Union now imports about 1.6 million tons of bauxite a year. And, because of a shortage of bauxite-processing capacity, alu-mina imports also have risen, to ahout 900,000 tons a year. Sources include Hungary, . plants.

Proposals are already being advanced for a second, t-million-ton seaboard .. afumina plant on the Pacific coast sometime in the 1980's.

The long-term intention of Soviet planners is to use the cheap hydroelectric power uf Siberia for aluminum produc-tion on the basis of rawmaterial imports and re-export the metal to countries of the Pacific basin.

Such an operation would be facilitated by the con-struction of the 2,000-mile Baikal-Amur Mainline railroad, to be completed in the early 1980's. The line, with projected traffic consisting mainly of eastbound flows of various raw material's for export, could accommodate targe westbound hauls of alumina for Siberia's aluminum

KEEP ALL THE MONEY YOUR MONEY MAKES!

Now's the time to take action so that next year's taxes will be less taxing. And municipal bonds are the way to do it. The interest you earn on them is exempt from Federal income lax-and often free of state and city income taxes, loo.

Another important consideration in these days of investor caution-municipals are sale. Bonds that are A-rated or higher offer you the highest degree of salety next to U.S. Government securilies. Many are M.B.I.A. insured. They can also offer you a healthy yield. For example, you can get a tax-free municipal bond that yields 8%—which is the same as 16% in taxable income if you're in the 50% bracket.

There's never been a better reason for investing in municipals than the savings you'll enjoy on next year's taxes-and in the years to come. And-there's never been a more knowledgeable, professional source of municipals and information about municipals than O'Neill & Feldman.

So, keep all the money your money makes-send for our booklet on tax-exempt securities. Write flow-right now.

Struthers Wells and Fertilizers

The world's need for food is rapidly becoming as critical as the shortage of energy. Struthers Wells is one of the leading engineers, designers and fabricators of high pressure heat exchangers for ammonia plants, and palented Multiwall " urea reactors and ammonia synthesis converters, crystallizers and other enuipment widely used in fertilizer designs and plants throughout the world.

Worldwide Fertilizers. Power. Petroleum. Environment. Energy Recovery.

Domestic companies planning overseas installations can also secure the same Struthers Wells' engineering expertise and fabrication know-how that is available in the United States, in many of the major industrial countries of the world. The following equipment is available through the Paris engineering and sales office of Struthers Wells, or through our competent licensees:

· Feeowater heaters for commercial lossil fuel and nuclear power plants.

Auxiliary heat exchangers for commercial power plants.

· Ammonia and urea plant Multiwall* reactors and high pressure heat exchangers. High pressure refinery and pelrochemical heaf-exchangars. Secondary oil recovery steam generators.

Phosphoric acid crystallizers.

· Fire tube and water tube process waste heat boilers.

Incinerator waste heat boilers.

· Waste stream evaporators and crystallizers,

 Gas turbine waste heat boilers. Process furnaces.

n If you are planning a new overseas or domestic facility or thinking of expanding an existing one, Struthers Wells' designs are probably available to you near your plant. Please write on your letterhead for a brochure listing the worldwide capabilities of Struthers Wells and a copy of our Annual Report.

the ectivities of the group. Until a little over a year ego. Jake Butcher was president of C & C, but he hed been bungering after the Hamilton National Bank of Knoxville end late in 1974 moved to win control.

He and his pretty wife, Sonya—they have four children—went to New Orleans and offered Fritz Ingram, an oil and barge line magnate, $30,000 for an option on 30.419 Hamilton shares he owned. Mr. Butcher then persuaded Mr. Ingram to accept a $9 million note for the stock. The Hamilton board fought Jake's demand for a voice in menerement. He countered with a tender offer financed though four out-of-town banks, and won control.

The smiling ex-marine sergeant moved into the executive suite of Hamilton's ancient headquarters in downtown Knoxville, taking over as chairman and chief executive. He brought in a staff of young, aggressive officers, ordered the old iron-grilled tellers' cages replaced with modern couoters, installed fluorescent lights, redecorated the tobby and offices and began laying plans for a 30-story office tower and banking plaza two blocks down Gay Street

Then came trouble from an unexpected source. Word: spread that Hamilton Bancshares Inc., a Chattanooga holding company with which Hamilton-Knox-

" I'm sorry, sir, or ma'am," I'd say, 'that's not our bank.' Then they'd say, "Well, who are you?"

"It was utterly confusing." he continued. "That's when I went to the board and said. We've got to change our name. The public is confused. They are. concerned about their deposits; they are concerned about the bank. It wasn't easy. The Hamilton name, a respected one. had been here since the bank was chartered in 1932. We had board members who started with the Hamilton back then and the name meant a lot to them. I said, We've got to change the name because of the trouble in Chattanooga. If e Jake Butcher in Chattanooga is a herse thief, I don't want Jake Butcher in Knoxville banged for it.'

Last Jan. 1 the Hamilton became the United American Bank N.A. and none too soon. Less than two months later,

- bank, the old, prestigious Hamilton National of Chattanooga, were in bankruptcy, the third largest bank feilure in the nation's history.

The brothers joined with business leaders in Nashville and Memphis to buy and reorganize the defunct Hamilton banks in those two cities, changing their names from Hamilton to United American. Jeke Butcher became chairman and chief executive of the Memphis bank: C. H. Jr. took over in Neshville, though neither invested eny money.

The Butcher brothers grew up on their father's farm eight miles "up the valley" from Maynerdville (pop. 705) in the Appalechian mountains north of here. They learned banking in their father's bank beginning as janitors and moving up to clerical and teller positions white still In school. After military service end coltege, during which they organized a general insurance agency they still own. Jake moved to Choton end organized a petroleum products distributorship.

C. H. Jr. returned to Meynardville in 1964 to work fulltime in the Union County bank. Four years later be moved to Knoxville to join Jake in organizing the C & C Group. First they bought the First National Bank of Lake City. changing It to the C & C'Bank of Aoderson County and establishing branches" in the more ettractive merkets et Clinton and Oak Ridge.

"We'd borrow money, buy a bank, pay it off and then borrow to buy another one," Jeke recalled. Ultimately they organized the C & C Bank of Knox County and began establishing branches in Knoxville's fast-growing suburbs. Jake sold his interest in the Knox County benk when he bought the Hamilton. Besides the $1.6 million he owes on the a Hamilton Bank, Jake Butcher owes another $4 million on other a banking and business operations, all borrowed on a pledge of his personal credit and assets.

"I don't think there's eny difference between owing $20 million personally and controlling a company that owes $20 million," he added. "If you control the company, you are responsible for what it does. If I've got the responsibility, it doesn't bother me to sign for it personally. I've tempered myself by being always in a borrowing position and always paying. We have always paid es agreed.

"I've never been given anything but e grod name end a good ismily: I never inherited money or stole any, so the only wey I can get it is to borrow it." If he cashed out today, Jake figures he'd have $15 million, C. H. Jr., who owes $12 million, computed his net worth at $13 million.

The brothers say all their banks are sound with rising earnings and deposits. "We've got good management in all our banks," C. H. Jr. says of the nine institutions under his control. "I try to get around to each bank twice a month. My biggest joo is getting along with nine different boards of directors and

Expert judgment in municipal bonds...

Highest yields aren't always best yields. With municipals it takes expert judgment to pick out the real bargins.

We have always believed that the highest yield isn't always the best yield, even on bonds with similar coupon, malurities and ratings.

There are reasons why one "A" rated bond sells at a 612 % yield and another sells at 7%. Deciding which is the better value is where good judgment is so

Sometimes the higher yield with a lower rating eventually proves to be the best buy. And often it's a bond with a higher prica or lower yield which lurns

The proof comes when you want to get out. That's why you need good advice

When we select bonds for our customers, we base our judgment on a combination of the ratings, our own research criteria, and other trends we think will affect the bond's future quality and price. We compare thesa factors among similar bonds, look at their prices and then decide which are the raal bargains. These ara the bonds we sell.

This kind of thoroughness has often prevented us from selling bonds that had decent ratings and high yields, but in our judgment tacked inherent quality or seemed overvalued.

And it works both ways.

Our thoroughness has also enabled us to sell bonds we thought were undervalued. About ten years ego we sold many New Jersey bonds with lowly "BA" ratings, in fact, they were one of our favoriles at the lime. Today many of these bonds such as Paramus. Persippany, Fort Lee, and others are "A" rated by Moody's. "

Spotting undervalued bonds is as important as avoiding overvalued bonds. That's why we say: "with municipals it takes expert judgment to pick out the real bargains.".

Billions at Stake in Africa

businos in other black Africao countries. For in-staoce, Uoion Carbide has subsidiaries in Ghana, tho Ivory Coast, Kenya and the Sudan as well as South Africa and Rhodesia. Citibank has extensive interests in Engglish-specking black Africa through a 49 percent Interest in Grindlays Bank and in French - speaking Africa through its stake in the Banque Internationale pour l'Afrique Occidentale.

Meanwhile, total U.S. trede with developing Africa is growing faster than with South Africa. Between 1969 and 1975 tho total value of trade with South Africa rose threefold to $2.18 billion. But with the rest of the cootirient it increased by a fac-tor of seveo to $11.6 billion. Moreover, since 1972 rising oil and raw material prices have pushed the U.S. into a deficit with developing Africa which reeched $4 billioo last year.

Imports of Nigerien oil accounted for $3 billion of this. But the U.S. also was in deficit with a string of other African commodity producers ranging from the Ivory Coast (palm products and coffee) to Mozambique (nuts). The latest figures also s'ow Zaire providing 48 per-cent of America's cobalt imports, Gabon 22 percent of nts manganase and Algeria 20 percent of imported mercury.

Whether Mr. Kissinger's

new raw material bank will lead to a decisive shift of American investment into developing Africa remains a ture. But at the moment Americao business finds itself caught in en i neem ouable conflict of interest as the political tension between black and white ruled Africa mounts.

American investment South Africa accounted for nearly 40 percent of all American investment on the. African continent io 1974, $1.5 billioo. Sinco 1972, it has been growing at 20 percent B year and this trend seems to have continued last year, despite increased tension in the southern part of the continent.

For instance, Caltex plans a $134 million refinery exten-sioo at Milnerton, South Afri ca, while Keonocott Coppet is spending some $120 million on new miniog and smelter operations at Richard's Bay, South Africa, Each project alone adds nearly 10 percent to total American investment in the country. In the U.N. trusteeship of Nami-liberal and church groups opbia, which South Africa administers, Newmont Mining is expaoding its Kombat copper mine sod Phelps Dodge is prospecting for minerals.

Altogether some 350 U.S. corporations have subsidia-ries in the Renublic of South Africs, iocluding many of the biggest and best known. Much secrecy—both corpocloaks the size of individual investments. But oil and automobile - related industries are dominant. G.M., Ford and Chrysler ell assemble motor vehicles there, locally manu-facturing an increasing quantity of composents, including

Other prominent American investors include Mobile Oil. Firestone, Goodyear, Upion Carbide, Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing and I.B.M. Chase Manhattan and Cltibank are also there, while earlier this year a 28-bank consortium iocluding Moren Guerrett: Trust, 'lanifacturers Hanover and Citimillion loan for the South African Electricity Supply

Commission. Nearly half of the American investment in South Africs is in manufecturing Industry ($623 millioo). Machinery and chemicals account for a third of this. The Commerce Department withholds data on investment in mining, pe-troleum and motor vehicle production for fear of giving away individual company po-

American investors in South Africa have done well, securing an 18 percent average return in 1974 against 16 percent on American percent on American foreign investments world-wide. Profits largely have been ploughed back into expansion, partly because South Africa permits foreign lovestors to borrow cost locally.

However, the U.S. is far beiog the biggest foreign investor lo South Africa, with only 16 percent of total foreign assets there, against more than 50 percent for Britain and the other sterling · area countries. Moreover, the American stako there is just 1.2 percent of all U.S. foreign investment and it brings in a mere ! per-cent of total foreign earn-officially, the U.S. Government neither encourages nor discourages investment in South Africa—though American companies with interests there have been criticized increasingly in recent years by serves. The U.S. is also heavidependent on South Africa for other metals, including vanadium (51 percent of imports), platinum (31 perceot) and manganese (14 pcrcent). Sales of these metals helped increase South Africa's exports to the U.S. from $246 million in 1969 to $831 millioo last year. However, U.S. exports to South Africa climbed from $506 million to $1.3 billion, over the same period, lifting America's trade surplus from $260 millioo to $421 million.

Ronald Reagan's Economics

longer believes, as he did more than a decade ago, that Social Security should be a voluntary program. He would continue it as a mandatory program, he says, but he expresses concern over "the colossal deht that threatens" the Social Security system, even while it overtaxes our workers at a growing and exorbitant rate."

The candidate also finds it not fair" that people over 65 years of age cannot receive full Social Security benefits if they earn more than $2,760 a year, and he would give expanded benefits to widows who have worked.

He bas not said how he would raise the money to balance the Social Security trust fund in the years ahead and provide the additional benefits he contemplates, but he promises to appoint a 'Presidential commission to give the problems compre-hensive study."

PROGRAM TRANSFERS-"We can and we must reverse the flow of power to Washington," Mr. Reagan argues, "not simply slow it or paper over the problems with attractive phrases or cosmetic tinkering." He told one interviewer that it might be possible to scrap the Department of Health, Education and Welfare entirely.

Last September, in a speech in Chicago, Mr. Rea-gan proposed eliminating $90 billion worth of Federal social programs and transferring authority over those matters to the states. The proposal immediately came under fire from President Ford and others who cortended that the states did not have the resources to take over the programs. Mr. Reagan then backtracked somewhat, saying that the $90 billion figure was not precise but only intended to give an order of magnitude to his proposal. But he has maintained that the hasic thrust of his plan is wise.

Mr. Reagan has proposed the wholesale elimination of six broad categories of Fed-eral programs: welfare (iocluding food stamps), education, bousing, medicaid, community and regional development, and reveoue sharing. Federal income taxes.

under the Reagan plan, would be sharply reduced. Up to a third of the Federal taxes that remained would be retained in the states where they were paid, as would a portion of the Federal excise tax on liquor, cigarettes and other items. States and communities might bave to raise their own taxes somewhat to take up the slack in social programs, individuals and businesses, Mr. Reagan views it, would be less than they are TAX LAW CHANGES-Mr. Reagan would appoint a spe-Reagan would appoint a spe-cial study group to recom-mend ways of simplifying the Federal income tax struc-ture. He favors a variety of tax incentives to businesses and an "inflation adjust-ment" to tax rates. "Genuine tax reform," Mr. Reagan bas said "would make it more said, "would make it more rewarding to save than to borrow and encourage a wider diffusion of ownership to American workers."

The candidate argues that "the present estate tax schedule is far out of date." He proposes a new achedule that would "increase the inheritance tax exemption not only for farmers, hut also small husinesses in general, to more accurately reflect the current value of estates."

AGRICULTURE-The Government's farm policy, according to Mr. Reagan, "should be to encourage full production without undue interference in the free-market process.

He criticizes Mr. Ford for imposing last year a three-month embargo on the sale of grain to the Saviet Union and believes that "our Government should encourage export sales, not only to the Soviet Union, hut also to na-tions around the world willing and able to buy."

Mr. Reagan says he is "skeptical" of proposals for world or national grain re-serves, because "these could nisms through which Gov-ernment could dump grain on the market and depress prices when they are high."

Higher bread prices last year, he says, resulted not from foreign grain sales hut from inflation.

ENERGY - Mr. Reagan would remove all controls on the price of crude oil and natural gas as a means of stimulating domestic produc-tion. He has been sharply critical of Mr. Ford for having signed legislation last year that continued price controls on crude oil.

"The former Governor has little sympathy for "those who call themselves environmentalists, but who, in reality, want us to feel guilty for being a prosperous nation."

The country, he believes, should "begin pumping every barrel of domestic oil we can get our hands on; begin using our vast coal reserves, and begin shifting our sights

Deep Discount Convertible Bonds

Currently Yielding Up to 12%

Back in the late 1960's—when convertible bonds were being widely trumpeted as the ideal "can't miss" investment vehicle—The Holt Investment Advisory emphatically stated that investors should stay away

Today, however, The Holt Advisory believes the time has come to put some funds in certain of these securities. It has therefore compiled a list of 10 convertible bonds, all listed on the New York Stock Exchange, which it considers to be especially attractive.

In a clear, non-technical analysis Holt explains why these securities deserve the consideration of investors and traders alike in light of prospective developments in both the stock and bond market. For each of the 10 selected convertible bonds, it also presents the apecific cooversion terms, the current yield and the yield to maturity.

Caution: Not all convertibles are safe investments at this time. Some companies may be too illiquid. And no matter how attractive these securities appear, investment in them involves risks.

BONUS OFFER

If you are interested in securities that offer both high current income and good appreciation potential, we think you'll want to read this Special Study, titled "Deep Discount Convertibles." THE ECONOMIC SCENE

More Inflation—Now

By RICHARD E. MOONEY

NFLATION is going to get worse before it gets better. The economic forecasters are unanimous on this point. Their unanimity itself might be reason for doubting the prediction—crystal balls have been as cloudy in foretelling the pace of the recovery as they were in sensing the depths of the recession. But quite epart from the accuracy of forecasts, there is evidence already that more inflation is already happening. Only the longer-range implications remain uncertain—as usual.

The overall rate of inflation dropped so sharply in the early part of this year that it was certain to bounce back up. Moreover, in the past several weeks, price increases for a wide variety of basic products have been announced in a steady stream—steel, copper, aluminum, some of the chemicals, paper and lead, not to mention oil products.

Last week the pattern was confirmed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics report that the Wholesale Price Index rose by eight-tenths of 1 percent in April—the largest increase in six mooths and just slightly less than double-digit inflation if you multiply it by twelve.

Double-digit inflation again so soon? No. Not now in any case. The speedup in the inflation rate that lies immediately ahead is expected to be temporary. The sharp reduction last winter—the annual rate of overall price increases dropped by almost one half from the final quarter of 1975 to the first quarter of 1976—was due principally to declines in the food and fuel categories, most notably in meat and oil. Those declines have stopped and prices are probably beaded the other way again for

But this isn't'just a statistical aberration. It coincides with two other developments which could make it more

First, it coincides with the Presidential election campaign. The steam is building for what looks now like a highly unpredictable vote io November. A worsening of inflation, even if it is only temporary, makes an easy issue for Ronald Resgan and Jimmy Carter to hurl at President Ford. It anyone has forgotten so soon what rampant inflation was like, the politiciaos will help them remember. The encouraging trend back toward price stability will begin to look shaky. Consumer awareness will be aroused once again,

The second coincident development is the trend of the ecocomy itself. Nervousness about the possible weakness of the recovery has vanished. Solid growth is clearly taking hold. Automobile sales, and consumer spendiog generally, have exceeded expectations. Business spending for inventories and for plant expansion is picking up.

Now the nervousness concerns the very strength of the recovery instead of the weakness; some concern that a safe and sane uptrend is showing signs of becoming a hoom. It is a delicate moment. The Federal policy makers—most immediately the mooetary policy makers at the Federal Reserve-don't want to do anything that would impair the recovery. But they are also determined to head off any possibility that inflation will rise again. The Fed has already begun to signal its caution, moving just slightly in the direction of less expansiveness.

If the war in Vietnam, which spawned the inflation of the 1970's, seemed endless, the battla against the inflation itself will be even longer. Although there has been a dramatic decline from the peak rate of 12 percent two years ago, a return to the 2 and 3 percent rates of the early 1960's is still not in sight.

The Argus Research Corporation forecasts that the annual rate of price increases will be 6 percent or slightly higher through the first half of next year. Lionel D. Edie & Company forecasts that it will be only slightly lower-5.8 percent-when 1977 ends. Both forecasts are distinctly higher than the actual rates in tha first quarter of this year, but lower than 1975. The basic point is that the long-term trend is still downward, but not rapidly, and the short-term trend is going to be upward.

The outlook for food prices is conditioned, as always, by the unpredictability of the weather, the droughts in the Middle West and the Far West last winter were not

The outlook for materials prices is confounding; despite the fact that factory output is still below capacity, tha metals producers are pushing up their prices successfully now. In fact, the indexes of some key spot prices have been galloping lately.

More significant for the longer term, while wage settlements that have been reached so far this year have been more modest than expected, the hig ones that matter most in the pattern of the whole economy-are

And extraneous developments can be just as important as the closely watched classics—for instance, the political upheaval in China following Chou en-Lai's death caused Peking to break off a deal to import millions of tons of steel from Japan, thus throwing the Japanese steel ooto the world market at the very time when steelmakers are trying to raise their prices.

It all adds up to a warning that inflation bas oot yet

Dow Marks Time; Bonds in Tailspin

While stock prices besically marked time last week, the bond market took its worst drubbing of 1976.

For the first four months of this year, bond prices generally enjoyed a strong upward trend, with yields declining. But prices—for corporate, Treasury and mu-nicipal securities—were caught in a downdrift last week. One negative was the Government announcement of the biggest monthly increase in wholesale prices since last October raised fears of a higher inflation rate, Sigos that the Federal Reserve Board had tightened credit conditions by a notch also disturbed the fixed-income sector. Finally, the fact that the Treasury, as part of its quarterly refunding operation, sold $4.7 billion of its 7% percent notes due in 10 years—instead of the $3.5 billion originally planned-came as a disappointment to dealers, since it increased the supply. Some loog-term Government boods broke by as much as 2 points on Friday.

By the end of the week, triple-A industrial bonds were yielding 8.25 percent, or a shade higher. Several weeks ago, by coourast, these top-grade corporate bonds were close to a more moderate 8 percent return. Meanwhile, on the New York Stock Exchange, the Dow Jones industrial average, up one day and down the next, finished the week virtually without change. This blue-chip indicator wound up at 996.23 or down 0.66 for the week. Trading volume of 81.4 million shares compared with the previous week's 84.80 million shares. However, the Dow closed the week with a fairly strong session that produced yearly highs in such favorites as Exxon and Avon Products, as well as 71 other issues. Fansteel, spurred by an offer by H. K. Porter to acquire its shares advanced 4% points to 18%

For the week, National Presto Industries moved up 9 points, floisbing at 631/3, or more than double its lowest price of the year. The company recently has shown an improving earnings trend. Among issues setting 1976 highs were Boeing, Teledyne, published by the Corporate Accountability Research Group, Washington, D.C.

Otis Elevator, Marathon Oil and Pittston. VARTANIG G. VARTAN

The genius of our Constitution is that it guaranteed rights to powerless individuals against the powerful collective called government so the people would control the govern-

But after two centuries, nongovernmental organizations have managed to escape the kind of accountability that a democracy imposes on its centers of power. These are our giant corporations. They are effectively private governments with vast direct and indirect impact on communities, citizens, taxpayers, workers, investors, small businesses and future generations.

these corporations is a farce. The control of national and multinational corporations requires national authority. Who would not be embarrassed to defend the proposition that only a state—and not the Federal Government

-can charter a.General Motors or an International Telephone and Telegraph? Also, our current economic crisis and corporate crime wave underscore the failure of the old corponess today is so good, why are things so

The problem is ultimately one of power: how can we limit unaccountable power and how can we ensure that those who do exercise managerial power are the best managers feasible? Federal chartering of the nation's 700

largest corporations seems the most logical and workable mechanism.

In the early 1800's, charters were selectively granted by the states, and contained limitations on how large a company could grow, where it could do business, and what business

t could engage in. After the Civil War, the rowth of railroads and the introduction of the trust device enabled industrialists like John D. Rockefeller to dominate not merely a local market, nor even a regional market.

State corporation laws began to retaliate against such abusive activity; New Jersey vent into the chartermongering business in the 1890's. New Jersey effectively legalized

the trust by allowing one company to cootrol

the stock of another; it ended all size cbnstraints, allowed noovoting stock and stock watering, and gave chartered firms perpetual life. The result while New Jersey granted 834 charters and earned $857,000 in charter-

By 1963, other states had begun to catch ip, or come down, to Delaware's corporate law standards. Delaware's state legislature

then created a commission, comprised of a few top corporate lawyers, to draft further liberalizations of the state corporation law.

The legislature unanimously ratified the revisions in 1967. Incorporations soon doubled.

By 1974, 76,000 corporations were chartered in Delaware, including 52 of the top 100 cor-porations and 251 of the largest 500—the suc-

In another problem area, while on paper giant corporations may appear to be expressions of democracy, with shareholder-owners electing directors who "manage the corporation" and who select and oversee the corporate officers.

But because management controls the nominating and proxy machinery, the expenditure of corporate funds and the use of corporate personnel in election contests, its directorial candidates and its resolutions almost invariably prevail-99.7 percent of all directors' elections in our Isrgest corporations are uncontested. And under Delaware law, there are very few management activities which actually trigger a shareholder vote. G.M. could get shareholder approval. Of an average 14.49 directors on the boards of the top 200 industrial companies, 6.56 are "inside directors" employed by or beholden to the chief executive, while 69 percent of the "outsiders" are simpatico fellow corporate executives. Said one executive, "I can't think of a single time when the board has failed to support a proposed rollow of many corporate. to support a proposed policy of management." Thus the Penn-Central board, like most cuck-

Indeed, the Federal government ten promotes this secrecy by its "rule of criticentiality," whereby only aggregate industigate can be released, not company by company data. And the S.E.C.'s failure to prome the beautiful to be controlled to be controlled. uniform accounting rules has worked to ke the investing public often uninformed abo a firm's true performance.

Even at the Federal level, it has been gued, governments are often "so woefu uninformed of corporate affairs that exhonest and well-intentioned men cannot el tively execute public policy.

As for employee relations, while the Continuous carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains all levels of grant carefully restrains and careful ment from invading the rights of ci it effectively allows every business tion to do so. A 1974 Senate study that between 200,000 and 300,000 p business polygraph tests are adminis each year, two surveys estimated that com: nies eavesdrop on or investigate the loye of one-fifth of all American workers.

"We complain about government and bu ness, we stress the advantages of the fienterprise system, we complain about the Wood, former chairman of the board of Sea Roebuck & Compnay, "but in our individorganizations . . . we have created more less of a totalitarian system in industry, par cularly in large industry."

Federally chartered corporations would required to observe First Amendment requi ments of free speech and assembly, whi would prohibit retaliation against employe who in good faith communicate apparent c porate violations of law to directors, legis tures or law enforcement agencies. The giant companies would also respect the pri cy of its employees: for example, the use hidden microphones or television camer which violate the privacy of numerous nocent employees, would be proscribed; e ployees would be able to examine their co porate personnel files.

While the states were gutting their lav three major merger waves-in 1898-19 1925-1929 and 1967-1969-led to a coocent tion of iodustrial assets in this country: oeatwo-thirds of our manufacturing sector is m controlled by oligopolies and the largest 2 industrial firms own about two-thirds of industrial assets.

More competition is an important antide. to corporate power. Thus, no Federally cb tered corporation should be allow to : quire any company among the eight large io any industry where four or fewer concer control 50 perceot or more of the mark And to the extent such corporations oo ma acquisitions io unconcentrated industri they must within three months' divest the selves of an approximately equal amount assets. There would be a presumption of il gal monopoly power if four or fewer corpo tions accounted for 50 percent or more a market for any two consecutive yes among the most recent five. An Antimonopi Court would determine appropriate reli-which would usually entail divestiture.

Several counter-arguments to Federal chi tering can be, and bave been, made, includi

the following.

¶Isn't it just more regulation? Won't Federal chartering be a costly by den on business? Will it lead to a Federal take-over of bu.

In answer to the first, a reinforced S.E. and Justice's antitrust division would enfor the law. Historically, these two agencies ha made the market process work better, rath than substituted for it. Indeed, it is whi the market fails to perform as expected a: when such agencies fail to take correcti action that we get truly burdensome reguition, like wage and price controls.

As for the cost burden, it would fall n oo the approximately 1.8 million small at moderate size businesses in this country, b only on those 700 giants who, given their si and impact, can best afford and deserve Finally, Federal chartering is approximate as socialistic a coocept as Federal charte for banks, which bave existed since 1864, the Justice Department's proposal in 1975; shift regulation of insurance companies fro the states to Washington.

If anything, the precise reverse of Feder chartering leading to a Federal take-ov might be true. As business grows bigger, leaccountable and less law-abiding, government will be compelled to extend its authority over this rogue elephant in our midst.

Marvel then formed the Corporation Service Company—upon whose board sat the most prominent citizens of the Diamond State-and began mailing out pamphlets to advertise the advantages of the new lsw as if it were

"The State of Delaware had just adopted the most favorable of existing general cor-poration laws," he wrote.
"The law is based upon that of the State of New Jersey and embraces all of the beneficial provisions and safe-guards found in the laws of that State.

"It has, however, in many respects advanced far beyond New Jersey and made Delaware a far more attractive home for a business corpora-tion. . . . In New Jersey, for iostance, a corporation with a capital of $4 million pays $3,000 annual tax. In Delaware, it pays but $1,500." In Marvel's haste to make Delaware's business code more attractive than New Jersey's, he had included pro-visions to permit slock watering which were patently unconstitutional under the Delaware Constitution of 1897. But that did not matter very much. The legislature readily amended the Constitution to cooform to corporate law.

Wall Street, initially, was less pleased than was the leg-islature with Delaware's new law. For more than a dozen years, the New York bar assiduously avoided tloy Delaware and its curious Josiah Marvel—who had taken to styling himself "Dr. Marvel"—for being too uncouth too cross and too or couth, too crass, and too ea-ger. Besides, New Jersey was

The penitence was shortlived. By 1917, New Jersey had repealed most of the "Seven Sisters Acts." But reform had ooe enduring effect. New Jersey's hegemony was forever shattered. Any state that could elect Woodrow Wilson as Governor could never be fully trusted by big business again.

Delaware's tinyness, which previously bad seemed so laughable, was now recognized as its greatest virtue. In a pygmy state, corporate franchise taxes would always, moster. Bosinside in 1015 matter. Beginning in 1915, Delaware periodically revised its corporation law to adopt "suggestions" forwarded by the New York bar.

In short order, it emerged as the successor to New Jersey as the leading charterer of the largest industrial cor-poration—a position it has never since relinquished and. unless the Federal Govern-ment enters the field, probably never will.

BERANARD RICHARDS.

Old Westbury, N.Y.

The fact is that New York City is daily, dangerous, and expensive. Hence, it is an undesirable place for most people and businesses to live and operate. Hence, more and more businesses and people—black and white are leaving when and as they can.

Turning the situation around requires a strong campaign to reduce crime. even if it means limiting civ-il liberties;" labor union and business cooperation to 16strain wage costs and increase productivity, and tax incentives for new businesses locating in the city.

Also a little more realism on the part of New York's soulful citizens like the Bishop might not be such a bad idea. J. MICHAEL CAYTON:

New York Bishop Moore's message is clear and applies to all of us nationwide. Business economists justifiably want to see increased business activity with its concomitant increased employment. But how many of them are concerned with the unemployment increased arising from the closing down of divisions or plants in urban sections and rebuilding elsewhere?

What are the approaches of the economists that offer hope of ending the tragic scene that is America of the poor, the disadvantaged, the elderly, all those in blighted DAVID ARONSON

Inflation

To the Financial Editor: Regarding the 1973-1974 inflationary period, what makes Edwin L. Dale Jr. believe that there is no good reason to think it will be repeated?" ("Inflation that Wasn't Bred at Home" May Is it because the factors leading to the period have been defined and now we can relax with the attitude that it cannot possibly happen again? Are we now to believe that members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries bave reached the limit on crude oil prices? Was the explosion of world demand for food complete with the poor harvest of 1974 an event which will not recur? I think not. It is important to evaluate and analyze the events which caused an episode like the inflationary period. However, what is more important is the ability to utilize this knowledge in predicting future events so as to eliminate, or at least soften, the bad effects of these events.

At the risk of sounding bicentennialized, this is how this nation has attained its current status and position in the world today.

A Retreat Beside The Sea In Crete

By DANIEL YERGIN

On a grassy bank beside the swimming pool, under a clear night sky, the young Cretan performers moved swiftly through their traditional harvest dance, scythes swinging in rhythm with the drum. Beyond lay the dark Aegean Sea and a rim of blue-black mountains.

Among the audience at the Elounda Beach Hotel, still finishing a late dinner, sat the Prime Minister of Iran and his party, guests of a Greek businessman anxious to woo petrol dollars into his country. Simone de Beauvoir and Jean-Paul Sartre were there with the young secretary who reads to him since his eyes began to go bad. In between: Diamond merchants from Antwerp, medium-rank Greek shipowners (with a celebrity status accorded sit-com stars in the States), but also many dozens other, mostly Europeans, wbo had taken advantage of surprisingly inexpensive package tours to come to Agios Nikolaos, the fastest growing resort in Greece.

As late as 1961, Agios Nikolaos—40 miles east of Iraklion (site of the airport) on the northern coast of Crete—had one mediocre hotel and virtually no tourism; what was to become the main building of the Minos Beach Hotel was still a squat police barracks. Today, Minos Beach and the Elounda Beach, the two major hotels, draw Europeans by the thousands. Both hostelries are leisurely and restful, Greek in character and design, not the mass-produced, interchangeable international hotel that on occasion makes tourism seem like staying at home.

But Agios Nikolaos is still little known to Americans, in part because it is not altogether easy to arrange a holiday there. All my wife and I knew when we began planning was that we wanted to go to Crete; neither local travel agents nor the Greek National Tourist Office gave us much specific guidance. Finally, I asked a Greek-born professor, who reported that his friends in Athens favored Agios Nikolaos and in particular the Minos Beach-"super comfortable and not all that expensive." Two telexes. to the Minos Beach through Olympic Airways produced no reply. The third brought word that the Minos was completely booked.

We went to London, where a travel agent advised us that the Elounda Beach was at least an equal match for the Minos; by phoning directly to Crete from London we reserved a room. If Crete is a side trip on a European journey, there can be some advantages in booking in London. For instance, you will be told in the United States that the only round-trip air fare between London and Iraklion is something like $700 a person. In fact, you can get a Hertz-Olympic Airways fly-drive package (requiring two persons) for $375 round-trip per person.

At the Elounda Beach, we met Eleni Nakou, who is responsible for both the Minos Beach and the Elounda Beach, but is now devoting herself to a new venture. Instead of building botels that look like villages, she is reversing the process, and trying to make an old,

"Gentlemen, I'd like you to meet the man who'll be beating you while I'm on vacation."

There is one circumstance, bowever, that will usually bring about a refund from virtually all shipping lines. That ia a cancellation due to bona fide sickness, accident, or the death of a close family member. Some of the statements about refunds printed in cruise brochures under the heading "Cancella-tions" cootain the phrase "at the company's discretion," implying that the particular situation will govern wbether a penalty is imposed. Shipping officials woo't speak for the record, but some have indicated that their lines will almost always make a refund if a letter is presented from a doctor attesting to e passenger's illness or injury.

Should a passeoger who feels he is entitled to a refund be denied it by a cruise line, there are governmental offices he can turn to. In New York State, the agency to cootact is the Bureau of Consumer Frauds and Protection, which is under the jurisdiction of the Attorney Geoeral's office. The address is 2 World Trade Center, New York 10047. refund policies, some factors have to be considered. The traveler who books space oo a ship, unlike ooe who buys a ticket for a seat on an airplane, is reserving a specific stateroom in a particular location and with facilities that might or might not appeal to somenne else. Ooce at sea, a cruise ship must complete its voyage, lasting days or weeks, before it can obtain a new complement of paying customers. A plane can be flown back almost immediately after a day's run. If a stateroom that might have been sold (had it not been set aside for someone who later cancels) remains vacant during a voyage, the shipping line has oo way to recover the loss. After all, the likelihood of someone boarding at the last minute,

as with other modes of public transportation, is slim, considering the advance planning required for a cruise. What are the refund policies elsewhere in the travel industry? In the case of tour packages involving charter flights, the type of flight governs the refund. With an OTC (one-stop tour charter), for example, a full refund is made upon written cancellation up to 30 days before departure. Between 30 and 15 days the traveler is subject to

If the trip is canceled less than 15 days before departure, the penalty is 50 percent of the tour price.

With most of the other types of charter flights, such as affinity charters and tour-group charters, the time limits and percentages vary, but pecalties can run as high as full forfeiture of the fare. Aside from charters, airline refund policies are rather liberal. In only a few cases, most notably when booking an APEX (advance-purchase excursion) flight, are regular airline passeogers penalized for changing their plans. The penalty for canceling an APEX flight prior to departure is $50; failure to catch the return portion of an APEX flight can cost the passenger the difference between the APEX fare and the next most expensive excursion flight for which he can qualify. Otherwise, ao airline passenger, eveo one who fails to show up at the last minute, can usually obtain a full refund for his ticket or use it at a later date,

Rail passengers are treated similarly, except for a 5 percent penalty if reserved space, such as a bedroom, is not canceled at least 30 minutes before train time. And hus passengers, too, can ob-

Letters: The Little Train That Wasn't

To the Editor:

I was amazed to discover that Amtrak advertises in its timetables and sells tickets for a conexistent train. Recently, I had occasion to take the Coast Starlight from San Francisco to Seattle, with my ultimate destination being Vancouver, B.C.

صكذا من الاعل

At Portland, a new crew took over, and I asked the cooductor about the "cross-over platform transfer" (also advertised) in Seattle. "Oh," he said airily, "that train hasn't run for months. It's a bus now." The imaginary train listed on the schedule goes by the grandiose name of The Pacific International and boasts "complete dining and beverage services." An obliging dining-car steward made me a sandwich to eat in the bus. When the bus finally arrived at the deserted Canadian National station in Vancouver, there were no taxis. BENJAMIN LEONARD Pipersville, Pa.

[An Amtrak spokesman in Washington replies: "The service cited was suspended as the result of an accident on Dec. 26, 1975, when o harge struck o railroad bridge over the Fraser River in British Columbia. Resumption of service is expected momentarily and the latest timetable (issued on April 25) points out that the bridge is under repair and that motorcoach service is being provided along the portion of the route affected - between Seattle and Vancouver, B.C."]

TO PARIS. WITH LOVE

To the Editor:

Please tell letter-writer Hugh F. Coonor (Travel Section, April 25) that Paris is still Paris. The rue des Martyrs in Montmartre is still perfumed by the boulangeries, patisseries and other interesting shops; the children still sail their boats in the Tuileries and Luxembourg Gardens; the fountains still splasb in the Place de la Concorde and the vista from there to the Arc de Triompbe down the Champs-Elysées is still breathtaking. The croissants at Poilane's still dissolve in the mouth; the baguettes de Paris" are still carried unwrapped by band and nibbled on the way home; the turrets of Sacre Coeur are as awe-inspiring as ever; the Sunday boaters still row their way around the lake in the Bois de Boulogne, while their less-energetic compatriots relax in the sun on the benches and grass; the pet stores on the Quai de la Megisserie are still alive with everything from fish to fowl and the book stalls still line the Rive Droite and the Rive Gauche where the Seine widens to accommodate the Ile de la Cité. Yes, Paris is definitely still Paris. SIMON GLAZER New York

TALL TALK

To the Editor:

As a postscript to Paul Goldberger'a article, "Buildings Speak to Us-How to Listeo" (Travel Section, April 25), I remind readers in the New York City area that they have ample opportunity to sharpen their architectural perceptions through the many walking tours sponsored by such organizations as Classical America, the Friends of Cast Iron Architecture, the Municipal Art Society of New York, the Museum of the City of New York and various local groups in the five boronghs.

As another note, I quote Theodore Gumbril Sr., in Aldous Huxley's "Antic Hay": 'The fact is that architecture is s more difficult and intellectual art than music. Music-that's just a faculty you're born with, as you might be born with a snub nose. But the sense of plastic beauty-though that'a, of course, also an ioborn faculty-is something that has to be developed and intellectually ripened. It's an affair of the mind; experience and thought have to draw it out." ARNOLD L. MARKOWITZ New York

QUID PRO QUO

To the Editor:

Regarding the dyspeptic letter from Mrs. K. Johnson (Travel Section, April 25), about the noise that American baseball players make in London, I would like to point out that in view of the fact that the finest spot in Philadelphia's Fairmount Park has for decades beeo set aside for cricket, it seems mere elementary reciprocity that Hyde Park, London, should provide facilities for baseball, N. i is of course oormally associated he western part of this country. e east Even now, in Mother Lode v in California—an area just two nland from Sao Francisco—gold is a moderately hig tourist There chambers of commerce "Gold" from four-color broand hardware stores and fivesell everything from picks and suntan lotions bought up by id prospectors who want to apend may hours re-creating a small the Gold Rush of '49.

e past couple of years, since gold eased from its fixed low price lowed to zoom hither and you world exchanges, the prospect ing bits of the stuff has become more attractive. At $130 an or $140-or pushing $200, as year or so ago, when speculahas at its peak—even the littlest I thought, would make for a s pay. So I was intrigued to etty fair gold panning territory er dating hack to the 1850's.

at time, the story goes, a Verwho had spent a while raking out West returned home and i upon a small ougget while in Buffalo Brook, near the town igewater. No more able to consecret than was John Sutter of ia the man soon found he was pined by half the farmers in the panniog local streams and looking for the yellow stuff. of various sizes were reported, mont's versioo of the Gold Rush : ig enough so that at least one oup perpetrated a stock promoneme, cheating a group of Boston rs who expected to find an East ersion of the California deposits. , several mines were dug, but her lode was found-what gold ken from the waters had simply ashed down from scatterings in untains ahove. The farmers went back to farming.

Over the years aince, various nidtimers, rock hohhyists and outdoors types have tried their hand at panning in Vermoot. Many do find traces of gold, even today, although rarely does anyone collect enough to get excited about. And there is the Gold Grapevine, over which ooe story after another passes of "the fellow who found a real big ougget just a few miles from here."

To check into the situation, I first got in touch with William Schuele, an LB.M. chemist who, with his wife, Ethel, is a force behind the Burlington Gem and Mineral Club. Schuele told me he'd done gold panning in various spots in the state, including streams as far oorth as the Canadian border. "I personally didn't get anything," he said, "hut people io the club did. I don't think it's a way of making a living, because all anyone seems to find ia relatively small flakes. You could work all day for a few dollars' worth. But just the word 'gold' gets people excited, so there's always in-

If I were to try my luck, Schuele advised, I should look at the edge of streams, on the inside of curves, where heavy material like gold gets slowed down and settles out of the current. Dig oot several spoonfuls of sediment, he went oo, and wash it hack and forth in a gold pan, letting the sand and other light material ride out of the pan with gentla splashes of water; the heavy material remains. "You're liable to find black grains of magnetite, which you can remove with a magnet, and a lot of little reddish-hrowo garnets, which have no particular worth," he said. "You'll be left with sand-like stuff, and you sort through it with tweezers, looking for anything yellowish and metallic. Other things look like gold, hut they aren't it. If you've got mica, it'll be hrittle and shatter wheo you touch it with your fingernail. Fool'a gold—pyrite—is hard to the touch. Real gold you can depress with the tip of your fingernail."

Next, I called Reuben Martin, a 70something-year-old barber in the oorthern town of Richford who lately has limited his practice to cutting the hair of a few old customers and friends. He speods at least part of his time nowadays panning for gold. 'T've been panning for about 12 years," he told me, "all over the state, whenever the spirit moves me, I think I've covered 'most every little stream up around here. I've never found anything bigger than flakes -it looks like yellow pepper out of a than 120 years ago. I called Eugeoe mill. What I do is I put my flakes in a Stiles, president of the Rutland Rock

Some people say to use a circular movement in panning, but Martin recommended a back-and-forth motioo, "like when you shake old maids down in a pan of popcorn." My avarice getting the better of reason, I could hardly wait.

Prohably the most active area for nanning in all of Vermont is along . Broad Brook, oot far from the Killington ski area and only a few miles from Bridgewater, where it all began more and Mineral Club, the rockhound group in the nearest big town.

Stiles, it turned out, is in the outdoor equipment business in Rutland, selling campers, swimming pools and camping gear. Lately be's put in a line of gold prospecting equipment as well. He said he'd be glad to take me out to Broad Brook and show me the ropes if I'd get myself to Vermoot, I did, and he did.

A couple of days before our scheduled panning expeditioo, I stopped into Stiles' place of husiness, Leisure Lines, to see what kind of paraphernalla he offered to gold hugs like me. He had laid in a stock of gold pans-both of heavygauge steel and the plastic variety, priced from $3.20 to $5.95. A gold pan,

I observed, looks something like a shallow wok-that is, like a deep, haodleless frying pan with very gently sloping sides. The plastic versions have huilt-in grooves-called riffles-to help keep gold from sloshing out during panning. The steel models, heavier and more suited to serious-minded seekers, come with a protective coat of oil, which must he hurned off, else the gold slides right out of the pan on a globule of

"Most people start off with a pan," Stiles, a bearded, graying refugee from oorthern New Jersey, explained. "If they get half-serious the next step is to get a sluice, sort of an automatic paoner, for $24.95, which increases output." He displayed a sluice, a metal cootraption into which one shovels gravel and sediment; flowing water then takes the stuff through a series of riffles, grids, screens and filters, until a fairly well sifted residue remains. This is then panned hy the usual method.

They bore such tantalizing titles as "The Week-End Gold Miner," "Strike-It-Rich GOLD Fever," "GOLD Finding Secrets" and "GOLD! The Way to Roadside.

Later, moseyiog around the area, I came upon Louis Dondero, a government soil scientist who deals in rocks and minerals from his home. "If anyone offered me an ounce nr so of gold I'd huy it," he said, "but I've never seen anybody with more than a few flecks io a vial. Oo the other hand, I heard a story about one stream over in Maine with quite a hit in it. The fellow didn't even have a gold pan-he just bought a frying pan and came up with a lot, they said. The nice thing is, the chances are just as good for you as for anybody who's been panning for a long

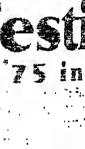

I also inquired at the Junction Country Store and Trading Post, in Bridgewater Corners, where U.S. 4 meets State Route 100A, very near Broad Brook. "For most people, panning is just a great way to spend a day-very peaceful," the woman at the counter told me. "Of course, some make money at it. There's an old man named Lawrence around these parts. He does a little handy work for a woman-sort of a caretaker-but he has no other visible means of support. He's been panning all the streams here for 40 or 50 years. They say he has sacks of gold, He woo't talk to anyooe about it, woo't say just where he gets it. People say he's got the stuff huried."

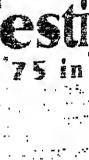

Sacks of it! I turned to the Yellow Pages and began compiling a list of places to sell my gold-mineral dealers, coin dealers and jewelers around Rutland and White River Junctioo.

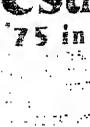

I met Stiles as arranged, mid-morning of a medium-bright day, at the country

Delaware Bay supports an abundant stock of fish and shellfish, which saltwater anglers and crabbers can go after without a license. On Villas's Main Street, in his fishing supply store, Bernie Ruckhardt sells mapa personally marked with the best fishing grounds and the proper routes hy boat.

The season begins early in apring, Ruckhardt explains, when the big drumfish swim up from the south to spawn. By mid-June the fishing shifts to weakfish (called sea trout in other waters), flounder, croaker and bluefish, Weakies and blues can he caught from stone jetties and piers; the others require pursuit by small power boats available from rental places all along the coast. Weekday fishermen usually have no trouble fioding boats, at an average $1S a day; if you plan to do some weekend fishing, reserve a boat ahead of time (the New Jersey Office of Tourism, 609-292-2470, can supply you with names of marinas).

Typical of the summer fishing towns above Villaa is Reed's Beach, eight miles north. Sarah Dickinson runs an aging general store here but nnly from April through November, now that the vear-round population has dwindled to five retired couples. Summers, though, about 125 familles converge on this one-road town for day-long fishing and pend on Dickinson's for newspapers and groceries. (Mrs. Dickinson also operates Capi. Sam's, named for her late husband, where from June through October a rowhoal with outboard can be rented for about $16 a day.)

Beyond Villas and Reed's Beach the route curves inland onto State Route 47, called Delsea Drive because it runs from the Delaware River to the sea. Thin asphalt roads lead off to a trio of coltage communities-Moores Beach, Thompsons Beach and East Point.

Along the approach road to East Point motorists may see herons and red-winged blackbirds flying up from the marsh, a black snake alithering across the asphalt, and wild liliea swaying in a soft wind. Usually, bales of salt marsh hay, harvested and dried and sold for hedding and packaging, sit piled by

The Maurice River Historical Society is restoring the brick lighthouse huilt at East Point In 1846 to guide ships upriver to ports and oystering centers. Eventually, the light, doused after World War II, will be rekindled and a small weekend museum with wildlife and maritime exhibits set up in the

A climb up the wioding iron slair to the lighthouse cupola offers a coastline view as far as the Atlantic and its resorts. (The lighthouse is open only on several summer weekends: free admission.) There's a secluded beach at the font of the lighthouse for swimming and picnicking. East Point Boat Rentals nearby provides nutboards for $15 a day, sells hait and seats a few people at a luncheonette counter.

Crossing the Maurice River requires another inland jaunt of nine miles to the new bridge at Mauricelown, a pre-Revolutionary settlement where sea capialns and boat builders made their homes. Residents have restored a number of the handsome colonial and Victorian houses, which are usually closed to the public.

Mauricetown's High Street Is an incipient antique row with five shops selling antique furniture, primitives, glassware and china. The shops stay open year round, including weekends. High Street leads to another Maurice River community four miles away, Port Norris.

. A ghost town atmosphere pervades Port Norris. It has never recovered from the death of the cystering industry In the late 1950's, when silt, pesticides and a virus called MSX killed off 85 percent of the oysters in Delaware

However, you can get a glimpse of those husier, more prosperous days in the dilapidated twin waterfront towns of Bivalve and Shellpile just below Port Norris. At Shellpile poor familles live in crumhling rowhouses that canning companies built long ago for their workers, and oyster boats still dock along the wharves. The mounds of chalky crushed shells that give the town its name pave the roads and collect around the buildings. A few shucking houses still operate here. State authorities say that over the last two or three years the catch has improved; apparently the oysters are developing a resistance to the virus. The oyster houses work only from September to April, but clam shucking goes nn all year. On weekday mornings when the hoats have been out, visitors are welcome to wander into Robbins Brothers and Clamco to watch the large surf clams being shelled, chopped and packed.

A few hundred yards down the river on the Bivalve wharf, engineer Al Huher office of the state, Division of Fish, Game and Shellfisheries. He's collected whale bones, a mastodon looth and other oddities dredged up from the Atlantic and the bay. Mr. Huher works an 8-to-5 five-day week. Next door the marine scientists at the Rutgers Research Laboratory also will take lime to explain their work (the laboratory is open 9 to 5 Monday through Friday).

At the entrance to town a jumble of marinas offer dockage, rental boats and party fishing boats that sail early orning and on Wednesday afternoons. At one end of the Island is a long public bathing heach; at the other, a ramshackle house on precarious stilts with the name "Journey's End." its solitary occupant is a Mr. Booth first name unknown to local residents, ome-haked fare as pumpkin bread, sweet potato cake and the so-called "hundred-dollar" chncolate cake. The Hotel Charlesworth serves dinner weekends from Mother's Day through June and from Labor Day through October. During July and August it is open every day but Mondays; dinner for two averages $12. (Reservations advisable on weekends: 609-447-4928.)

Diners at the Charlesworth have to bring their own wine, though, hecause the township has always hanced the sale of liquor. For years Fortescuers did their drinking in speakeasies-small tarpaper shacks and garages scattered around the island, periodically raided and then reopened in a new spot. However, two years ago state agents staged a thorough raid. The speakeasies have yet in rebound from the assault. and the nearest liquor source is a store in Fairton, 10 miles away.

Past Fortescue the funnel-shaped hav narrows. At Sea Breeze the night lights of the Delaware chast and the heam of the Ship John Light 1a cast-iron lighthouse) are visible from Mae's Seahreeze Tavern. Weekends, hay people flood the tavern for the pool tables in the anteroom, the bar and inexpensive fresh seafood (a dinner for two costs $10 to $151. It's open weekends only in spring and fall, daily in the summer.

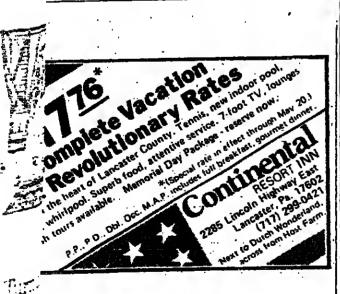

The elm-shaded colonial village of Greenwich is only five oilles north of Sea Breeze—a short distance along the shoreline, but an 18-mile journey hy road. Greenwich is a restful spot to conclude a day's exploration.

Along Greenwich's broad "Greate Street," laid out in 1684, residents have preserved nearly 50 18th-century homes. The Gibbon House, headquarters of the county historical society, has been furnished to show how South Jersey families lived at the time of the Revolution. Guided tours: 10 A.M. to 4 P.M. weekdays, 2 to 5 P.M. weekends, now through November.

In the Gibbon House yard, where an early Swedish log cabin is undergoing restoration, the society presents weekend demonstrations of sheepshearing, wool carding and weaving, also quilting bees. The lecture half across the street houses changing displays of cottage furnishings, samplers and

A short stroll takes visitors to the riverfront where British ships ducked, the monument to the 1774 Greenwich Tea Party when patriots set fire to a cargo of taxed tea unloaded by the British brig "Greyhound," and the Quaker Meeting House, huilt in 1771 and npen to the public on Sunday afternoons from 2 to 5 P.M. (50-cent donations suggested).

Just outside town is Hancock's Harbor, a marina-store-restaurant complex (open from April through November) by local historian Joe Hancock whose brick farmbnuse stands on land claimed by his maternal ancestor Samuel Bacon in 1682. The store sells hair and ice and rents tackle; hoars may be had for $18 a day. The resianrant, named the Bait Box, is open on weekends in May, Wednesdays through Sundays during the summer months, Charlesworth. Built when the town was and on weekends after Lahor Day through the first week of November. Bring your own wine; dinner for two runs $12 to $15.

Spirit

SENSITIVITY - "I've seen the past and it worke," said one New York journalist about London. How kind, bow very kind. Another gentleman from CBS called Britain a muaeum piece. We Londouers are very aensitive when American frienda ask about the Crisis and the Decline. After all, we're busy helping America. We've sent over our plays, clothea, writers, brosdcasts—to spread joy in New York, as its school and hospitsle crumble. We want to send the enpersonic Concorde to belp you get away from it all. We've seut musicians, too. "The British mumusicians, too. "The British musician has a sense of style—more flexible, more aware of subtleties—that exists nowhera else. That comes with having an unbroken history—you loae style as soon as you have a revolution." Thus Yehudi Menuhin. But does this cultural power blind the British to social divisious that could have to social divisions that could ham-per their progress? That's a queation this summer's visitors can re-search themselves.

GETTING AROUND - It's quite simple most of the time: wslk. Much of the beauty of the city lies in quiet side streets and lanes that visitors miss if they stick to the main thoroughfares. In be-tween strolls, there are the red buses, the subway system (the "tobe" or. "underground") and taxis. Buses are conomical and you can see s lot from their top decks. A Red Rover ticket coets 70 peuce (about $1.30) and entitles bolders to ride anywhere in London for one day on normal bus routes. A four- or seven-day tourist ticket covers the buses end most of the cubway for £5.25 ($2.65) or £6.95 ($12.90). These special tickets are sold at the inquiry offices in the following sub-way stations: Victoria, Euston, King's Cross, St. James's Park, Piccadilly Circus and Oxford Circus. The inquiry offica at St. James's Park station also bas mspa and details of the country bus services which are useful if you have time to spare and are tired of tour groups. A ticket for a day's travel on the country services costs shout $1.70. Oue of Loudon Transport's best trips is its two-bour Sightseeing Bus Tour which leaves Piccadilly Circus every hour on the bour, from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. daily. The price is eboot $1.30; there is an explanatory leaf-let but no guide, Londou Transport'a central number for bus and subway information is 222-1234. The only snag with London Transport is that its services virtually vanish around midulght — which leaves taxis. And taxis have their own vanishing act; they disappear in the theater district between 6 and 8 P.M. and 10:30 and midnight they are comfortable, they have to pass safety checks and their drivers must pass geography tests. A balf-bour trip costs about $2.60; the atandard tip ia 10 perceut. There's a 10 peuce (18 ceut) extra charge at night or ou weekends. Many car rental companies have a central reservation desk at 23 Swallow Straet, Piccadilly (tel.: 734-7561). Among the cheaper firms recommended by reaideuts is E & P, at Sloane Avenue Man-aious Garage, Sloane Avenue, sous Garage, Sloane Avenue, S. W. 3 (581-2255), which reuts cers for about $10 to $17 a day or $55 to $92 a week, with unlimited mileage, plus 8 percent tax. Gasoline costs shout $1.25 to $1.50 a gallon, but the British gallon is 20 percent bigger than the Amarican one. Bika rentals are available at tha Student Centre, Kensington Church Street, from $2 daily, $10 weekly, with a $9.25 deposit (937-

THEATER - The London theater has long been distinguished by attractions and distractions. The latter have included inadaquate ventilation on bot summer nights and the regular lond flushing of lavatories during the performance. The new $29.6 million National Theatre, consisting of three care-fully designed auditoriums on the South Bank of the River Thames. removes these hazards. Gone are the sticky heat, the volubla plumbing. Gone, too, are carved cherubs and red plush. Instead thera are cool concrete, firm-backed seats and sensitive acoustics. The first of the auditoriums to open was the Lyttelton Theatra in March: May presentations include March; May presentations include Albert Finney in "Hamlet" and Sir John Gielgud and Sir Ralph Richardson in Pinter's "No Man's Land." Richardson, Peggy Ash-croft and Wendy Hiller star in Ibsen's "John Gabriel Borkman" Ibsen's "John Gabriel Borkman" and there's a revival of a Ben Travers farce, "Plunder." Planned for later this year: "Blithe Spirit," "Tamburlaine," "Playboy of the Western: World" and a John Schlesinger production of "Julius Caesar." The theater has en unusual booking plan. The front four rows of the orchastra are among the cheapest: $1.40 and $1.85. They are on sale on the day of the perare on sale on the day of the performance from 8:30 A.M. ou at the Information Desk, along with any other seats unsold. Most seats are $4.25, and the purchaser is given a voucher that is exchanged for a numbered ticket any time in the two hours prior to the performance. So one gets a seat but no guarantee of where it will

he. To attain that extra degree of privilege one peys $8. The hox office number: 928-2252. Away from the soaring concrete of the National Theatre, there are "rambling, queer places with galleries and slaircases wide enough and antiquated enough to fornish ma-terials for a bundred ghoat atories"; that's how Diekens referred in "Little Dorrit," to the George "Little Dorrit," to the George Inn, which is on Borough High Street in the Southwark section, user London Bridge. Each summer the conrtysrd of this old inn, which dates to 1677, is the setting for e sequence of Shakespeare's plays. No great stars, but grest stmoephere. Performances are at 3 P.M. each Saturday between May 29 and July 17; tickets are 60 cents. Another attempt to re-create the Tudor period is found at the St. George's Thesto re-create the Tudor period is found at the St. George's Thestre in the Islington section, where "Twelfth Night" runs most of May; June is divided between that play and "Romeo and Juliet," July between "Richard III" and "Twelfth Night." The theater is at 49 Tufnel! Psrk Rosd, and the buses that go nesr it are 4 and 19. Box office: 609-1198, Mia Fsrrow has joined the Royal Shakespesse Company at the Aldwych

SHOPPING—Quality food, soperior design, arcane literature and acceptric antiques are the highlights of London shops. For food go to Fortuum and Mason, 181 Picca-dilly, and take your pick from jars of Stilton cheese, $4.60-$8.70, peppermints dipped in bitter cbocolste. $3.70, or a gift hox of boney, date and orange courney, a jar of Eng-lish fruits, biscnits, Royal Blend Tea, vintage msrmalade and sbort-bread for $17. All these and much more ere available, including teas for connoisseurs: Earl Grey, "del-icately sceuted for efternoon use" st $2.75 s pound, and Darjeeling, "broken orange pckoe extra." st $5.80. In Harrods on Kuights-bridge, the motto ia "Everything for everyone everywhere" and the range is vast, from writing paper with London scenes for a few dollars to s pair of Wedgwood vases from 18-century molds for $11,500. Harrods also has a Wedgwood coffer set six copy and reverse for fea set, six cops and seucers, for $52: a Royal Doulton dinner set costs $285. (Toors of the Wedg-wood pottery works and the Royal wood pottery works and the Royal Porcalain works at Worcester are made by National Travel—1el: 730-0202—from the Victoria Coech Sistion and cost up to $5.50.) For men, the shirts, silk from $64 and cotton from $30, at Turnbull & Asser. 23 Bury Street, are recommended. Suits can be made in a waak, for $370. by Anderson & Sheppard, 30 Savile Row. Raincosts: from Burberrys. 18 Havcosts: from Burberrys, 18 Hay-market, $89-$126. For boutique elegance in both men's and women's apparel: Browns, 23 and 27 South Molton Street, Mayfsir, Visitors to London notice numerous shops with aigns saying "Books, Magazines"; these can give a mis-

pool and a 67-sest cinema as com ameli but luxurious. The guests talk in quiet whispers, except in sir-termins! modero and ice grotto decor. The food is superb; dinner is sround $13.85 without wine. ACCOMMODATIONS - Hotels pose a problem. How much time are you going to spend in them? And what style do you prefer-quiet refinement, jet-set bustle and splendor or basic budget? Loudou bas many examples in each cstegory. Among the newer hotels, the Berkeley (235-6000) carries British understatement to the extreme of anouymity: no eign adorns its portals in Wilton Place, Knightsbridge. When you enter, the first thing you see ie oothing eo vulgar as a reception desk—it's a hearth. And you feel at homethat is, if you hate crowds, love wisteria purple in the room where Queen Elizabeth has dined priv-stely, and welcome a seventh-floor fortable concessions to the 20th century. The public rooms sre Le Perroquet, a sector of the bo-tel that combines expansive dining and tiny disco, cream and scarlet, which is in the ceuter of everythe minimum daily rate is usually $7.40, without private bath; with bath in most hotels the range is S10.15-$33.70 s day. The Loudon Tourist Board bas an office at the Victoria railroad station (sdjacent to Platform 15) that makes hotel bookings for visitors arriving without reservations: 9 A.M.-8:30 P.M. daily. In student hostels the nightly rate is $3.70-$6.50 a per-

RESTAURANTS—Londoners out for dinner usually eat between 9:15 and 11:30 P.M. Though the Yellow Pages list more than 3,500 restauranta for the central area, not many let you linger beyond midnight. However, there are some comfortable, smart bavens that don't rush you through the door. Lautrec, 85 Kings Road (352-1525), is a dark, friendly basement, charging $9.25 a person, with daep fried balls of chaases, fine lamb and Cointreau pancakes, Drakes, 2a Pond Place, Fulham Road (584-4555), a brighter basament with tables on slightly varying levels, is popolar despite its small por-tions; it offers elegance without intimacy, at around $9.25. Daphne's, 112 Draycott Avenue (589-4257), has cramped tables for gen-eral conversation, cozy henches for privacy and a back room for braying young meu and drooping English roses who really do say "What fun, Roger" as Roger de-claims bis opinions, insularity and insensitivity. The food is consist-ently good, and the check shout $13. Pomme d'Amour, 128 Holland Park Avenue (229-8532), has a chic farmhouse decor in browns and greeo, with dining in e gsrden on fine evenings; the price is sround $13. ### Welcome to Vermont.

Summer in Vermont is nearer and greener than you can imagine. Soon sparkling lakes will reflect the color of sunlit sky and the echoes of fun-filled days. And towns will be alive with friendly people. There's so much to see, so much to do in Vermont this historic summer. Plan now and come see for yourself.

Friendly country, Vermont.

Cavelli, this being the 300th anniversary of that composer's death. The works are tha comic opera "Giasone" and tha Vespers of 1656. In addition, the Steffani opera "Tassilone" will be repeated.

Performance dates are Sept. 11, 12 and 22 for "Tassiloni," Sept. 14, 15 and 16 for the Vespers and Sept. 18, 19 and 21 for "Giasone." All performances begin at 9 P.M. The Vespers will be presented in the town's cathedral, the operas in the restored Teatro Accademico. Since the theater seats only 380, advance booking is virtually mandatory. Tickets can be ordered from Teatro Accademico Preti, c/o Municipio, Castelfranco Veneto (Treviso), Italy, but ticket prices have not yet been set. For more information, contact the Clarico Music Society, Inc., 415 Lexington Avenue, New York 10017 (tel: 212-0X

Ticket prices for festivals range from 25 cents in Bucharest, Rumania, to a top of $86 in Salzburg, Austria. At some festivals admission to certain events is free. Where ticket prices are given in the accompanying chart, the amounts are approximate and subject to currency fluctuations. In many cases, tickets cao be ordered in advance from the appropriate government agency listed in the box on Page 22. If an agency does not handle bookings, it can advise travelers where to write.

Soma festivals, ootably the Bayreuth Wagner Festival, which is observing its 100th anniversary, are said to be completely sold out, but the intrepid music lover is likely to find standing room available on occasion and sometimes can even purchase a returned ticket at the box office shortly before performance time or find a fellow festival-goer with a spare.

Accommodations in cities staging festivals are often hard to obtain without reservations, but many festival organizations have established housing bureaus to assist visitors. Where no bureau exists, the local tourist organization usually has information on private homes that will take guests.

Every effort has been made to provide current information in the listing of festival events, but some programs remain tentative and all of them are subject to last-minute changes.

an electric jug that boils water in about 90 seconds

Kaleidoscopic impressions of Sydney: An outdoor lunch of fresh, tiny, delectable Sydney rock oysters in their crinkled shells, grilled fish and a bottle of Australian bock at Doyle's, a landmark at Watsons Bay (tab: about $18 for two, including the wine). . . . A long municipal bus ride to Circular

Quay, the central waterfront, and a stroll to the Sydney Opera House. This $140 million structure, jutting boldly into the harbor, resembles a cluster of giant white clamshells rampant on a field of controversy. I liked it. Fully as multifunctional as Washington's Kennedy Center, its setting more appropriate, its architecture downright daring. . . . First collision with inflation: Coffee or tea on the Opera House terrace, 50 cents. . . . A rubberneck cruise of the harbor aboard the Captaio Cook, with a surprisingly articulate and attractive lass guiding our gaze to points of interest, including The Rocks, where coovicts from Britain began constructing the original Sydney Town in 1788 (cost of the hour-and-ahalf cruise including a lobster buffet lunch, $7.60 per person). . . . Then there was the cabble who drove us to Dymock's bookstore, the Brentano's of Sydney. He was an authority oo Gore Vidal though he took Vidal's more vitriolic observations on Washington with a "grine" of salt.

Our next stop, lugging a two-volume Australian bird book (about $25 at Dymock's), was Heron Island at the southern end of the Barrier Reef, 45 miles and a quick hellcopter ride from the industrial port of Gladstone. From the air, Heron resembles a #5-acre putting green ringed with white sand traps -the beach. Aground, the green becomes a dense growth of coconut palms, pandanus and Pisonia trees. The Pisonias only grow oo the Barrier Reef and some selected islands and only in the Pisonias will the noddy terms (they nod) build their nests. Gulls also ahound. There are sea eagles and white heron as well, as a cheeky ground bird, the banded land rail, which constantly forages for crumbs and is easily tamed.

Nowhere in the world, Australians insist, is marine life more abundant and richly varied than on, around and than 1,150 different species of fish have been identified off Heron Island alone. A snorkeler's paradise. Wearing tennis shoes and socks, we walked out to the ring of Heron's circular reef at low tide, dragging a glass-bottomed apple box across the coral. More natural wonders of the cay: See cucumbers that supposedly grind the sand; giaot clams with jagged mouths; vivid green turtle grass; cathedrals of pink, russet, purple, yellow and ivory coral. among the latest edifices in the construction of the Great Barrier Reef that has taken some 30 million years. Between October and March visitors may spy a very special natural wonder at Heron Island. One hy one, thousands of 600-pound green turtles crawl up Heron's beaches at high tide, dig oests and lay approximately 100 eggs each in the warm sand.

Heron is a national park (no spearfishing) but the P&O Steamship Line maintains modest guest quarters with a large dining room and bar. Rates range from $25 to $42 a day per persoo, American plan. The meals are wholesome but plain. The filet of sweetlip caprice, a saltwater fish, was tasty.

Our next stop was Brisbane, a staid and stately city whose charm is heing stifled by skyscrapers. Its luxuriant parks and gardens may be spared, but I worry about such quaint street signs as "Ansvar Insurance Co., Ltd.-For Total Abstainers Only."

About eight miles southwest of Brisbane is Fig Tree Pocket, where the Lone Pine Koala Sanctuary is located. There we paid about $2 a head to see our first koalas, kangaroos and ostrichlike emus, A controversy burns over commercial slaughter of kangaroos for hides and pet food. They are found in the wild at Tidbinhilla Nature Reserve, 25 miles southwest of Capherta, the capital, hut otherwise one may have to travel long distances inland to spot one outside a zoo. However populatioo at more than $13 millioo.

From Brisbane it's 75 miles south by car to Lamington National Park, 48,870 acres of primeval forest in South Oueensland's mountains. Elevation at ington to the coast we saw one. rustic Binna Burra Lodge on the park's edge is approximately 2,000 feet. A Queensland government naturalist, Peunder the Great Barrier Reef. More ter Ogilvie, whose enthusiasm for his life trying to protect nature from poliuwork fairly crackled through his red beard, volunteered to be our guide. There is no regular guide service in the park, which is free to the public, but its 90 miles of graded tracks (trails) are carefully mapped and tape cassettes and printed descriptions are available.

Even to a nature lover of my rank amateur standing (my wife is a passionate and accomplished hird watcher), the eight-mile walk through Lamington's raio forest bordered dangerously on enchantment. The dawn bird calls were a haunting symphony. We saw the kangaroo's smaller cousin, the wallaby, and narrowly missed a still smaller marsupial charmingly called a pademelon. (Ogilvie ideotified his movement through the brush.)

The whippird lashed out his song and a female answered with two sharp whistles-rather a reversal of the human come-on. The saucy kookaburra shook the trees with his cackling laughter. And what trees! In one acre, Ogilvie said, there are 50 different species: the finger lime, thorny yellowwood, the precious red cedar, boop pine, laceflower tree, native tomarind, brown tulip oak, blush alder and slender basswood amoog them.

Lorikeets, packaged fragments of the rainbow, fluttered through the foliage. The gorgeous crimson rosella, also of the parrot family, preeded on a limb yonder. We found a mound of leaves 10 feet in diameter, the nest, Ogilvie his star attraction is the duck-billedexplained, of the scrub turkey. The hen lays one egg in the center; it is hatched by the warmth of decomposone scientist assured us kangaroos are ing leaves. The gobbler periodically not becoming extinct. Outbreak of Brawls in Baseball Puts Beanball Rule Under More Scrutin By JOSEPH DURSD .

Baseball, a sport often criticized as tame alongside hockey and football, is looking for ways to strengthen its rules against violence on the field because of the recent outbreak of "beanball wsrs" and team fights.

The coocern arose one month into the new season after four brawls among players, all of them touched off when batters were struck by pitched balls, "Head-buoting," as it ia called, has always been part of the war of nerves at home plate, but the early appearance of the tactic has led the commissioner of baseball to order a study of Rule 802 (D), which reada: "The pitcher shall not intentionally pitch at the batter."

Few people in the major leagues think the issue will spill into the courtrooms, as ers were injured by rivals' sticks. But the commissioner Bowie Kuhn, indicated he was "very concerned" by the new violence after incidents involving the New York Mets, St. Louis Cardinals, San Francisco Giants, Chicago Cubs, California Angels. Baltimore Orioles, Cleveland Indians. Dakland A's and San Diego Padres - more than one-third of the teams in the majors.

"We've had it earlier this year than usual," said John Johnson, a deputy to the commissioner who serves as chairman of the Playing Rules Committee. "Bowie is as concerned as I am over the riots on the field and has asked me to look into the rule, I don't believe that we've quite hit the true spirit of enforcement in curbing hunting is putting us all in trouble. But the problem is in the rule. It lists the steps that the umpire has to go through in warning the pitcher and his manager. But you've got to give the man on the field enough authority to take charge without going through all those steps and having a riot on his hands hefore stopping it. "You know, if a guy hits a home run off the pitcher and, wext time up, he gets decked-everybody in the ball park knows what's going on. The umpire may stop it two pitches later by ssying, 'You're out of the game,' but by then it may be too late."

Black Man and Baseball: Disillusionments of Youth

Art Rust fr. is a sports broadcaster who grew up in Harlem when. blacks were not allowed to play major league baseball. These memories of his youth are excepted from his new book, "Get That Nigger Off the Field!" by Art Rust Jr. Copyright @ 1976 by Art Rust Jr. Reprinted by permission of Delacorte Press.

By ART RUST Jr.

Every time I walk down St. Nicholas Avenue between 145th and 141st Streets, where I lived, the memories keep jumping out at me. The stickball games, the black Joe DiMaggios, the black Mel Otts, the black Harry Dannings; the great Mel Allen and Red Barber broadcasts of the Yankee and Dodgers games; running up to the newsstand every Friday afternoon to get the Sporting News, at that time an allbaseball publication.

It was the ambition and desire of all of us to play major leegue baseball. I'm certain some of us could have made it. If that stretch of St. Nicholas Avenue (then called Sugar Hill) could talk. it would sum it all up for me and the rest of the black kids on the block.

I remember my general impression when I attended the Negro National League games at Yankee Stadium and the Polo Grounds. It was more like a carnival: blacks eating chicken, drinking beavily, women overdressed, every-body raunchy as hell. Typical Negro League behavior? No, not really. I aaw whites behaving the same way at their

As a black youngster I would say to myself, "Josh Gibson is just as good as if not superior to Yankee Bill Dickey... Satch Paige Ia just as good as the Yankee Red Ruffing. Why can't they play in the big leagues?"

My head was rubbed for good luck by a right-bander, Fiddler Bill McGee, as he walked at the clubbanders are to the clubbanders. out of the clubhouse past the bleachers. These humiliations really shook up this leagues started and why they endured. They started because white players threatened to quit rather than share the diamond with black men. In the late 19th century, before every black man had been forced out of organized baseball, Negro infielders were shin guards because white opponents would try to spike them at every opportunity. Pitchers aimed at their beads, and club owners finally seot them away rather than offend white ballplayers.

One day, I'm playing stickball on St Nicholas Avenue when a guy we called Bill the Cop, just off duty, speaks to my father and tells him the Giant manager, Bill Terry, has compained to the precinct commander that be doesn't want "nigger cops" patroling the Polo Grounds before, during or after the games, particularly not at the executiva entrances. I'm glad I've been here to see it, to tell of it, to record it. However, an interesting development: My 10-yearold daughter, Suzanne, wants to know why women can't play in major league

Black Man and Baseball: A Melting Pot Is Dented

Baseball, according to a popular notion, is a great melting pot where players of all races, national origins and backgrounds blend into unified teams. Not so, says David Q. Voigt, a sociologist, in his new book. This excerpt is reprinted from "America Through Baseball," copyright © 1976 by David Q. Voight, by permission of Nelson-Hall Publishers, Chicago.

By DAVID Q. VOIGT

.The brillient success stories of auch a variety of byphenated Americans kept the myth of the American melting pot alive in baseball. Moreover, the success of such players mirrored tha processes of invasion, and succession that students of immigration advanced in support of the myth.

Yet, if the game seemingly supports the myth of the melting pot by its acceptance of diverse ethnic Americans, the game's inability to deal equally with bleck Americans exposes some of the naivete in the myth. Although e few blacks, like the Walker brothers, who played briefly in the majors in the 1880's are exceptioos, baseball's doors clanged shut in the I890's et the very time the caste barrier of Jim Crow was excluding hlacks from participating in other social institutions.

In truth, major league baseball was one of the last professions to lay aside its Jim Crow practices. Before major league basehall admitted its first black player io 1947, blacks already had woo acceptance in war industries, military service and in other professional sports. Yet the major league owners remained

In 1946, when Branch Rickey moved to prepare Jeckie Robinson for his Dodger debut, Robinson was obliged to undergo a process of "niggerization." Warned to curb his temper and to submit silently to racist epithets. Robinson was being asked to play the role of cooperative Negro par excellence. In today's pariance, be bad to make like -an Uncle Tom.

Granted that Rickey showed moral courage in bucking his more bigoted colleagues, threatening at one point to expose his colleagues for daring to invoke a "gentleman's agreement" aimed at barring further racial integration in baseball. Yet if today there are more black faces in big league lineups, it is because black players supply more of the available talent.

Even so, they must be better than average players to make the majors. This because major laague baseball today still follows the rule of the tipping point—an assumption that more than a handful of blacks might destroy the balance of an integrated institution, in this case threatening mejor league base-ball with a possible black flood.

Among haseball owners, this myth is so well entrenched as to rival the fears of realtors or achool superintendents, Even stronger among minor league owners, the myth was expressed to a reporter by Sam Smith, president of the Southern League: Let's face it, there are folks down here who just doo't want their kids growing up to admire a Negro ballplayer, even if be's Willia Mays or Hank aron."

The same squeamish treatment of socially defined undesitables was reflected in the recent ballpark building boom io the majors. Because such ballparks as Chicago's Comiskey Park and Yankee Stadium in New York are thought to be liabilities inasmuch as their immediate neighborhoods have turned predominately black, most new parks like Cen-diestick- Park in San Francisco, Shea Stadium in New York and the Astro-dome in Houston all huddle close to suburban white refuges.

There they testify to the cotting edge of America's latest trend in urban-growth. While such examples can be used to fault baseball men for a lack of moral courage, it is fairer to portray these examples as part of the complex American character that resists integration and continues to perceiva black Americans to be less than human.

"Yet the winds of change blow unceasingly, and if America is exposed as a melting-pot society that never melts but only marinates, one must prepare to meet other social problems that swirl around our raciel dilemma.

Because black players are highly "visible," they have not been equally welcomed into the pantheon of national celebrities. Indeed, a star of the magnitude of Henry Aaron, who in 1974 topped Babe Ruth's career record of 714 homers, found himself the recipient of angry hate mail for doing so.

Yet even as the status of blacks in baseball' continues to be ambivalent, other ethnic peoples press for recognition. Since World War II, Puerto Rican players along with other Latio-Americans are crowding into major league lineups. Difficult to type racially or ethnically, their presence bewilders faos who are therefore less inclined to iden-tify with their heroics than they were with white byphenates of earlier eras.

The future portends the possibility more Latin-Americans and Orientals in baseball. Moreover, American wom-en, whose lowly status has sometimes been compared with that of blacks, are pressing for active jobs in baseball. A well-qualified umpire, Bernice Gara, sued Organized Baseball for the right to perform in the profession, and she won. But after one outing before a largely curious and hostile minor leegue assemblage, she retired, claiming to have made her point. Thus, baseball reflects the burgeoning feminist move-occur before concrete and definitive limitations are imposed. Our priorities are somewhat off-balance when policing face-offs carry, more weight than the upholding by the genuine character of a sport.

The players, as well as management, should evaluate the state of hockey to day and determine where the game is headed, but more importantly where it should be directed. Or will more and more accalled bockey gemes become

The dining room can feed 3,000 athletes at once, cafeterie style, from an international menu. It will be opeo 24 hours a day and oo meal tickets ere required, so athletes can eat as often and as much as they want.

Construction costs are staggering. The Olympic Park alone will cost $800 million. Estimates of the total cost of Olympic construction have reached $1.4 billion, and one official casually mentioned that inflation might raise the final figure to $2 billion.

The Ink Is Red Olympic Games make mofor hotels, restaurants and local busioesses, but they lose money for their organizers. Total income for these Olympics—from ticket sales, television rights, lot-teries, acuvenir coins and other sources-is not expect ed to aurpass $500 million.

The organizers thought they would realize a tidy sum by selling the Olympic Village to a real-estate deve-loper after the Games. They found that no one would meet their asking price. They thought the apartments could rent for about $400 a month, but the people who can afford that rent prefer apartments on the fashionable West End of Montreal for the same price.

So whetever price the or-ganizers get for the Olympic Village, it will fall short of what they wanted, but it will help reduce the probable deficit of $1.5 billion.

"Is it really that much?" said e COJO official. "At first, we thought everything would be done for $310 million. I guess we miscalculated somewhere."

Vilas-Borg Final: Friends and Foes

DALLAS, May 8-They are more than doubles partners; they are friends. They practice together by day and par-ty together by night. They are together so often they have begun even to resemble each other, down to the hesdbands both wear during tennis matches.

But when Guillermo Vilas and Bjorn Borg play tomor-row afternoon for the World Championship Tennis singles title, they will force themselves into a strange emotion, and it will be closer to hate then either prefers. .

"When you go on the court," Borg said today, "you hate everyone. It is the way it has to be."

Time Running Out for Choice of Olympic Quintet

By LENA WILLIAMS

Coaches for the United States Olympic Women's basketball team may find themselves, in a situation similar to that of laborers in Monwho are working around the clock to complete construction of the Olympic Stadium before the July 17 opening date of the Games. The United States has yet to choose its women's feam, and there is growing concern whether a team can be selected trained and prepared in time to face stiff international competition.

"We will be operating at a disadvantage when you consider we will be competing against teams who bave pleyed together for years," said Billie Jay Moore, the Olympic coach and coach of the women's team at Califor-nia State University at Fullerton. "Most of our players have had some exposure to the international rules, and the majority are skilled in all phases of the game. Those two factors make me optimistic that we can do it in the allotted time."

Twenty-two players, selected from five regional tryouts, plus members of the 1975 Pan-American Games team will attend the final tryout at Central Missouri University, May 16 through

The Olympic team will be chosen from that group, and the nucleus of the team probably will come from the Pan-American squad, which won a gold medal in Mexico City last year. Among the players expected Harris, the 6-foot-3-inch All-American from Delta State; Ann Meyers, a two-time All-American from U.C.L.A.; Nancy Dunkle, California State et Fullerton; Carol Bush. Wayland-Baptist of Texas, and Nancy Lieberman, a 18-year-old high school student from New York City. To qualify for the Olympics, the United States must place among the top three in a nine-natioo tournament in Hamilton, Ontario, June 25 through July 7. Three teams -the Soviet Union, Japan and Czechoslovakia -- have already qualified in the World Games for the Olympics.

Miss Moore says she will use a basic game plan. Using a running game, alternating man-to-man, full-court press and defense zone and a controlled fast break, she hopes to offset the styles of many

"Italy and France are good, solid teams, but I think we can beat the other six countries at Hamilton," said

This will be the first year for women's basketball in the Olympics. Many believe it is long overdue.

There will be six women's teams competing for gold, silver and bronze medals in basketball. The United States is unlikely to win a gold or The Russians who have a 7-foot-2-inch player, Ulyma Seminova, are favored. They expect stiff competition from France, which has a 151-1 won-lost-record over the last three years; Japan and Czechoslovakie, familiar with the international rules, beve not had the exposure, fioancial backing or the time to develop their

And when the question is raised why the United States waited so long to pick its team, the answers are varied and uncertain.

"Most of our players come from colleges," Miss Moore said. "They are in school three-fourths of the year, so it's hard for them to compete. We also do not have the financial backing of many of the European teams. Those aren't excuses, just possible reasons for the time lag." "I don't know why we waited so late to field a team," said Dean Martin, an official of the Amateur Basketball Associatioo. She added. "Let's keep our fingers crossed that we can make up The American players, while for lost time."

Godliness Off and Racing

It is a fact known to all the righteous that gambling is a base and sioful pursuit and that horse racing, being e vehicle for the vice, is an instrument of the devil. In the circumstances, it is heartening to oote that when the collection plate is pased in the Church of Christ in West Mansfield, Ohio, the parishioner who gets it up most generously is a kindly old Sports harness borse named Rambling Willie. Furthermore, next Satur-The Times day when the iniquitous are assembled in Baltimore for the 101st running of the Preakness Stakes, something like 80 trotters and pacers at Monticello Raceway will be giving their all for St. Peter's Romao Catholic Church, with full approval of Terence Cardinal Cooke, his vicar general, and the New York Stete Racing and Wagering Board.

On top of that, every spring wheo mares come to the court of Nevele Diamond, a trotter who won a beat in the 1974 Hambletonian and now stands at atud in Sullivan County, St. Peter's will beve a $2,500 piece of the ectioo.

Depravity may be rife in gambling hells like Pimlico and Belmont, but in Western Obio and the Catskills, godliness is off and racing.
St. Peter's stands at Broadway and Liberty Street in Monticello across from Kaplan's Kosher Deli, and has been there for 102 years. That is, the gray stone shell of the church still stands; the interior was gutted by fire last December. The temperature was 7 below zero that night, the streets were empty, and officers of the Monticello Volunteer Fire Department estimated that the fire had been burning inside for about seven hours before anyone noticed it

St. Peters Bagels

The cost of restoration has been calculated at $450,000 to $500,000, a sum beyond the means of the 500 parishloners, "The community," says Mrs. Kay Bogdan, head of the rebuilding commitstructure." Even so, a big thermometer on the church lawn shows that the congregation has pledged $200,000. Insurance is expected to provide another $200,000, and S. Harvey Fosner, the Raceway president, hopes St. Peter's Day at the track will produce a substantial cootribution. Monticello usually operates at night.

Msgr. John N. Brooks, the pastor, hopes restoration work can begin in Juoe and the church can reopen oext autumn. Mass is being celebrated now in the auditorium of St. Peter's School, which closed five years ago for want of funds. The Slutsky family, operators of the Nevele Country Club in nearby Ellen-ville, also owns Nevele Diamood, whose stud fee is $2,500. They have arranged to donate the proceeds of one service

If his achedule permits, Cardinal Cooke plans to go recing on St. Peter's Day. The next day, the Monticello Bagel Bakery will donate its profits.

Willie's Benefactions

Rambling Willie, Aged Pacer of 1975 and Horse of the Year in Ohio, is owned by Paul Seibert and Vivian Farrington, wife of the former national driving champion, Robert Farrington. She happens to be e daughter of the Rev. C. L. Harris, pastor of the Church of Christ in West Maosfield, and she was brought up to give tithes. Thus when Rambling Willie won $264,40S last year, 10 percent of Vivian's share, more than $13,-000, weot to the church.

Rambling Willie's contributions have pald for paneling, carpeting, new pews, a new pulpit, a baptistry and a new bulletin board outside (on which his picture has been posted). "We were even able to hire an assistant minister," Pastor Herris says, "and that gave us a youth counselor and a musical direc-

Pastor Harris says his congregation frowns on lotteries and other forms of gambling but admires Rambling Willie. "Before services," he says, "or when they're leaving, many ask, 'How did Rambling Willie do last night?"

The pastor and his wife attended the Canadian Pacing Derby at Greenwood Raceway outside Toronto last year. When Rambling Willie led the field home. Paul Seibert handed over a check for $2.000, an extra dividend from Willie. Pastor Harris declares that tithing inevitably brings rewards, and his daughter shares bis view. Willie is the only horse she has owned. Her husbard didn't expect him to get beyood the cheaper races but be turned out to be one of the best.

"My sister," she says, "had a claimer named Rail Time and she tithed his earnings. He developed loto a top horse around Chicago. When her husband complained that the donations were getting too big, they stopped tithing.

The rampage opened with a walk to Wayne Garrett and, one out later, an infield single by Torre. Then came Dave Kingman, who observed that he had batted in 29 runs with 12 home runs but who indicated coofusion over his low 241 batting average by statistics by drilling a single to left field for one run. Then Jerry Grote singled to right, loading the bases, and Ed Kranepool singled for two more runs. When Harrelsoo singled for run No. 4, Folkers was excused and San Diego's pitching was turned over to Dave Wehrmeister with the Mets leading, 4-1.

Three innings later, Frazier counted another ruo with a tip of his cap for San Diego charity. First the Padres walked Harrelson and then, after a sacrifice bunt by Lolich they treated the Mets to a 5-1 lead when Winfield caught Garrett's fly in-right field and chopped the ball as he tried to throw it to the infield.

The Mels didn't need any favors in the seventh, when they added a run off Dave Tomlin, the Padres' fourth pitcher. They got it again on singles-by Torre Kingman and Grote- and now Lolich was prospering with a fiverun bulge.
There were a couple of times during the game when Lolich needed some encour-agement on defense, and his colleagues supplied it. The Giants and Cardinals became embrofiled after Charlie Williams of San Francisco hit Vic Harris with a pitch. And the Giants and Cubs fought after Ray Burris and Jim Barr both brushed back batters and Jose Cardenal threw his helmet at Barr, who then hit Bill Madlock on the left shoulder with a pitch. In that brawl, two players were ejected, one pitcher was fined, two play-ers were knocked down and both benches emptied onto the diamond.

Madlock, the National League batting champion, also let a bat skp out of his hands toward Barr and later said: "The short spring hurt the pitchers, and they're tak-ing advantage, knocking the-hitters down."

"Madlock stands on top of the plate, that's why he gets said Tom Seaver of the Mets. "The rule is at fault first of all, and then the umpires. The rule is wrong. It says you warn the pitcher, then maybe eject the man-ager, and meantime the pitcher is getting two free pops before he's thrown out."

"It's a battle for the strike zone," said Matlack, "It's a game of intimidation, You're trying to get the batter out, to hit the ball easy, not hard—that's what it's all about I've got to pitch tight to be effective and I do, but 99.9 percent of the time 1 throw too close to a guy, the ball gets eway from me; I'm not. trying to hit him, But in St. Louis that time, McGlothen. threw four pitches at me and one hit me. He threw at two guys before he was warned and fined $50.

Big Hitters Targets

"When you retaliate, you throw at some dominant player on the other team, their pitcher or big hitter. On the Cardinals, it would be a guy like Lou Brock or Reggie Smith or Ted Simmons, a guy with the authority to go back to the dugout and get the has gone too far.'

The umpires should control it, because a baseball is a lethal instrument. Sometimes the catcher will signal for a brushback or even a beanball by flipping his thumb or giving some other sign and it's left to your discretion how close you throw it. In the American League, it's different. The designated bitter bats for the pitcher, so the pitcher can't be touched unless you bunt the ball along the baseline and run over him."

'Don Drysdale was a headhunter, and so was Bob Gibson. When I was a rookie in spring training, I hit two doubles off Gibson the firsttime I faced him, and Seaver told me that I better stay loose up there the next time or 'you'll go down.' Sure enough, the next time up, his first pitch hit me on the shoulder. Even if the guys ahead of hou hit home runs, like Dave Kingman and Eddie Kranepool. I'm coming up-next and I know I've got to go down, I spend a lot of time on my back.

"When that happens, I give the message to my own pitcher; if they knock me down, you've got to protect me. The first batter up for them has got to go down, too. I don't mind too much if they hit me below the waist, but a lot of fights start when guys get hit in the head it's a good thing Nolan Ryan isn't a head-hunter. The way he throws, it could kill.

"I didn't mind it when they threw at me for something said Jerry Coleman, the onetime second baseman

Bring Money, Yankee Fans

For those who might sometimes wonder what the difference is between Yankee fans and Met fans, one answer is that Yankee fano need to bring more money when they go to the ball park.

In keeping with their exalted stature as the terrants of Yankee Stadium II that cost the taxpayers more than $100 million; the Yankees have established an exalted price structure for tickets, con-Sports cessions and souvenirs of that is substantially The Times higher than that in Shea Stadium, where the Mets appear to be trying to hold the line, if not the mustard. The Yankees also bave abandoned all but one of their eight giveaway promotions, such as bat day and cap day, that bad beeo announced with their schedule. Ripoff, some people might call it.

"We're trying to sell hasehall, oot giveaways," says Gahe Paul, the Yan-kees' president. "As for the cooceasion prices, that's simply a matter of spiralmg costs. What was to have been a $2 million concession operation blossomed into a $5 million operation,"

The Comparisons

Those concession costs at Yankee Stadium have produced a startling difference in prices. Baseball's basic staple, the hot dog, is 10 cents higher there than at Shea, a beer and a soda each is 10 cents higher, a ham sandwich is 60 cents higher, an autographed haseball is 90 cents higher. The complete list of prices as established by Harry M. Stevens Inc. at Shea and the Canteen Corporation at Yankee Stadium:

The Yankees, who haven't been in the World Series since 1964, also have increased their ticket prices this year to $5.50 and $5 for box seats from $5 last year, to $4.50 and $4 for reserved seats from $4 last year. The Mets, meanwhile, have maintained their prices at $4.50 and $4 for box seats, $4, $3.50 and $3 for reserved seats. The general admission ticket at each ball park has remained the same, $1.50.

"The Mets," says Gebe Paul, "are operating on a financial hase set a long time ago. And our occupancy provided them with a tremendous amount of income.

Yankee sources claim that the Mets collected a total of $2 million, mostly in concessions and parking fees, from the Yankees' use of Shea during the last two seasons,

"But let's go hack hefore theo," says Jim Thomson, the Mets' vice president. 'Our prices were lower then, too. We've simply asked the Stevens people to keep the prices down. We work on volume. I think our fans appreciate that."

'No Complaints'

The Mets have edded two promotiocal giveaways - photo-album day, which was yesterday, and medallion day. They also have a helmet day, a jacket day, a fan-appreciation day and a banner day. The Yankees' only giveaway is jacket day.

. "We canceled hat day," Gabe Paul says, "because we didn't want the kids banging the bats on the cement in a new ball park."

But the Yankees had announced a bat day, helmet day, shirt day, banner day, glove day, photo day and fan-appreciation day.

"We canceled them." Gabe Paul says, "before the tickets went on public sale, except for a small mail sale. Everybody who had bought tickets was notified. Anybody who wanted their money back could get it. But we've had no complaints. We kept jacket day because they're soft goods. Jackets woo't create any damage like bats will. But, basically, we're trying to sell baseball."

So far both the Yankees and the Mets are succeeding in celling baseball. Each team is battling for first place in its division. In its financial crisis, New York needs e pennant race as e diversion. By comparison with other major sports, baseball is still a relatively inexpensive entertainment. But those who go to Shea Stadium need to bring money. And those who go to Yankee Stadium II need to bring more money.

The Beanball Rule

Beanballs are covered under paragraph 802 (D) of the baseball rules, which reads:

"The pitcher shall not intentionally pitch at the batter. If, in the umpire's judgment, such violation occurs, the umpire shall warn the pitcher and the manager of the defense that another such pitch will mean the immediate expulsion of the pitcher. If such pitch is repeated during the game, the umpire shall eject the pitcher from the game."

In addition, the American and National Leagues have ordered an automatic $50 fine to be levied against the pitcher when he is warned.

More than the meeting of two clubs—the Canadiens with their explosive offense, the Flyers with their bruising defense—this series can be seen as a test of the kind of slick hockey that "oppists" seen as a test of the aniu of slick bockey that "purists" call traditional against the currently popular roughedged variety of play that has made civil prosecutors students of the game.

Should Philadelphia win its third consecutiva Stanley of the controversy.

But, said Ken Dryden,

Montreal's goalie, "Philadelphia looks as if it's deciding." to play hockey."

The Flyers generall consider the Canadiens to be the favorite in the series. "The whole world knows how good they are." said Fred Shero, Philadelphia's erudite coach. "If we're healthy, we've got a good chance."

'They bave their way of playing and we have our way. playing and we have our way of playing, 'said Bobby Clarke, the Flyers' captain. 'I don't know how it will come out."

Islanders Help Canadiens

Don Cherry, coach of the Bruins, said, "The Montreal series depends on ona guy.

Wayne Stephenson [the Philadelphia goalie who took over for Bernie Parent this season]. If he plays as well against Montreal as he did against us they've got a helluva chance." The series with the New York Islanders prepared the Canadiens for the Flyers, said Scotty Bowman, Montreal's coach. The Canadiens eliminated the Islanders in five games.

"in my own personal opinion," he said, "the Islanders were the top defensive team in the league nor including us. They're physical and they play the body. Those two aspects I don't think Philadelphis will better. Certainly the phia will better. Certainly the Flyers are more dangerous offensively, but you're basically playing a club with the same style.

"I think Philadelphia will get a good lift out of the Bos-ton series, especially with Reggie Leach doing so well," said Bowman.

In Philadelphia's 6-3 victory over Boston in the series' final game, Leach scored his team's first five goals, tying a record set in 1944 by Montreal'a Maurice Richard and, tied in Philadelphia's quarter-final series this season by Darryl Sittler of Toronto.

Darryl Sittler of Toronto.

Leach has 76 goals so far this season, 15 in the playoffs. He is closing in on Phil Esposito's record of 79 goals totaled in the regular season and playoffs, in the 1970-71 season when Esposito was with the Bruins.

One team that is picking the Flyers to win the final series is the Islanders.

"If Montreal plays like they series is the Islanders.

"If Montreal plays like they played against us, no way they can win," said Glenn Resch, New York's goalie.

areo't here because their team, Vel's Parnelli Jnnes, is without a sponsor. The series itself has been without a apoosor since 1973. Its schedule still has asterisks with "Tentatives" attached.

Gurney Urges Changes "The rtcing is still terrific and the cars are still terrific." said Gurney, who has one of his Eagles entered here. "But we've got to do something about the bad management, the bad marketing and the bad promotion."

Gurney is one of the founders of the North American Grand Prix Association, which he hopes will grow into a sort of Formula 5000 constructors" associttion. "We've got to be able to start building from the ashes," be said. 'Tm convinced that the American public still has a romance with the automobile."

That may be, but most of the drivers bere are strangers to the Americao public. Brian Redman, who has woo the seasoo title the ltst two years and is the strong favorite to do so again, commutes to the races from bis home io Gargrave, England.

chasing checkered flags on the grand prix circuit and at Indianapolis, respectively, the drivers who will be chasing Redman this yetr come from such all-American outposts as England, Australia and Belgium. In fect, with Formula 5000 racing having more trouble overseas, the American aeries has attracted the leading teams from EEurope

and Hong Koog. Field Is Mixed

Count Van de Strateo, whose title in Belgium goes back more than 600 years, is here with his two-car team, which took the top two places in Europe last year. Teddy Pilette, a 34-year-old Belgian whose grandafther, Theodore Pilette, drove in the 1913 Indianapolis 500, won the European title and is here with a new Lola T430.

His teammate is Peter Gethin, a 36-year-old English bachelor who is driving a new Chevron. He bas woo in 5000 and Can-Am in this country but has not raced bere since 1973.

Pilette and Gethin were amoog the fastest of the 18 drivers in qualifying today. So were such foreigners as Alan Jones, an Australian who is driving a Lola T332 for Teddy Yip's Hong Kong team; Warwick Brown, another Australian in a Lola;

a Shadow (whose Dodge eogine is the only non-Chevrolet in the field) and Vern Schuppan, an Australian who will drive Gurney's Formula 5000 Eagle here and an Iodianapolis-type Eagle for Gurney for the Indy 500.

The noly American drivers with chances of winning seem to be Sam Posey, in a Taion, and Danny Ongais, whose Lola led Redman's around the 2.8-mile circuit for several laps in this morniog'a practice.

Ongais, a 33-year-old Ha-Ongais, a 55-year-out ma-walian-born drag racer who went crooked after much success going in a straight line for a quarter-mile at a time, saw his first professional road race last year at Pocono. He drove in it.

OUTSTANDING MILEAGE. CIS fuel injection gave Audi an EPA-estimated 30 mpg highway and 20 mpg city (actual mileage may vary depending on driving habits, car's condition, and optional equipment with standard shift).

COMFORT Audi's luxuri- 7 ous interior has unusual headroom and legroom, and comfortably seats 5. The seats are orthopedicallydesigned for maximum support and comfort, thereby minimizing fatigue. The front seats recline.

FLOW-THROUGH VENTILATION. This system not only provides a continuous flow of fresh air, but circulates it in a manner which can cool the face as it warms the feet, helping you stay alert.

CLASSIC DESIGN. The Audi's styling is one of understated elegance. Designed for substance and quality, its look varies little from year to year.

SAFETY. The Audi is built with a rigid, computer-designed steel safety-cell passenger compartment. Its collapsible front and rear sections, steering wheel and steering column are designed to absorb energy.

PRICE. Germany makes some of the greatest luxury cars in the world, and some of the most expensive. But in the Audi 100LS, you can get all these features for thousands of dollars less than you might expect to pay. That alone makes the Audi 100LS

WHITE PLAINS, May 8-That Old Devil Wind, hlowing in gusts of more than 20 miles an hour, played havoc withthe athletes today in the star-studded Glenn Loucks schoolboy track and field games at White Plains High School's handsome fa-sun was shining brightly, but the wind swept in from several directions to hinder the performances on the track and in the field. Those athletes who oad to compete with the wind only at their backs were aided, but those who had to buck it on the backstretch or throw against it on the field were definitely handicapped. Ernie Waiters of John F. Kennedy of the Bronx, with the wind pushing him down the track, won the 100-yard dash in 9.7 seconds and Art Monk of White Plains, enjoying the same advantage, took the 120-yard high hur-dles in 14.1 seconds. Both were best times for the winners, but the wind helped. On the other hand, Luis Ostolozaga of Brooklyn's Bishop Loughlin had to put his head and shoulders down four times in bucking the wind on the backstretch and the result was a not too fast winning time of 4 minutes 16.4 seconds in the one-mile

"That wind was unbeliev-able," Ostolozaga said later. "There was just no way you could make time against it, so I was just happy to win. I really wanted to do 4:14 or better today, but when I saw those flags whipping around before the race I knew there was no chance." A standout field in the 880-yard run was also set TRACK EVENTS

Games, the United States won 21 track and field medals, East Germany 20 and the Soviet Union 16. If one scored the world rankings for 1975, as they appeared in Track and Field News for men's individual events and Women's Track and Field World for the women, on a 1098, etc. basis, the combined world ranking by nation would have had the United States leading with 372 points, followed by East Ger-

200-meter dash, Annelie Ehrhardt the 100-meter hurdles and Ruth Fuchs ehe javelin throw. Each is a 1972 Olympic champion and world recombination of the complex of the comp ordholder, and each ran well in Split, although none approached eher record.
Two other world record holders, Rosemarie Ackermann and Marianne Adam, also made satisfactory showings in the high jump and shot-put, respectively. Fourth Fastest Woman The weekend's most startling performances, however, came from three women who ginde Poliak, the world record-holder, was defeated by Siegrun Siegl, whose score of 4,813 points places her second on the world ciseer list. Mrs. Siegl's total was helped by her long jump of 22 feet 3% inches, only 1½ inches short of the world record. She must thus be considered an Olympic candidate. sidered an Olympic candidate in that event, too.

More unexpected news came from Lelpzig, where Anita Welss, who had not been considered one of East Germany's top half dozen 800-meter runners, equaled the national record of 1:58.8 held by Gunnhild Hoffmeister, a winner of two Olympic medals.

The East German men pro-duced their share of bright performances last weekend. Siegfried Stark, only 20 years old, scored 8,280 points in the decathlon, more than 300

am Importe Bowling Clinic to Le How to Lessen Frustrations Over That Elusive No. 10 Pin

By JERRY LEVINE

There are so many ways o describe the failure of ne particular pin fall fter what appears to be a perfect strike hit that it rust be bowling's most intri-uing issoe.

Some call it the "solid en" and others label it a tenpin tap." Variations of at theme are the "weak en" and still other sour rapes students tab it the wrap-around ten."

It's the most frustrating tuation in bowling and, seping in mind that while e're addressing ourselves right-handers, the leftinders have their counterurt-the solid seven.

Why did that No. 10 pin fuse to fall over when the wier apparently tossed a riect pocket sbot? A varieof reasons can be given, id you can pick out the

The reaction set in motion the ball arriving in the 3 pocket is simple; the ball nds the 1 toward the left ind the ball then crashes to the 3, which crashes to the 6, which crashes opefully) into the 10.

If, perhaps, the bowler has it a bit too much speed i bis shot, the 3 will hit e 6, but the 6 may shoot the right, hit the side-ard, and wrap right around 10. However, quite often bowler will fire away th a good amount of speed the shot and the 6 will the job perfectly.

Then, sometimes, the bowlhas let up a trifle. The Il may hit the 3 pin dead ster, or too much towards right, resulting in the its left as we face the performer from the champion and without fail they'll talk about speed control. The consensus seems to be that while the solid ten will always be the bugaboo of the bowler on any level, the one who sacrifices lift and turn and direction for speed eventual-ly will pay the price in single pin leaves and that one pin usually will be the 10. Proper deflection when the ball hits the pocket is what accounts for the strikes you must have to score high and the proper chain reaction can be accomplished only when you give the ball a chance to do its work once it hits the "sweet spot."

The greatest bowlers through the years bave been

It's back-to-college week r metropolitan fanciers. ext Saturday, the Ladies ennel Association is holding ; 70th fixture on the Hofstra liversity campus in Hemptead and, on Sunday, the Long Is-land Kennel Club stages its 74th on Degs the specious grounds of New irk Institute of Technology Brookville.

Both Long Island events ve shown an increase in tries. L.K.A., with 1,564, 5 98 more than last year d L.I.K.C., with a limited try, has come up with an ditional 123, for a total of

"I'm delighted with the la-ase," said Mrs. William bler, serving her first year L.I.K.C. president. "In 5, we moved to New York ch and the exhibitors ap-rently liked the show and bunds. Perhaps, next year will raise the limit to Mrs. Tabler has arrange for a judging slate of 27.

"Since we are a Long Island club, nine of our judges come from the Island, including Mrs. Bob Adamson, who will name best in show," said the club's president clob's president.

The Dorothy J. Long Memorial Trophy, banoring a longtime farmer L.LK.C. head, goes to the breeder of the show's top winner.

As usual, Ladies will have a woman judge best in show. She is Mrs. Peg Walton, the breeder of many great bassets. Ten of the other 26 arbiters also are women, althnugh only one, Mrs. Heywood Hartley, is doing a group.

Mrs. Walton's choice receives two sterling silver trophies, one in memory of Ernestine Alker president for three decades, the other honoring Flora Bonney. whn also served for three decades as secretary-treaselectro gold-plated Αп medallion of the club's insignia, with the motto, "Amicus Generis Humani" goes for each best of breed nt variety winner.

Ch. Spartan's Sloe Gin Fizz, the miniature wire-haired dachshund owned by Christy An Gordon-Creed of Camden, S.C., had his picture taken with President Ford. The Chief Executive, campaigning in Indiana, was at the Fort Wayne show, where Jerry Rigden gaited the 9½-pounder to his 12th top award. . . . Dr. Donald Dye's boxer, Ch. in the history of the breed in America, to take a best. Because of the inclement weather, Dr. Josephine Deubler, the sbow chairman, ordered two groups judged at a time, so exhibitors could get no the road in daylight. Park Ridge. Ill., won the pot nf gold at Lima, Ohin. Trenton has come up

drainage was excellent in 3,500-acre Mercer County

Park, so the previous day's rain, was absorbed and the footing was good. Anne Snelling's Irisb water span-

THE NEW ALEN VALUES Flanagan's Dream to Become a Reality I'd have to do it. By now, are no through-the-hull fittings—that means, no head (a bucket ia lighter) and no of equipment for the boat of equipment for the boat of equipment for the boat reach its potential. This race is fronty

ing on jobs no one else dared tackle. Nov

he has applied this tenacity to a race—the Singleof Boating handed Trans-Atlantic.
The rules sound simple:

ne person sails a boat from lymouth, England, to Newort, R.I., a distance of about .,000 miles. There are three commers, one for each class. But when Flanagan ateers alloping Gael across the arting line June 5, along ith nearly 150 other comtitors, it will mark tha be-nning of the end of two and ne-half years of planning id work.

The dreaming started back 1960 when the race was itially held, attracting five ats. Since then, it has been ld every four years.
'I followed the race from inception and decided if lidn't do it this year, I prob-ly wouldn't do it at all," ys Flanagan, of Essex, nn. "Right after making e decision, I aent off my 75 entry fee, figuring then in his growing business, Galloping Gael ran away with it And it was no modest project. The 41-year-old Flanagan wanted the best. He wanted his boat to be the first American yacht to cap-ture a Trans-Atlantic trophy. What he got was a stripped offshore racing machine un-encumbered by limitations of the International Offshore Rule, designed by Dick Carter apecifically for this "I wanted no compromisa with sail handling or com-fort. I told Dick to give me the fastest design and I'd figure out bow to handle it," says Flanagan, born in England of Irish parents and due to become a United States citizen just before the race. As a result, the 38-foot, fin-keel yacht has a flush deck topped by 1,000 square feet of North sails. This is 33 percent more sail area than the I.O.R. boats of comparable size. The hull is Airex core fiberglasa with aluminum spars. To eliminate drag, there attitude of sailing. Few yachts are designed for this race and the singlehanded boats aren't sailed efficiently," says Flanagan, a former Canadian Olympic Finn Class calabratic organization Class sailor.

Understandably. The record crossing for Galloping Gael's class (28 to 38 feet) is 28 days. Flanagan thinks he will win with a time of just under 24 days, providing the winds are not light and reaching, which would favor multihulls. That's long time for one person to keep a boat sailing at top performance, constantly trimming sails and finding time for such cbores as navigating, sleeping and eating.

"My biggest problem will be one of fatigue. I don't ex-pect to sleep more than one hour at a time. It'a possible. I crossed the Atlantic 18 months ago to test myself," he explains, adding he has been training for two years— running and exercising—to increase stamina.

He has also been seeking a sponsor, without luck.

This race is frontpage news in Europe. There spon-aorship ia a matter of course. In fact. Club Mediteranne has well over $1 million invested in [Alain] Cola's boat [a new 236-footer]. But sponsorship is hard to get in this country. I know. I approached over 100 companies," he savs.

Another obstacle was closer to home. While his three teen-agers think the project is exciting, his wife, Terry, "hates the whole idea. She doesn't like the sailing aspect nor the financial commit-Once under way, will it have been worth all the sweat and aggravation? "Absolutely. As far as individual effort is concerned, this race has to be the most challeng-ing sporting event there is," he savs firmly.

And if there's one thing
Mike Flanagan likes, it's a challenge.

The original list of 199 en-tries in the Trans-Atlantic race has been pared to 144. Most dropouts were lopped

Reagan Marches To Four Straight Over Ford

President Ford has now lost four atraight primaries to Ronald Reagan, in Mr. Ford's own Middle West as well as In the South and Southwest, and both his and bis party's embarrassment has been made explicit: He is a uniquely weak incumbent candidate, and so far the Republicans' only other choice is a man who sounds like, and might run tike, Barry Goldwater.

What Ford does now. Mr. Reagan won a huge victory in Texas a week ago, and won on Tuesday in Indiana, Georgia and Alabama. Mr. Ford's troubled counselors held a retrospective. The thrust of their post-mortem was that through overactive campaigning, their man bas become less a President seeking his party's natural endorsement than another Republican seeking the White House.

Mr. Ford's strategists now propose that he reoccupy the center in classic incumbent style, capitalizing on the Presidency by making policy rather than promises, and try to isolate Mr. Reagan on the far right. Until now, Mr. Ford has seemed to be competing with Mr. Reagan for the right.

seems ready to pursue now, is not without problems. For one thing, characterizing his opponent as a poentially dangerous zealot will deepen the schism in an already badly divided loarty and reactivate a modern Republican nightmare, the Goldwater candidacy of 1964.

The Republicans' immediate prospect is thus unenviable: an increasingly ontentious contest between a coniervative ideologue and an irregular ncumbent. No matter bow Presidential Vir. Ford's manner or record can be nade to appear, he is still the Conpressman from Grand Rapids, Michaplevated to the White House by Richard Nixon.

What Reagan does now. The Calicornian's accomplishment is in part cordent and in part design. He acually had worked bard for a quick, major victory over the President in he first primary in New Hampshire, but Mr. Ford won. Mr. Reagan eschewed further major combat in the North and regrouped on more favorable Southern ground.

He won his first victory in North Carolina on March 23, where a conaervative Republican constituency responded to his attacks on the Ford Administration in general and the Ford-Kissinger foreign policy in particular. He sharpened his criticism of foreign and defense policy continually and, on May 1, overwhelmed Mr. Ford in the major Texas primary.

Mr. Reagan's rhetoric was designed in some degree to attract cross-over votes from those who really are supporters of George Wallace, and by common agreement the strategy worked totally in Texas and again in Indiana. There is thus oo reasoo to suppose Mr. Reagan will do anything different in the near future.

There are five primaries this month that permit such cross-over voting, including the President's home state, Michigan, where the primary will be held May 18. A defeat for Mr. Ford there might turn questions about the President's candidacy into oegative answers.

Mr. Reagan new has more delegates than Mr. Ford. It is possible, perhaps probable, that neither man will enter the Republican National Convention with the 1,130 delegates needed for nomination. Uncommitted delegates are now important prizes, and last week competition for them intensified. Mr. Reagan's campaign manager lobbled in New York for breakaways from the 151 delegates led by Vice President Rockefeller.

Last week's results. In Texas, Indiana, Georgia and Alabama, Mr. Ford picked up only nine delegates. Mr. Reagan won 216, iocluding all 96 from Texas. In Indiana, the popular vote was 51 percent for Mr. Reagan, 49 percent for the President.

There are two primaries this week, in Nebraska and West Virginia, where cross-overs are not permitted, and where the President and Mr. Reagan will thus be competing for only Republican votes.

Any others? The course of the Rupublican campaign raises the question of whether others will decide to seek the nomination. Despite the difficulties of eotering a race so far along, it is not inconceivable that some will decide to offer themselves as compromises. Senator Howard Baker has already raised that possibility publicly, though not about himself, and Nelson Rockefeller, while supporting Mr. Ford, has made plain ha has not entirely given up the hope of just one more chance at a nomination.

The Democrats. Jimmy Carter, the former Goveroor of Georgia, continued tast week to consolidate both his detegate atrength and his aupport outside the Democratic Party. In the primaries, he won all but Alabama, Mr. Watlace's home state. Mr. Carter also accomplished the minor miracle of a joiot personal eodorsement from Leonard Woodcock, head of the United Automobile Workers, and Henry Ford 2d.

Mr. Carter now faces ective and open opposition only from Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona, with whom the Georgian will compete for Michigan's 133 delegates, and Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr., of California, with whom be is competing for Maryland's delegates, also on May 18.

A New U.S. Plan For Poor Nations

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has completed his two-week toor of Africa, leaving behind a set of political and economic pronouncements designed—after the shock of Communist success and American failure in Angola — to promote anew Washington's Influence on the continent and in the underdeveloped world generally.

At the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development in Nairobi last week, he made comprehensive proposals for improving the economies of poer nations, but his plans placed emphasis on free enterprise and private initiative. He suggested creation of a $1 billion International Resources Bank to "promote more rational, systematic and equitable development of resources in developing nations." The bank would be financed by industrialized and oil-producing nations, and they would also have a powerful voice in how the mooey was used.

Reacting to demands from the developing nations, Mr. Kissinger accepted the coocept of maiotaiolog buffer stocks of certain commodities that could be increased or dispersed to maintain price stability for producer countries that rely on a single commodity as their major source of income or foreign exchange.

Mr. Kissinger also urged reduction or elimination of tariff barriers against importation of processed goods from the developing octions, improved methods of transferring technology to the poor nations, curbs on emigration to industrial countries of skilled people from less developed lands, changes in assistance programs so that aid money does not have to be spent in the donor country, and special help for the world's 25 poorest countries.

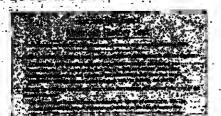

The Kissinger proposals are known to have gone farther than many of the poor nations had expected, but not nearly far enough to satisfy them fully. They seek a system of indexing that tiea together the prices they get for their raw materials and the prices they must pay for manufactured goods; they also want a moratorium on the debts they owe developed nations. There is little chance they will get either.

Even some of the industrialized nations were not sure why the United States proposed yet another international bank, when several such mechanisms exist now for dispensing aid.

Mr. Kissinger's economic proposals were a complement to the major reversal of policy he announced at the start of hia trip, when he placed the United States "unequivocally" behind the blacks seeking political power in southern Africa, particularly in Rhodesia.

When Republicans Battle, They Really Mean It

Remembering '64 Is No Elephant Joke

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON

WASHINGTON—Ronald Reagan once was the leading apostie of an Eleventh Commandment—
'Thou shalt not speak ill of a fellow Republican'— and a poster on an office wall in President Ford's campaign headquarters facetiously proclaims a Twelfth: 'Thou shalt not hassle.'

Ominously for the Republican Party that claims the fealty of barely 18 percent of the electorate, the tablets bearing both revisionist commandments bave been shattered. The former California Governor's success in sweeping all but 9 of 219 delegates in Presidential primaries in Texas, Indiana, Georgia and Alabama is attributed by Mr. Reagan's agents to his sharp denunciations of the President's national security policies and leadership. In trying uosuccessfully to rally Republicans to his own cause, the unelected President belittled Mr. Reagan as "irrespossible," "glib" and ill-informed on defense, and even compared his rival to the proverbial "donkey" who can kick down a barn door but not erect one.

Bitter and divisive as those thrusts and parries already are, they are bound to intensify in the 17 of Nevada, the Reagan campaign chairman, fretted a few weeks ago that Mr. Reagan bad erred in raising the issue of the President's pardon of former President Nixon. The other day, Mr. Laxait unhesitatingly warned that the pardon would be heavy baggage for Mr. Ford to carry as the party nominee. For their part, Mr. Ford's managers ere searching for a surrogate willing to dredge up various "bellicose" remarks by Mr. Reagan—that Angola was a perfect place to "eyeball it with Russia" or that Navy cruisers should accompany tuna boats off Ecuador-and make a public case that the former Governor would be a dangerous Dr. Strangelove if permitted near the Oval Office buttons.

The escalation in rhetoric alone is itself bound to weaken further an already woefully weak party. It has already raised the specter of a repetition of the party's 1964 disaster, presided over by Senator Barry Goldwater.

By the time the Republicans convene in Kansas City in August, unless one or the other combatant has enough first ballot votes to secure the nomination—now an unlikely prospect—"you can look for the awfullest bloodletting you've seen at a Republican convection for years and years and decades and decades," predicted Secutor Howard H. Baker Jr., Republican of Tennessee, For the survivor, the victory could well be Pyrrhic.

Republicans never have mastered the knack, as Democrats seem to have, of winking while knifing an opponeot's jugular. Even after their brutal debacle in Chicago in 1968, the Democrats regrouped behind Hubert H. Humphrey enough to nearly overcome Richard M. Nixon. Four years later, the Democrats lost badly, not because of internal dissent but because their nominee, Senator George McGovern, became identified with a narrow, "leftist" base.

And this year, despite a profusion of candidates and ideologies, they already have begun coalescing around the candidacy of Jimmy Carter. Indeed, the early emergence of the former Georgia Governor as the prospective Democratic cominee and the consequent unleashing of George Wallace's cooservative partisans to cross over, where state primaries permit, to vote for Mr. Reagan bas exacerbated the Republican struggle.

Republicans have always been apocalyptic in their intranural contests. The 1912 fight between William Howard Taft and Theodore Roosevelt led to a temporary spin-off, the Bull Moose party, and set ao historic pattern for self-defeating fractiousness. The Nebraska Republican organization still is rent in two as a result of the 1952 contest between Dwight D. Eisenhower and Robert A. Taft. Resentment over Nelson A. Rockefeller's 1964 opposition to Barry Goldwater remained strong enough last fall to persuade Vice President Rockefeller to renounce a spot on this year's ticket. Now there is growing Republican concern over the "Goldwater apecter," a thorough thrashing by the Democrats in November, because of the emnity of the Ford-Reagao competition.

cause of the emnity of the Ford-Reagao competitioo.

The extent of the alarm was best illustrated by Senator Goldwater's own attack last week, aloogside

Mr. Rockefeller's, on Mr. Reagan's threat to usa armed might if necessary to preserve American control of the Panama Canal in perpetuity. Ironically, Mr. Reagan became a hero of the Republican right, by crusading for Mr. Goldwater 12 years ago. But the Senator said his protégé either misunderstood the facts about the Panama Canal or possessed a "surprisingly dangerous state of mind" about the use of brute force to resolve complex diplomatic issues.

Seizing on Mr. Goldwater's statements ("They gave us a hole big enough to drive a truck through," said ooa Ford aide), the President and his operatives are now gambling that they can muddle through to the nomination by persuading Republicans a Reagan nomination would mean 1964 all over again. "Do Americans really want to go to war over the Panama Canal?" they ask dubiously. "Do machinists in Detroit or farmers in Nebraska want their sons to fight another jungle war?"

Simultaneously, Mr. Reagan and his men are warning that it is Mr. Ford who would be the sure loser in November. They reason that Mr. Reagan's success in Southern primaries, four of which he has won, prove that Mr. Ford would be of little value in the South against Georgian Jimmy Carter. They contend, moreover, that, after 28 years in Washington, Mr. Ford represents the very establishment against which the 1976 electorate seems everywhere to be rebelling. And even though Mr. Reagan applauded the Nixon pardon, his aides theorize that he would not be blamed for it as, "rest assured," Mr. Ford would be Given the increasingly strident rhetoric and the growing evidence, as in a survey of Indiana voters last week taken by The New York Times and CBS-News, of a deepcoing ideotogical cleavage in the Grand Old Party, it is not incooceivable that the Ford and Reagan camps were forging self-fulfilling propheries. Whichever side wins, the other has already made a plausible case that it would stand a slim chance Nov. ?

Usually, Washington Does Only What Seems Necessary

Kissinger Inches Toward A 'Rich-Poor' Policy

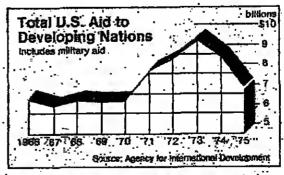

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH

PARIS—As a cootioental power with more than adequate food supplies, natural resources and technology, the United States, perhaps better than any other nation, could surviye a period of economic warfare. Yet, as oil price increases and several postwar recessions have shown, even American prosperity is oot immune to damage.

Enlightened self-interest has brought about fundamental changes in the policy of the United States towards developing countries. Basically Washington is now willing to go part way towards meeting their demands for new mechanisms to achieve a better division of the world's wealth, though still within the traditional framework and without the drastic economic restructuring poor nations want.

Both these inclinations were apparent last week in Nairobi at the fourth United Nations Conference on Trade and Development where the United States proposed establishment of a $1 billion resources bank to channel more capital into raw material projects and to help moderate commodity price fluctuations. Both morality and practical interest, said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, point towards a "dedicated enterprise of cooperation." He was the first American Secretary of State to address the trade group, one sign of the importance the United States now attaches to the exercise in detente between the rich and the poor.

There had been early indications of this change in attitude last September when the United States at the United Nations, agreed to take measures to insure economic security of the developing outions against cycles that devastate their export earnings and undermine development. In January, the International Monetary Fund expanded a compensatory financing facility, as Washington had proposed, to make several billion dollars available to stabilize commodity export earnings.

While the Uoited States response to the poor nations has been positive, Mr. Kissinger bas been criticized for ignoring world economic conditions until they become critical. In Paris a week before the Nairobi meeting opened, developing countures accaused a "few" of the rich industrial countries, including the United States, of delaying progress on the North-South negotiations that have been dragging on since early this year.

Their strong statement indicated a barely submerged fury at the pressures placed upon them toreduce key demands on raw materials and debt. They warned that unless concessions were made in Nairobi, the dialogue between haves and have-nots could be broken off.

What many see—despite Mr. Kissinger's apparent concessions in Nairobi—as a faltering, piecemeal policy towards the developing world reflects both the political scene in the United States and Mr. Kissinger's preoccupation with relationships among the major powers.

"There is oo real policy towards the Third World," an American banker said privately, "Except to deal with emergencies as they arise and to dole out just enough to prevent a blowup."

According to United Nationa figures, there are about 700 million people in Asia, Africa and Latin America who are destitute, and Mr. Kissinger is seen as conducting essentially a bolding operation during an American election year.

In the absence of commodity agreements, some un-

In the absence of commodity agreements, some underdeveloped producers have aspired to imitate the oil exporting states by trying to form cartels to force prices bigher. While it is unlikely that they would equal the success of the oil states (no other raw material is so heavily concentrated in the developing world), such action threatened to be disruptive.

The United States has been chiefly interested in assuring adequate supplies, while the developing world'a main aim has been to improve terms of trade, to get earnings from their primary products at least to keep up with the inflated prices of manufactured imports. Guaranteed oil supplies at prices derived from internationally agreed guidelines and a steady flow of petrodollars into Western economies have been the principal goal of American foreign economic policy since the oil embargo.

Aware of the overwhelming American interest in oil, the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Couotries sought to use their oil power to improve relations with nonoil developing countries. Strategy was to make oil power into the lever that would pry coocessions from the West on behalf of the poorer countries.

But conditions have changed. Because of the recession, there is on shortage of oil, and some experts wooder whether the oil cartel will be able to hold its price unity.

Against the background of reduced bargaining power among the developing nations and little apparent sympathy in the United States for the cause of the developing world, many now question whether enough can be done to reduce economic and political turbulence on the planet in the final quarter of this century.

Congress Fails To Override Day Care Veto

Unexpectedly, the Senate has failed overrida President Ford's veto of bill to provide $125 million for child ly care centers to meet Federal safeand staffing standards. Because of e failure, many centers will have to se unless the Department of Health. tucation and Welfare declines to enree the standards, or Congress quick-passes a new bill acceptable to Mr.

The Economy: Mixed Reports

The April statistics on employment and wholesale prices provide few surprises and some evidence that recovery from the recession is proceeding steedily, if not dramatically.

The unemployment rate for April re-.mained at the March rate of 7.5 percent, levelling off after five straight. months of decline. But economists found more significance in the growth in the absolute number of persons employed. That total expanded by 707,000 oo April to 87,399,000, which was considered strong confirmation of the robustness of the recovery. The unemployment rate stayed the sama because of the entry ioto the labor market of new job seekers.

The Wholesala Price Index rose by 0.8 percent in April, the largest increase in the last aix months. The relatively large jump was expected, however, because tha increases for the first quarter of this year were considered unrealistically small and unlikely to continue. The April rise was also not considered a sign of resurgent inflation because the prices of industrial goods rose only slightly; most of the increase was due to temporarily higher ferm prices.

There is no direct statistical relationship between wholesale prices and retail prices, although the two teod to move together over loog periods

The Navy Citing Soviet Strength

The Ford Administration bas asked Congress for extra funds for a shipbuilding program that it says is necessary to prevent the Soviet Union from achieving naval superiority over the United States. But questions have been raised in Congress about the accuracy of the Administration's estimates of Soviet naval strength and about the kind of ships that the United States Navy ought to huild.

The Administration presented the Senate Armed Services Committee last week with e revised shipbuilding proposai for fiscal 1977, asking for $1.2 billion more than the $6.3 billion that was initially requested in January. The added funds were necessary, Defense Secretary Donald H: Rumsfeld said, to match expanding Soviet naval con-

To support its appropriation request, the Administration had provided Congress with statistics showing that tha Soviet Union now possesses a fleet with 20 percent more "Major surface combatants" than the United States. However, Senator Patrick J. Leahy, a Vermoot Democrat obtained from the Pentagon previously classified data which he says indicates that many of these ships are relatively insignificant

Despite these differences in estimating Soviet strength, the Congressional Armed Services Committees do not seem aversa to giving the Pentagon more funds for shipbuilding. There is a disagreement, however, between the House Armed Services Committee and the Administration about what to do with the funds.

The House committee has already added about $1 billion to the original shipbuilding request, but it wants much of the money spent on a relatively few nuclear-powered vessels, while the Administration wishes to build up the fleet's numbers with more of the cheaper conventional craft. The committee's position has apparently been influenced by Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, a longtime advocate of nuclear warships, who has also been trying to persuade the Senata committee to the same view.

Admiral Rickover argues that nuclear ships, with their greater speed range and combat endurance, are essential to the Nevy's mission of protecting sealanes and projecting American power globally. The Administration, which proposes to spend a total of $38 billion on the Navy next year, maintains that it is at least as important to have an adequate number of ships and that nuclear vessels are too costly to produce in sufficient num-

Ford's Stamp On Food Stamps

The Ford Administration, which believes that the Federal food stamp program includes too many people and is too costly, has carried out its promise to try to reduce the number of recipients by altering the program's regulations without waiting for an expected reform measure from Congress. The new regulations are to take effect

The Administration apparently acted now in order to effect immediate cuts in food stamp expenditures by elimioeting about five million of the nineteen million recipients and reducing benefits to five million more. The Administration estimates that the new regulations: will cut the cost of the $5.8 billion program by $1.2 billion.

The new regulations would disqualify any nonwelfare family of four whose annual take-bome earnings, after e standard deduction, was more than $5,500, the current official poverty ceiling: That would include families known as the "working poor," wbo earn only slightly more than the ceiling.

By changing the regulations, the Administration also apparently hopes to pressure Congress into moving quickly to reduce the food stamp program by law. Some reduction seems likely to be passed, because both conservatives and liberals agree that too many persons are now ellgible. But liberals are strongly opposed to eliminating the working poor. The Senate has alreedy passed a reform measure that would keep such families on the rolls. Various reform proposals are still being considered in committee in the House.

A Veto for Military Aid

A $4.4 billion military aid bill has been vetoed by President Ford because be believed that it infringed upon the constitutional power of the executive branch to determine foreign policy. A number of countries including Israel, will be denied funds they expected until Congress approves another bill acceptable to the President.

The President objected strongly to provision in the bill that would have allowed Congress to block e proposed major sale of arms to a foreign country by a concurrent resolution of both Houses. Mr. Ford contended that the provision, the so-called "legislative veto," placed "impermissible shackles" on a President's constitutional authority to deal with other governments.

Supporters of the provision in Congress had argued that it was e constitutionally ecceptable method of increasing Presidential accountability to the legislative branch in foreign policy. Tha War Powers Act of 1973 established a similar procedure for Congress to restrict the President's deployment of combat forces overseas.

Minnesota's Partial Victory

The State of Minnesota has won a subsidiary victory in a 6-year-old environmental lawsuit against the Reserve Mining Corporation, which the stete eccuses of polluting Lake Superior. A Federal judge bas fined the corporation more than $1 million for dumping mining wastes in the lake and for violating court rules during the liti-

The state, however, still has not achieved its main objective, forcing the corporation to find another way of disposing of the residue from its iron-ore mining operations. Minnesota, along with Wisconsin and Michigan, has contended in court that asbestos fibers in the waste are a cancer-causing agent that contaminates water used for drinking in communities on the lake. The corporation argues that the risk of cancer has not been establiahed by medical evidence.

The judge who fined the corporation has ordered the parties to try to find a mutually satisfactory resolution of the dispute. Minnesota officials are now studying proposals for an on-land dumping site. The company, meanwhile, intends to appeal tha fine.

The Jackson Campaign: An Exercise in How to Undo It

By DOUGLAS E. KNEELAND

In the political handicappers' early line, Senetor Henry M. Jackson of Washington, though bardly an odds-on favorite, was almost a sure thing to make it through all the primaries and show up at the finish line, the July 12th Democratic convention in New York. He was a rock, colorless but stubborn and well-financed.

When the end came recently with his withdrawal from "active pursuit" of the nomination, Scoop Jackson was still a rock. He sank fast in the unpredictable political waters of 1976 and scarcely left a ripple.

It was one thing for Terry Sanford, Lloyd Bentsen, Miltoo Shapp, Sargent Shriver, Fred Harris, or even Birch Bayh to get out. But Scoop Jackson, the dogged and recognized poor of such Senate warhorses as Hubert H. Humphrey and Edmund S. Muskie?

What went wrong for the man who seemed to have learned his lessons from a bungled, amateuriah campaign in 1972 and to heve taken great pains over the last four years to avoid the worst mistakes of that disappointing effort? For one thing, as the clicbé goes, just as generals always seem to be fighting the last war, politicians have a way of recumning the last campaign, as if nothing much had changed in the nation's mood or desires in four years. Thet was certainly true of Scoop Jeckson. Having watched Senator George McGovern's long, arduous eriort and meticulous organization in the primaries pay off with the 1972 nomination, Mr. Jackson set our early and put together a strong national staff well over a year ago. But he also recalled Senator Muskie's 1972 difficulties as an early front-runner, and consequently took great care not to peak too soon. He shanned the Maskie strategy of seeking endorsements and concentrated his entra-Senatorial activities on fundralsing. By the beginning of the political year, he had built a benk balance that was larger than any other Democratic candidate's,

Mr. Jackson and his advisers were sure they had a clear view of the path through the minefield of primaries that would lead to the nomination. Convinced that no one would have the 1,505 delegates needed for a first ballot nomination, they planned a campaign they considered "cost-effective" in terms of money and of time, ignoring states with small celagate yields in which, they thought, the other contenders would fight it out, and quickly reduce their number to a liberal opponent on the left and Governor Wallace on the right, leaving Senator Jackson as the only logical compromise nominee in the broad middle of the party.

"The name of the game is delegates," they said over and over, discounting the cosmetic value of popularity contests in smaller states. "No Democratic candidate can be nominated or elected who can't carry the big industrial states," they argued. Mr. Wallace, they thought, would accumulate e block of 500 or 600 delegates, making brokering almost inevitable. But, they believed, fear of disruption by the Wallace delegates would make it easier to rally others, quickly around their man.

Under a Shadow

The lively shadow of Hubert Humphrey was always there, and a good deal of Jackson support would obviously beve to come from people who hed had e long love affair with Mr. Humphrey. The Jackson forces were convinced they had to do two things to overshadow the thadow: win a couple of big ones early to prove their candidate. was not the loser be appeared to be in 1972, and dem onstrate that his acknowledged lack of charisma was not an insurmountable bandicap. "The charisma of confidence" became a Jackson alogan.

They evolried New Hampshire like the plague, another lesson learned from Senator Muskie's 1972 debacle. Mr. Muskie bad demonstrated e-strong candidata could win in New Hampshire and still lose in the long run if he did not win by enough. The Jackson camp figured their Senator would risk too much by finishing second, or worse, there." So they put their efforts in the season's second primary,"

The Jackson people bad not paid a lot of attention to Jimmy Carter, even after others began doing so when he won in early caucuses, such as the one in Iowa. When he won New Hampsbire, they still didn't worry too much. They would get him in Massachusetts and presumably, George Wallace would destroy him in the South. They did, but Governor Wallace dido't.

There was, after all, always the big-state strategy. New York, Scoop Jackson's trump card, would open up a string of victories, in Peonsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, and finally, on super-Tuesday, Juna 8, in California, Ohio and New Jersey, Scoop Jackson won New York. And nothing happened. He went down in the polls, Jimmy Carter went up. Second-guessing preconvention polls is always risky, but et least part of the reason was that Mr. Jackson's New York win wasn't the landslide he'd predicted and Mr. Carter's wins, particularly that in Wisconsin the same day, appeared more dramatic.

The Jackson staff started bickering over strategy. The cash on hand was running low because of the failure of Congress to act to restore matching funds. An improving economy was making academic Mr. Jackson's New Deal-like promises to pull the nation out of recession.

In what seemed to be almost a panic, the Senator won the endorsement of Pennsylvania labor forces by conceding, in effect, that be was a stand-in for Senator Humphrey. In one respect, Senator Jeckson was right. But the candiste on the left. Representative Morris IIdall of A struggled without much success, and George Wallace barely created the semblance of a campaign on the right, Scoop Jackson, along with just about everyone else, had not seen Jimmy Carter coming and coming. His smile and broad-brush attacks oo the Washington establishment were rapiffly capturing Scoop Jeckson's middle ground.

Bumper Crops Mean Lower Prices, and Farmers Blame Ford

Midwest's Politics of Weather

By SETH S. KING

As the Presidential primaries move through the western half of Middle America, the Republican candidates are contending with a particular kind of politics; that of rain and the Russians.

Rain at the right times in the Middle West will mean another year of enormous crops and falling income for grain farmers and small town merchants, many of whom blame the Ford Administration for their plight, And if it rains, only another round of large Russian grain purchases will prevent e price depressing surplus of wheat and corn this fall.

After one of the driest winters in recorded memory, It has started to rain again. So much fell over the wheat and corn belt states in the last three weeks that the drought threatening the winter wheat crop was checked, and what is expected to be the largest corn planting in 25 years has begun. Its potential is e record six billion bushel crop

Only a month remains before the winter wheat harvest begins In southwest Oklahoma and moves north into Kansas and Nebraska. The wheat still alive in these areas is nearing the point where little that is bad can happen to it. Although this year's crop will not be as large as last year's record breaker, it could still reach e bumper 2 billion bushels.

There have been some predictions, based on the 20-year sunspot cycla, of a drought in the Middle West this year. It has been 20 years since the drought of the mid-1950's and 40 years since the worst drought, in the mid-1930's. But if it rains whan it should this summer, the Russians would have to buy even more than the six million tons of wheat and corn (about 228 million bushels) they have promised to take each year to strengthen the market.

Each day that the weather conditions have held good has meant another decline in wheat and corn prices. The signs of abundant supplies have increased the restiveness of Middle West grain farmers and the small town merchants who sell to them, intensifying their resentment of President Ford for stopping grain sales to the Russlans last August. In the last decade the size of the farm vote has shrunk. But there are still meny merchants and farm suppliers who tend to vote the way the farmers do, and in a close contest in the farm states this combined vote often decides the

The politics of the farm states have changed in recent vears. The trans-Mississippi states of Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas were once solidly Republican. But lately the Republican dominance of the statehouses has eroded, and the party has had increasing difficulty in winning Congressional elections. The states of Missouri and Minnesota hava always been more Democratically inclined. This seven-state region now has four Democrats and three Republicans in its governors' mansions. It sends nine Democrats and five Republicans to the Senate, and divides its 35 seats in the House of Representatives among 20 Democrats and 15 Republicans. Most of the latter are conservatives.

From the perspective of farm voters in these states, there is little apparent difference between President Ford and Ronald Reagan on free agricultural markets, although Mr. Reagan, taking a barder line toward the Soviet Union, has said he would not shrink from using food as a diplomatic weapon against the Russians. Nevertheless, Mr. Reagan's strongest support in Missouri, Kansas and Iowa, where delegate caucuses are in progress, has come from the rural areas. In last week's Indiana primary, he got some of his largest majorities in the rural counties, and in next week's primary in Nebraska, an even larger agricultural state, the former California Governor's chances in that winner-take-ail voting may well rest with the farmers.

Looking beyond the primaries, the rain and the Russians could also bave an effect oo the November voting. In 1948, a year of rising grain surpluses and falling prices, the farm states overturned the political odds and elected Harry S. Truman. In 1958, another year of good weather and mountainous surpluses, the Middle West expressed its resentment of President Eisenhower's Agriculture Secretary by electing many Democrats to Congress. What happened those years supports the political assumption in the Middle West that farmers usually vote Republican when they are satisfied and Democratic when they are mad.

The Job Bills Will Be Issues, Not Programs

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM

WASHINGTON—Much of the talk on Capitol Hill in tha next few months is going to be about jobs, but the best guess is that no legislation will be forthcoming. Instead, tha Democrats who control Congress will be laying tha foundation for what is expected to be a major domestic issue io the November election campaign.

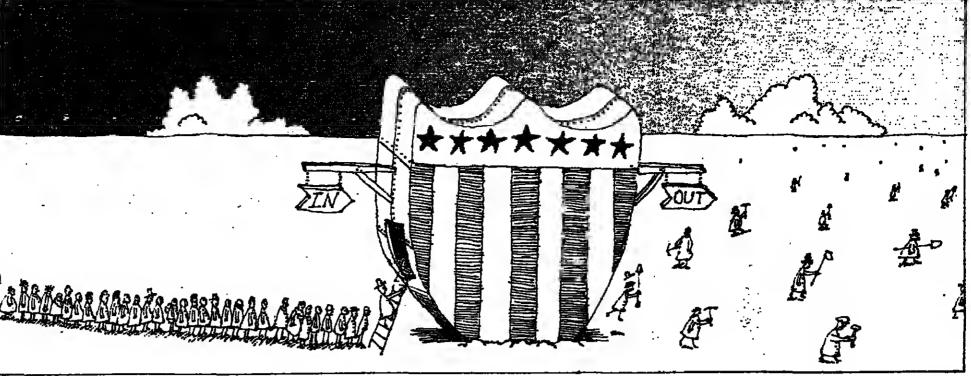

Republicans, including President Ford, Ronald Reagan and those in Congress, believe that the 7.5 percent unemployment rate for April announced last week by the Labor Department is such an improvement over tha 8.9 percent rate of last May that even the current Government programs of extended unemployment compensation and public service jobs can safely be phased out. New Government initiatives to promote jobs, they assert, would only serve to spur inflation.

On the other hand. Democrats on the campaign trail and in Congress believe that the rate is still much too high—"a human tragedy," Senator Hubert H. Humphrey has called it—and they are pushing for major new Government assistance to lower the rate further.

The efforts of the Congressional Democrats to create more jobs are proceeding along two parallel tracks. First, there is the so-called Humphrey-Hawkins Bill, which would commit the Federal Government to providing jobs for all Americans who want to work. Then, there is a multibillion-dollar authorization bill designed to stimulate employment through public works projects and antirecession grants to states and localities.

Both bills may well be passed by Congress this summer. If they are, they will surely be vetoed by President Ford, and there is little prospect that Congress could override ha veto of either one. Nonetheless, tha provisions of these bills are likely to be the core of the economic platform adopted at the Democratic National Convention in July and to provide spice for political debate for the rest of

for its chief sponsors. Senator Humphrey and Representativa Augustus F. Hawkins of California. The bill is the economic manifesto of liberal Democrats, a measure that embodies not only their policy but also their philosophy. It proclaims "the right of all adult Americans able, willing and seeking work to opportunities for useful paid employment at fair rates of compensation."

The measure would set as a goal a 3 percaot rate of adult unemployment, the equivalent of a national rate of from 4 to 4.5 percent, depending on the definition of "adult," to be reached within the next four years. If the goal could not otherwise be reached, and economists believe it almost certainly could not, the legislation would mandate a series of job-creating programs, including public service jobs, special youth employment programs and grants to local and state governments to take up the slack.

A Question of Cost

Senator Humphrey and his colleagues have been reluctant to place a price tag on the bill, but economists on Congressional staffs and elsewhere bave estimated its annual cost at over $20 billion. The bill's advocates believa that the bulk of thet outlay would be offset by increased tax revenues from the newly employed and a reduction in Government expenditures for unemployment compensation and welfare benefits.

President Ford has termed the bill "an election-year boundoggle," and even some liberal economists are wary of it, wondering whether it is wise to set specific numerical targets for the jobless rate when overall economic conditions are so uncertain. Moreover, many analysts fear that the goals could not be achieved without dangerously high inflation or rigid wage and price controls.

Still, the measure bas broad political appeal and will undoubtedly gain still further support as it undergoes refinements. The House Education and Labor Committee adopted the bill by a party-line vote lest week, and a full House vote is planned in the next two weeks. On a test vote during consideration of the budget resolution last month, the House approved seed money for the jobs bill, but the margin was much less than the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override a veto. A Senate subcommittee is scheduled to begin hearings on the metter next

The second job bill, allocating funds for public works projects and special grants to communities with exceptionally high unemployment, was conceived in the depths of the recession. It was finally passed by Congress last winter, but the Senate failed by three votes to override President Ford's veto. Mr. Ford, at the time, scorned the measure as "little more than an election-year pork barrel."

Now, Congressional Democrats are back for a second try with a slightly scaled down version. The bill would authorize up to $2:5 billion for such public works projects as buildings, waterways and parks. The total amount of the grants would depend on the national unemployment rate. Another part of the bill would authorize up to $1.4 billion worth of grants to states and communities with especially high unemployment to enable them to maintain existing services, such as police protection and garbage collection. The actual cost of the measure would depend on both national and local rates of joblessness.

The problem with this bill, in the eyes of the Republicans, is that it takes tima to start and then complete a large public works project. By the time construction is under way, they argue, the unemployment situation that the project was intended to rectify may have changed considerably. Despite this objection, the legislation was approved by the Senate last month and is scheduled for House action this month.

Whatever the economic arguments, the political and philosophical differences between the Democrats and the Republicans are likely to become more and more apparent as the election year proceeds. The Democrats are more concerned about unemployment; the Republicans about inflation. The Democrats want direct Government aid to the needy; the Republicans prefer incentives to private businesses to help the needy. The Democrats place a low priority oo a balanced budget; the Republicans believe that few matters are as important.

Many Democrats candidly acknowledge that they do not really care whether the jobs bills are enacted this year. If Congress passes them and the President vetoes them, the Democrats predict, the result will be political disaster for the Republicans in the fall. Republicans dispute that prediction, believing that the country is with them on this issue. "The real vote woo't come on the floor of the House or the Senate," said Representative Marvin L. Esch, who is simultaneously leading the Republican opposition to the job bills in the House and running for the Senate from Michigan. "The real vote will come tha first week of November."

· In Summary

Italian Voters Will Have A Clear Choice

The main issues in the Italian elections scheduled for June 20 and 21 will be oot so much the faltering economy or controversial social questions such as divorce and abortion, but whether the best party to handle them is the Christian Democratic Party or the Communists.

The Christian Democrats, after 30 years in power, are split into factions and losing popular support, if the trend of recent local elections is a guide. Their conservativa stands on abortion and divorce have been especially unpopular with women voters. This disaffection could be crucial because in the last general election in 1972 the party received 60 percent of its support from women.

The party leadership met last week to try to arrive at a campaign strategy but, despite much talk of change, the Christian Democrats still have no answer for the basic question: How can a party that has been in power for 30 years sound credible when it promises reforms?

That leaves them with the choica of trying to frighten voters by asserting that any vote not for the Christian Democrats is a vote for Communism. Benigno Zaccagnini, the Christian Democrats' leader, sounded the theme when he said: "If I were certain that the Communist Party would yield power after once reaching government, I would not bave any problems of principle. But I am persuaded that this would be a road without return."

The Communists insist that in office they would approve multiparty democracy and that they would respect Italy's membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the European Economic Community. They have been more vague on possibla actions if they fail to win an outright majority; in regional elections last year the Communists and Christian Democrats each got a third of the

The official Communist policy is that in the so-called "historical compromise" the party would share power with Christian Democrats. There has also been talk of a "popular front" with the smaller Socialist Party. But from the party leader, Enrico Berlinguer, down, the Communists are being cautious on these options at the momeot.

Not only Italians are wary of the outcome. The Russians are less than pleased by the Italian Communists' conciliatory statements about NATO, and the Americans have made no secret of their distrust of Mr. Berlinguer and his associates.

In the past, if the record of the Lockheed bribery scandals is correct, the Americans have funnelled money to most of the non-Communist parties in Italy. This time, some private-American money may still go through but official intervention is considered unlikely. Washingtoo's view is the chances of discovery for covert help are too great and open assistance might be counterproductive.

West Bank Debated at U.N.

The continued unrest on the Israelioccupied West Bank of the Jordan River, and the Israelis' reaction to the disturbances, have become the focus of a new debate at the United Nations.
The unrest and the debate will probably affect future Middle East peaca negotiations, and threaten to be disruptive to the reletionship between the United States and Israel and also among the Arab allies.

Anti-Israeli riots and demonstrations occur almost daily on the West Bank, creating a new pessimism among Israeli authorities.

The Israelis fear that the disturbances (following on the Palestinian nationalist victories in recent municipal elections) may bring about a change in Washingtoo's attitude toward the Palestinians. The Israelis do not expect any pressure to negotiate directly with the Palestinians until after the United States Presidential election, but they believe this restraint will end next year, regardless of whether the new Administration is Democratic or Republican

On an Egyptian initiative, the United Nations Security Council last week debated Israel's conduct in the West Bank and in Gaza. A previous debate on the matter, six weeks ago, ended with a United States veto of a resolution condemning the Israelis. A similar result is possible when a new vote is taken this week.

But, apart from the usual rhetoric, last week's session was notable because it underlined the continuing rivalry between Syria and Egypt for the allegiance of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

When Egypt signed a second Sinzi disengagement agreement with Israel, the Palestinians sided with the Syrians in asserting that Cairo had abandoned the confrontation with the Israelis. Since then, however, the Palestinians have differed with Syria over handling of the Lebanese crisis and have begun a rapprochement with Egypt. This new alignment showed up in last week's debate when the Egyptian delegate's speech combined praise for the Liberation Organization with implicit criticism of Syria's role in Lebanon.

The Economies of Britain and Italy

Rapid declines in the value of the Italian lira and the British pound, Europe's weakest currencies, have led the governments of those countries to introduce stern programs to stabilize their money, despite a potential for disturbing political side effects.

In Britain, tha 25 percent rate of inflation that prevailed last year—following the oil price increases and wage increases that frequently ran to 25 percent—has been reduced by baif. But last week, seeking to bring inflation down to 5 or 6 percent, the Labor Government and an unusual alliance of trade union leaders agreed to a wage package that would limit pay increase to 4.5 percent.

If the Government and the union leaders can make the package stick (some militant unions, such as the Welsh coal miners, are still demanding new 30 percent raises) the program will mean declining living standards for Britain's already hardpressed workers. The Government has offered tax concessions but there remains the possibility that the trade union rank and file will not approve the program. Rejection would be a major political setback for the new Prime Minister, James Callaghan, and could put even worse pressure on the pound, which has fallen since a year ago from $2.35 in relation to the American dollar to $1.82 last week.

The decline in the lira has been equally dramatic. Less than four months ago, the exchange rate was 680 lire to the dollar; last week it was 915 to the dollar.

To try to bolster the lira, the caretaker Government of Prime Minister Aldo Moro has imposed stringent curbs on foreign-exchange dealings. But those actions could worsen the present 30 percent Italian inflation rate and the 8 percent unemployment rate. Setbacks in those areas could have serious political implications for Mr. Moro and his beleaguered Christian Democratic Party.

Lebanon Elects A President

Syria's choice, Elias Sarkis, has been elected by Parliament as the new President of Lebanon, but a boycott of the election by a third of the deputies left open tha possibility that new large-scale fighting would break out.

The election of Mr. Sarkis to succeed President Suleiman Franjieh was a victory for the right-wing Christian bloc to which both belong. It was also a victory for the Syrians, who had supported Mr. Sarkis over Raymond Edde, the choice of the Moslem-leftist coalition.

The principal loser in the political struggle over the Presidency was apparently Kamal Jumblatt, the Socialist Druse chieftain, who beads the Moslemleftist alliance. Ironically, it was Mr. Jumblatt and his colleagues who had first demanded the removal of Mr. Franjieh, calling him the main barrier to ending the civil war that has taken 20,000 lives in the past year.

But the Syrians, seeing Mr. Sarkis as the best choice to reunite Lebanon's factions and to prevent the country from being torn into discrete Christian and Moslem sections, threw their weight behind him. Coupled with the influence of the Palestinian guerrillas, that was enough to assure his election.

Quake in Italy

Another earthquake has occurred in the highly seismic zone that runs from Turkay through Greece and up the Adriatic coasts of Italy and Yugoslavia. At least 635 persons died in northern Italy, where last week's shock was centered.

The quake was measured at 6.5 on the Richter scale. A quake of similar intensity in 1963 took 1,100 lives in the Yugoslev city of Skopje, which is also located in the region known to geologists as the Valdar Zone.

Dozens of towns and villages in northeast Italy were destroyed and the shock was felt in at least seven other countries. Ancient monuments and buildings in such cities as Venice were rocked and some damage was reported to the art treasures.

Spain's Liberal Reform Proposal

The Spanish Government has announced details of a political reform program that would have been unthinkable during the years of the Franco dictatorship. The program is even more liberal than a general outline presented earlier by Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro (although it is not liberal enough for the new and robust opposition in Spain).

Under the new proposals, which will be submitted to the present Parliament and to a national referendum in October, Spain would have a bicameral legislature. The entire lower house and most of the senate would be elected.

And for the first time, the Government recognizes the right of workers to form unions outside the state-run syndicates, which are made up of workers and their employers. The syndicates have been the cause of much labor unrest in Spain.

labor unrest in Spain.

Mr. Arias and his Cabinet colleagues have tried to blend continuity from the Franco regime with modest bberalization but their program does not go far enough or quickly enough for the opposition. There were new calls last week for his resignation. José Maria Gil Robles, the Christian Democratic leader, said: "The Government should give way to another . . . capable of resolving what it cannot resolve."

Still No Sea-Law Agreements

After eight weeks, the third session of the United Nations Law of the Sea Conference has anded in New York without agreement on the major issues, and the 1,400 delegates from 150 nations bave agreed to return in August to try again.

Subjects still unsettled include the powers of coastal states in the 200-mile "economic zones" off their coasts, demands of landlocked and otherwise geographically disadvantaged states for a share in fish and mineral resources in the oceans, restrictions on marine research, and control of mining deep on the ocean floor.

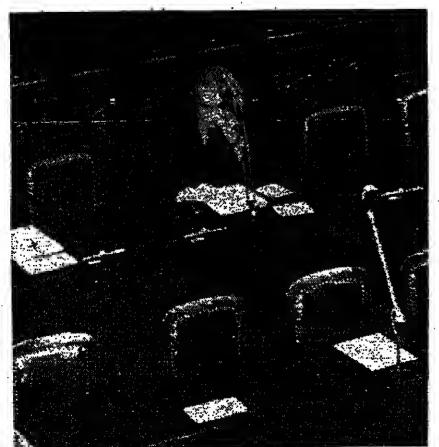

There has been some progress on the deep-sea mining question, at least partly in response to Uoited States pressure. American delegates bad sought an international treaty on the subject before Congress unilaterally gives American firms permission to exploit ocean minerals. But such a treaty did not come from the New York meetings, just as it had not from the previous deliberations in Geneva and Caracas.

MADRID - The Spanish Government is trying to perform a kind of political alchemy and, like most alchemists, is running into problems of both practicality and credibility. The attempts to transform a Fascist-inspired system of authoritarianism that has lasted for 37 years into e democratic one is threatening the country'e ability to survive.

Those who worked within the system established by the late Generalissimo Francisco Franco and prospered. from it are not disposed to liquidate it and their posi-tions as well. Those who fought against the system and suffered from it are not disposed to perpetuate it after Franco's death.

This basic strain means that every time the Government makes a reformist statement or move, it alienates can and is all the more hostile to the Mooarchy because it was imposed by Franco. In two provincial visits, King Juan Carlos I bas demonstrated personal popularity but the opposition wants the country to have a chance to determine, by a vote, what form of government it wishes. There are traditional monarchists who favor the King's father, the Count of Barcelooa, who has not yet renounced his claims to the throne. The right in general is backing King Juan Carlos precisely because he was Franco's personal choice, but it could easily turn against him if he shows a strong will to make changes in Spain.

Political Structures-The opposition views a party system as essential to any democracy. But this belief runs counter to the whole philosophy and practice of the system oow in force and means the end of the state-ruo National Movement as the ooly framework for political action. The opposition is also insisting that oo party subscribing to democratic principles and to nooviolent methods should be excluded. This means inclusion of the Communist Party, in particular. but the entire Francoist right is firmly opposed. Regions-With the death of Franco, regions such as their demands for autonomy and, in the case of some Bason extremists, complete separation. The opposition as a wh has called for a federal state with each region inving own institutions. Regional agitation has been continual an in the case of the Basques it has again become bloom with a return to murder and kidnapping after a period of quiet. For conservatives in Madrid separatism or federalism means the end of Spain as a nation and they will fight it means the end of Spain as a nation and they will fight it perhaps more strongly than any other issue.

Labor Continuing inflation and a strong economic recession have created labor unrest and this in turn has encouraged rejection by millions of industrial workers of the state controlled syndicate organization as unrepresentative and incapable of defending their interests. Illegal labor groups emerging under Communist, Socialist, and other leftist auspices are demanding freedom to organize while a strongly entrenched syndicate bureaucracy is fighting changes that smell its doom. changes that spell its doom.

The heritage of dictatorship has left a fairly well defined left and right in Spain. On the left are Communists, Socialists and Social Democrats. They are anticanitalistic anticierical and find their main support among industrial and agricultural workers, students and intellectuals. On the right are most of the Christian Democrats, conservatives in the Roman Catholic Church and those in the military, gov. ernment and business who are identified with Franco or are unwilling to dismantle his regime.

a bicameral legislature whose partly corporate upper house would have the same powers as the popularly elected lower house. In the program announced by the government last week, a concession was made to its liberal wing by making most of the Senate subject to direct election. The extent of the concessions announced by the Government last week on the right of labor association is unclear and opposition labor groups are expected to remain dubious until they see what happens to the official syndicates. The Cabinet gave no indication that it was prepared to abolish them, which is the essential opposition demand.

contradictions within it and the conflicting pressures on it. Prime Minister Arias is a Francoist from youth and if he is convinced of the need for some change, he slso finds it difficult to break with the past. Manuel Fraga Iribarne, the Interior Minister, one of the main driving forces for reform, nevertheless has an authoritarian streak in him that makes him distrusted by most of the left. with South Africa. There are reports that Zambia, which last year ordered the guerrillas into front-line camps in Mozambique after internecine feuding led to the assassination of a oatiooalist leader, has agreed to open a "third front" in the northwest. The new command structure is said to have the firm backing of the four African Presidents who confer frequently on the Rhodesian conflict: Samora Machel of Mozambique, Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, Julius Nyerere

The military turn has not lessened the long-standing feud between Mr. Nkomo and Bishop Muzorewa, with its origins in old power struggles and tribal allegiances. Recently, the two have been jockeying to gain influence with the guerrillas but neither seems to have succeeded. Mr. Nkomo'a credentials have been tarnished because he negotiated constitutional talks with Mr. Smith. Bishop Muzorewa, who condemned the talks, was excluded from an 18-member military command structure even though he is

The National Union forces have reportedly gained ascendency. Another figure of prominence is Robert Mugabe, e former teacher who was detained by the Smith regime for II years. Although he is isolated from the Nationalist quarrels, in the Mozambique resort of Quelimane, he has a substantial following among the young fighters.

Some observers feel that the stepped-up tempo of warfare could submerge the factional differences that hava bedeviled Rhodesian nationalism for a decade. But others argue that as decisions must be made and as battles are won or lost, fissures among the "third force" will reappear. John Darnton is a correspondent for The New York Times

J.S.-Syrian Cooperation Has Strict Limits

By HENRY TANNER

-EIRUT - The Lebanese civil war has given rise to both ion and cooperation between the United States and a. The two governments have at times been unavowed eners. At other times, they have been acting as enemies. she paradox started to emerge in the early days of the sinese war when Washington expected Syria to interon the side of the Lebanese Moslems and the Paless. Instead, Syria becama the protector of tha estabdd Lebanese authority in the person of the conservative stian President Sulayman Franjieh. It was then that retary of State Henry S. Kissinger described the Syrian as "constructive." This has remained the American Tithough oeither side bas admitted it publicly, the United is is known to bave engaged in active "crisis managein January when the Syrians first intervened militarily ebanon by sending Syrian-controlled Palestinian units ss the border. Diplomats in Beirut and in Damascus sre inced that fairly precise signals went from Damascus ashington and from there to Jerusalem making it clear the operatioo, due to its nature and limited size, did not constitute a military threat to Israel and therefore required no Israeli response.

When the Lebanese Interior Minister, Camille Chamoun, charged that Syrian troops had invaded Lebanon, the first answer, aignificantly, came from Israeli authorities who declared that there bad been no such invasion, although the Palestinian units were known to include many Syrian officers

A month ago, when the Syrian Army openly entered Lebanon for the first time, the American role appears to have been more difficult. There were indications then that American officials were far less certain that they knew tha dimension of the Syrian move and the limits of Israeli tolerance. The United States reportedly tried to dissuade Syria from using its own troops and when that failed, urged the Syrians to bold the intervention to a minimum. In general terms, the United States has been favoring Syria's political action in Lebanon but oot its military action.

The arrival of L. Dean Brown, the special American envoy, complicated the relationship between the two governments in Lebanon and rekindled Syrian auspicions that had never been far beneath the surface. A Syrian official, asked whether he thought the American action was helpful or harmful at that time, answered: "Perhaps both."

al-Assad, the Arab nationalist intervening in Lebanon as the "Arab brother" of the Lebanese and Palestinians, could not possibly concede that he had benefitted from American cooperation. However, he did not want to disturb relations with Washington. In a speech to the youth organization of his party at that time, he said Syria had "complete freedom of action," thus rejecting any charge at bome or abroad that he had permitted either Israel or the United States to impose any limits on his action in Lebanon.

More recently Syrian statements have been critical of the Brown mission, accusing the United States of engaging in e "plot" to prolong the civil war and thus reduce pressure on

Some diplomats believe that these attacks were prompted mainly by the fact that Mr. Brown had several apparently friendly talks with Kamal Jumblat, the Drusa leader who is the chief villain here oow in Syrian eyes. "The Syrians may well suspect that the Americans ere plotting against them with Jumblat," a diplomat said.

Contrary to what might heve been expected, the fragile and sometimes tense American-Syrian relationship in Lebanon has not stimulated cooperation in other fields, according to diplomsts. Consultations between the two governments concerning the Arab-Israeli conflict have been slowed by the Lebanese experience, and so bas the development of bllateral relations between Washington and Damascus, these diplomats say.

The United States, after all, was the prime mover behind the second Israeli-Egyptian disengagement agreement that the Syrians regard as detrimental to their national interest because it frees Israel from military pressure on its southern froot. In the Syrian view, Washington, like Jerusalem, was intent on dividing the Arab world by splitting off Egypt and keeping any reference to Syria and the Palestinians out of

But, compared to what they were before the October war of 1973, Syrian-American relations are much improved. Syria had broken off diplomatic relations in 1967 and resumed them in early 1974.

Since then the volume of talks has increased steeply. American firms are considering the investment opportunities provided by President Assad's brand of economic liberalization. The Syrisns are eager to get American technology. And while their weapons come from the Soviet Union, they bave maintained their own dignified independence from Moscow politically and economically. For the first time since 1954 the United States is conducting an assistance program in Syria, to the tune of about $100 million annually. But in bilateral relations, as in the interaction in Lebsnon, the relationship remains cautious and precarious.

The responses that the Government has given to alleviate the divisive strains beve in turn created further ones. Thus the legislation introduced into the highly conservative Parliament is running into trouble. ### Not Much Hope For Carey's Broad Court Plan

In the last 30 years, dozens of proposals to reform New York State's court system have been mada, with little result. Governor Carey has now offered the Legislature the most comprehensive program to date, iocorporating coocepts held essectial by reform advocates. He is also expected to fail.

Time and legislative inclination are both against the Governor. The first reaction last week from leaders in Albany was that they probably could oot coosider such complex issues, offered as a constitutional amendment, in the mooth remaining before adjournment. Because an ameodment has to be - passed by two separately elected Legislatures before it can be voted upon in public referendum, failure to pasa the Carey program this year would delay adoption at least until 1979.

But legislators could make the time to look at the program if they chose to, and they might deal with parts of it. Ooe reason that court reform bas met resistance in the past, bowever, is that some changes would diminish the political influence of the party : clobbouses.

One of the Carcy proposals calls for judges to be appointed by the Gover-- ; nor rather than elected. The cominees would go first before screening panels, then would be subject to Seoate confirmation. Each judge would have to stand for a "retention election" two years after appointment. Voters would decide at the that time whether the judge would serve the remaining 12 years of a 14-year term.

The reasoning behind this proposal, the most cootroversial in the program, is that judgeships have been used in the past to award the party faithful. The proposal would seriously inhibit this political tradition, with which many politicians are obviously

The other major proposal would merge most courts-the Court of Claims, Surrogate, Family and New .. York Civil and Criminal Courts-into a Suprema Court, which would be a single statewide trial court. There is now a maze of courts with fragmented and conflicting jurisdictions. New Garbage has piled up in New York City because Sanitation Department workers have refused to cross picket lines; of apartment building workers. About 4,000 apartment buildings are affected by the strike, which is largely over wages.

York's two bighest courts, the Appellate Division and the Court of Appeals, would remain iotact, as would local village and district courts. Many members of the present State Supreme Court which is politically influential, are opposed because they feel the program may dilute the court's power.

Two other proposals, less controversial, concern financing (the state would fund the unifled court system) and judicial discipline.

In both New Jersey and Connecticut, judges are appointed by the governor. The Coonecticut legislature last week approved a bill to merge trial courts loto a single system. As in New York, the consolidation was designed to achieve flexibility and efficiency.

Tuition at City U. May Be Near

There are signs that Governor Carey and higher education leaders have decided that the better way to resolve the financial problems of the City University of New York is to impose tuition rather than abandon open admissions. For weeks, political leaders and educators have been urging the others to make the decision. Last week Governor Carey offered the Board of Higher Education a plan calling for tuition, and the board seems ready to go along, sharing responsibility for the

The Governor said that if the board imposed tuition he would offer additional state aid, the specific commitment educators have been seeking. The university would have $470 million to spend next year, still far below the $50S million it says it needs but far above the $360 million it was told to expect without tuition.

Tuition at the City University would be the same as that to be charged the State University io the fall, $750 a year for freshmen and sopbomores, $900 for juniors and seniors.

Students from families with anoual incomes of $10,000 and above would pay from $290 to $700 a year to attend City University if it follows State University tuitioo rates. Those from families whose earnings are below $10,000 a year would have little or no increased university cost.

The Troubled Austerity Plan

Mayor Beame's fragila three-year austerity plao, designed to eliminate a billion-dollar deficit, may already be in trouble. The Mayor learned last week that $55 million in Federal funds he had counted on would not be forthcoming, and there were indications that those who must approve the overall program were not satisfied with it and may demand greater cuts.

The city lost the Federal funds wheo the Ford Administration rejected the Mayor's request for permissioo to divert Federal housing subsidies from tenants in privately-owned housing to public bousing,

City officials said It was too early to tell how the austerity plan would be affected by the decision.

Mr. Beame's expectation of new Federal and state aid that has not yet been committed is troubling staff analysts of the Emergency Financial Control Board, set up by the state to oversee the city's bodget.

Stephen Berger, staff director of the Control Board, said deeper budget cuts might be oecessary. "I may be wrong, but it's difficult to approve a plao dependent oo external circumstances over which we have oo cootrol," he said, alluding to the Mayor's bope for greater Federal and state ald.

No Longer Much Talk of a Place on the National Ticket

Politically, Carey's Stock Has Nowhere To Go But Up

By LINDA GREENHOUSE

ALBANY—Just as spring has brought long-awaited relief from Albany's hard wioter, these spring days should also be brioging relief, even honor, to Governor Carey after his hard winter of fiscal crisis.

He has accomplished what six months ago looked unlikely if not impossible—a balanced state budget, a financial bailout of the state's debt-ridden borrowing agencies, the completion of the crucial $4 billion "spring borrowing," evan stability, however dearly bought, for New York City's fiscal

But instead of relief, spring has brought only more troubles for the Governor, different in their degree of urgency from the threat of default, but equally complex and intractable. His political leverage diminished by the continuing legal troubles of his state chairman, the city's fiscal rescue plan chipped away by almost daily reverses, Mr. Carey is faced with carping instead of gratitude and with an array of wearying problems.

On one day last mooth, the day the Senate overrode his veto of the Stavisky bill and turned down his nomination of Herman Schwartz as commissioner of correctioo, Mr. Carey became the first Goveroor in more than a century to have a veto overridden and the first in modern history to lose a major cominee.

His relations with the Assembly, controlled by members of his own party, deteriorated past an earlier point of frosty tolerance and into virtual warfare. His dreams, never acknowledged or openly pursued, of a place on the oational ticket have evaporated along with bis hopes of controlling a loyal uocommitted convection delegation. Instead Mr. Carey, the Democratic National Cooveotico's official host.

chose not even to be a delegate. For most of his 16 months in office, the Governor has begged preoccupation with the fiscal crises to explain why he bas been slow io making concrete legislative proposals to turn bis campaign slogans into programs and laws. The crisis behind him for now, Mr. Carey in the last few weeks has flooded the Legislature with program bills, most of which are fated to become bargaining chips or to be overlooked entirely in the Legislature's rush toward adjournment by the end of the month.

How the promise of spring turned empty for the Governor is explained partly as bad luck, partly political miscalculation, and partly the inevitable result of the summer, fall and winter that preceded it. It also has a great deal to do with Maurice H. Nadjari. Mr. Nadjari Is the Special State Prosecutor for New York City who retaliated against Mr. Carey's attempt to fire him in December by charging that the effort was motivated by the fact that the prosecutor was closing in on corruptioo in the Governor's inner circle. Four months later, Mr. Nadjari has offered evidence for oeither his charge oor the alleged corruption, but some of the Governor's closest advisers are convioced that the Nadjari episode is to blame for many of Mr. Carey's subsequent troubles.

"Nadjari changed everything," one said the other day.
"It's cast a pall over the whole Administration. It's weakened the Governor."

With Patrick J. Cuoningham, Mr. Carey's hand-picked state Democratic Chairman and principal liaison to the national Democratic Party, the chief target of the Nadjari investigation, the episode clearly oeutralized much of the added stature Mr. Carey might bave gained in the party by his successful campaign that turned President Ford around on the question of Federal loans to New York City.

How the episode bas affected his leverage within the Capitol itself is perhaps less obvious. But political power is a fragile structure built oo personal relationships and per ceived self-interest. What the Nadjari affair did was to stor the Governor's momentum at a crucial time, the start of his second legislative session. It put him on the defeosive, which other politicians-oot only enemies but colleagues as well-

. Other factors more directly uoder Mr. Carey's contro bave also contributed to bis spring blues. The Governor and his close advisers appear to have consisteotly underestimated the depth of the Assembly's disaffection and to bave dis played openly their lack of respect for Speaker Stanle-Steiogut, whose membership regards him highly.

And as the Governor is learning now with such no-wil issues as the city transit contract and the finances of Cit University, it is one thing to save New York from the brinl of death and another to have to pay the price of surviva The first role was heroic theater, galvanizing a confuse-city into acting as a community. But phase two of the fisca crisis has forced the Governor to step down from the bull pulpit and preside over the disintegration of that fleetin sense of community.

He has had to take oo much of the thankless task of beio Mayor-playing ooe group off against the other, monitorin the crescendo of voices now proclaiming that default woul have been preferable. There is no hooor in government b attrition, and oo rush of legislators to share the respons bility or the blame with the Governor.

But just as the seasons change, so do political fortune and it would be a mistake to draw too sweeping an permanent a cooclusion from the Governor's current trouble

A brainstorming session in the Governor's Mansion tw weeks ago between Mr. Carey and his top aides bad th improvement of legislative relations on its informal ageod. The session lasted until well past midnight, with no resolu tion, but it represented an acknowledgment that a proble exists. Until then, the chief response of the Governor's inne circle to questions about legislative relations had been denia bardly a useful starting point for improvement.

And while the 12-day legislative recess last month did no change any basic positions, it did cool tempers. Legislato came back to Albany eager to conclude the state's busioes

There is still a tortuous path from here to adjournmer But this Spring Governor Carey has to take his good nev where he can find it, and at this point there can be litt argument that a speedy end to this difficult session wou be good news for the Governor.

MEN AND WOMEN New research indicates that the danger of depletion of the earth's ozone layer by the fluorocarbons used in many spray caos and refrigerating systems may not be so grave as had been thought.

The ozone layer, 10 to 30 miles ibove the earth, screens out much straviolet radiation from the sun. Since 1974, Scientists and to an increase of skin cancers and harmful effects m the earth's climete. ### Nay-Saying Doomsday

Researchers at the Hudsoo Instiite have looked into the future and 1 WAY OF LE sund it more promising than that recast by the so-called doomsday

> A new Hudson study, "The Next 00 Years," challenges the Malthuan ootion, advanced by some ecoomists, scientists and sociologists, 14) rat population and economic rowth are on a collision course ith a scarcity of resources. The Hudson group, while concedig thet its evidence is sometimes fore suggestive than conclusive, contends that world economic - - For rowth will reach its height in the near future and population will soon peak, making the world's resources sufficient to meet the food. energy and raw material needs of the expected population of 15 billion by the year 2176, What is required, if disasters are to be averted, is better management and distribution of the resources, the group says.

The Hudson researchers read the evidence on supply and demand differently than do the doomsday theorists, and stress the long view rather than the short. They reject the idea that the world's resources are fixed; rather, they see an expanding potential in better use and recycling of existing resources and development of new ones as the world progresses economically, educationally and technologically.

The economic disparity among nations, the Hudson group argues, is the strongest force for accelerated development of the poor oations on the ground that it stimulates the transfer of technology, capital and

The group also says, on the basis of past trends, that as nations develop and become more afflueot, there is a lesseoing of their basic demands and a decline in population growth. Thus, the Hudson analysis suggests that both economic and population growth could stabilize in the 22d century at a high level of abundance.

More Use Of Sterilization

Sterilization, once regarded as an extreme and undesirable form of birth control, is now the fastestgrowing contraceptive technique among married Americans, a survey by the National Center for Health Statistics bas found.

By 1973, the latest year for which final data are evailable, 70 percent of married couples were using some method of contraception, and onefourth of them had chosen sterilizetioo, the survey shows. Sterilization has been second to the pill as the leading method since 1970, and about five out of eight operations are performed on men.

Trends depicted in the survey suggest that the percentage of couples using contraceptives and the proportion opting for sterilization are even higher now. Use of the pill, contraceptive sterilizatioo and the iotrauterine device has come about almost entirely during the last 15 years. Duriog that period, the birth rate in the United States dropped from 23.5 in 1961 to 14.9 in 1974, and the net population growth rate from 16.1 to 7.5 (the death rate declined from 9.3 to 9.1).

The size of the main child-bearing group fluctuated during the period, but in 1961 females in the 18 to 34 ege span (in which most fertility occurs) constituted 10.8 percent of the total population, and in 1974, 13.4 percent.

Possible Future Shocks

A setellite designed to make posaible extremely accurate measure; ments of the earth's surface has been launched by the United States. Because of its unusually high weight-903 pounds for a two-foot diameter-the satellite's orbit will re only allowly degraded by solar radiation and atmospheric pressure. and is expected to last at least eight million years. Therefore, a "message" has been attached to the satellité, for any future generations that may be able to recover it.

The "message" shows the earth's cography as it is thought to have been 225 million years ago, as it is now, and as it is expected to be 8.4 million years from now, by which time the satellite will be about four times as old as the oldest nrehistoric stone tools known to-

The satellite, called Lageos (Laser Geodynamic Satellite), is covered with laser reflectors. By beaming lasers at it from different points on earth, and recording the reflection's return time, increasingly accurate measurements of the satellite's orbit, and of the carth's surface, can be made. By the 1980's it is expected these measurements will be accurate enough to determme, for example, the rate et which North America and Europe are drifting apart. This motion is estimated at about half an inch a year.

A Weekday Jail Sentence

Eugene Hollander, once one of New York State's most prominent nursing home operators, has been sentenced by a Federal judge to spend five nights a week in jail for up to six months, and ordered to sever all connections with any occupation connected with the care or custody of other people. The sentence was in connection with his pleading guilty to Federal charges of infleting Medicare reimbursement claims. Mr. Hollander still faces sentencing on similar state charges involving Medicaid fraud.

Arrested, Arrested

Louise Lasser, who plays the vulnerable, bewildered housewife in television's popular late-night soap opera, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," has been arrested on a charge of possession of cocaine. The arrest resulted from an altercetion in a Los Angelcs boutique that wound up with Miss Lasser's arrest on an old traffic warrant. When Miss Lasser's purse was searched, a vial allegedly containing cocaine was found. She was released after posting of $1,631 bond.

Four previous limes the novels of Saul Bellow had been considered for Pulitzer Prizes. Each time, the awards had eluded him. Now his latest oovel, "Humboldt's Gift," has won this year's prize for fiction. Ironically, one of the characters in "Humboldt's Gift" had some bitter things to say about the Pulitzer prize; Mr. Bellow himself, however, admitted to being "pleased, tickled, amused." Other Pulitzer winners were Paul Horgan for history; R. W. B. Lewis for biograpby: John Ashbery for poetry; Robert N. Butler for general nonfiction; Ned Rorem for music; Sydney H. Schanberg of The New York Times for international reporting; Walter W. (Red) Smith of The Tlmes for commentary; Gene Miller of The Miami Herald for general local reporting; Jemes Risser of The Des Moines Register for national reporting; Philip P. Kerby of The Los Angeles Times for editorial writing: Tony Auth of The Philadelphia Inquirer for editorial cartoooing; Alan, M. Kriegsman of The Washington Post for criticism, and Stanley J. Forman of The Boston Herald-American for spot news photography. In addition, "A Chorus Line" won the drama award, and the staffs of The Anchorage Daily News, The Chicago Tribune, and The Louisville Courier Journal also won awards. A special award was given to Scott Joplin, the ragtime composer, who died 59 years ago. Gary Hoenig

Where We Stand

by Albert Shanker President, United Federation of Teachers

Double Standard for Unions and Mayors

Can New York City Violate State Law?

Then a public employee union violates the law - or just threatens to violate it - there is an immediate outery. Public officials are quick to decounce the unioo, and editorial writers lead the chorus of criticism. But when governmeot officials violate the law - especially when it is a law the oewspapers don't like - there is silence instead of criticism.

On April 14 the Stavisky-Goodman Bill became law. For the first time in 104 years, the Legislature overrode a governor's veto. The bill had been pre-filed as far back as late November, an editorial on it appearing in The New York Times of December 3 (the editorial was favorable; The Times changed its mind much later). It was introduced formelly on January 7.

. The bill was discussed and analyzed for more than four months. It was the subject of extensive debate in the media and on the floor of each house of the Legislature, not once but twice, first during the original adoption and then during the debate on whether to override the veto.

The bill was passed. It is now law. There can be no claim that the Legislature didn't know what it was doing; over many months it had heard all the arguments from the Mayor, the Governor, New York City commissioners, teachers, parents, community school boards and the City Board of Education. The bill was passed only after it wes given more consideration than almost any other piece of legislation

City Defies Law, Proposes Additional Cuts

But the City has decided to ignore the law. The City last week held hearings on a proposed budget for the 1976-77 year which defies the law. Instead of restoring $120-$150 million in school services as mandated by the law, the City proposes eveo further reductions.

The rationale given by some City officials for defying the law is that it is unconstitutional because it violates the principle of "home rule." This is a lame excuse. There is no home rule provision in the New York Stale Constitution and, as a malter of fact, over the years many pieces of legislation which mandated the expenditure of City mooey have become law in spile of the objections of the City.

Still another City excuse for violating the law has been the argument that the Legislature could not establish the Emergency Financial Control Board to oversee City expenditures and then enact legislation which would be at cross-purposes with the Control Board by mandating expenditures in certain areas. This is an argument. that was made before the Legisleture itself - and rejected. It is not the function of the EFCB to control every expenditure — but merely to approve an overall financial plan and to monitor its implementation.

The main responsibility for violating the law rests with the Mayor, the Board of Estimate and the City Council. But much rests with newspapers like The Times, which, by maiotaining editorial sileoce, coodones the violatioo. Other papers seem to be cheerleaders for this defiaoce of law.

City's 3-Year Plan Can't Work

Meanwhile, it is becoming clear that the three-year fiscal plan proposed by the City last October and adopted by the EFCB is in shambles. The City is spending more than it expected. It is taking in less in tax revenue than anticipated. And it is clear that the City cannot make all the cuts in services and personnel projected in the plan and expect to survive.

The most recent analysis - and a very convincing one - appears to the May 10 issue of the Village Voice. Richard Morris, an economist, argues that the three-year plan should be scrapped and a new, realistic six-year plan adopted. "It took 15 years to accumulate the present deficit and it will take more than 3 years to elimioate it," Morris points out, asserting that to cut services drastically over a three-year period is to court disaster. "Even with the most stimulative fiscal policy in the nation," he writes, "we still have a local depression. But if we Iry to eliminate the deficit too quickly we will bring on a real holocaust." Morris concludes:

"A six-year plan should be a blueprint for survival. Our current plan is a

"There is oo question but that we will have a six-year plan. We cannot balance the budget in three years no matter how hard we try. The only question is whether we lapse into one, staggering uoder three years of drastic cuts, or whether we adopt a rational, placoed six-year approach."

The City must comply with the law and at the same time develop a new plan - one which does more than balaoce a budget on paper. It must be a plan which enables the City to survive.

President Under Siege

The first axiom of contemporary Presidential politics is that victory goes to the candidate who seizes the middle ground. The second is that barring disastrous circumstances euch as ao economic depression or an unpopular war, an incumbent President is mighty hard

Until recently, President Ford accemed well-positioned to benefit from both these truisms. Although unmistakably conservative in his record and his convictions, he is hy temperament a conciliator and a unifier. Like many veterans of legislative give-and-take on Capitol Hill, he has the capacity to disagree without being disagreeable and to compromise readily when events require it.

If few people are excited by Mr. Ford, neither are many angry at him. With the country at peace and the economy rapidly improving, he was prepared to take his Republican base for granted and to bid for Democratic and independent votes on an old-fashioned peace-and-prosperity platform. From McKinley to Eisenhower, the "full dinner pail" has been a winning electoral theme.

- Suddenly, the President finds that his prospects have gone awry. The difficulty is that the voters who make in approximately one-half of his conservative Republican base refuse to be taken for granted. Rallying to the candidacy of former Gov. Ronald Reagan, they are vociferously demanding a harder line toward the Soviet Union, a tougher attitude toward third world countries on issues such as the future of the Panama Canal, and a stronger military establishment.

. This right-wing sentiment is most active in the South and Southwest. After winning the first five primaries, President Ford encountered his first defeat in North Carolina, suffered a crushing rebuff in Texas a week ago, and lost again in Georgia and Alabama last Tuesday. But also on Tuesday, Mr. Ford lost in Indiana, his first Northern defeat,

Governor Reagan has become a credible candidate while President Ford has slipped from almost certain victor to underdog. Mr. Reagan's victory skein looks as if it may be extended this coming week in the Nebraska and West Virginia primaries,

The President has tried to counter the Reagan challenge by moving to his right. He has dropped "détente" from his vocahulary, excorlated Cuba's Fidel Castro as an "outlaw," endorsed the B-1 bomber program, and taken a firm (but not irresponsible) line on the Panama Canal negotiations.

. So far, these tactics have availed him very little. Right-wing Republican voters, reinforced by conservative Democrats who have crossed over to vote in G.O.P. primaries in significant numbers since the collapse of Gov. George C. Wallace's candidacy, have shown that they regard Mr. Reagan as a fellow true-believer upon whom they can rely.

Equally worrisome for the President is the fact that the longer he takes trying to dispose of the Reagan challenge, the less time he has to appeal to those independents and moderate Democrats who might be tempted to stick with the status quo and vote for him in November.

Mr. Ford's fundamental weakness in the primaries is that he is a colorless and inept compaigner. A skillful politician with greater personal flair could conceivably take the President's passive philosophy of government and do-little record and make them sound positive and promising. It is too early to say that this political feat is beyond Mr. Ford's powers. He lost Indiana very narrowly and still has time to recoup his recent losses.

But as of this weekend, he is a President under siege. His conclusive defeat is no longer an implausible

Tale of Two Committees

The Interior and Insular Affairs Committee of the House seems determined to draw a contrast between itself and its opposite number in the Senate-and one that does it no credit. On two hills important to the environmental integrity of the Weat, the Senate committee has successfully sponsored strong legislation only. to see it watered down by aubcommittees on the other side of the Capitol, with only a fighting chance that the full committee of the House will undo the damage.

"One of these Senate hills, known as the "B.L.M. Organic Act." would give the Bureau of Land Management the authority it needs to administer effectively the country's public lands-more than one-fourth the entire land area of the United States—under sound multiple-use principles and with full protection from exploitation by special interests. The version produced by a House subcommittee, and now being pushed through the full committee, would deprive the bureau of effective controls and grossly favor mining and grazing interests at the expense of the general public.

The second measure, approved by the Senate in February, would prohibit new mining claims in the six units of the National Park System where mining is now allowed; it would also impose a four-year partial moratorium on such activity in certain parks, including the Death Valley Monument.

-That striking California preserve is already marred. by a deep open-pit horax mine and the ugly scars left hy widespread talc mining. Here, too, a House Interior subcommittee has stepped in to weaken the proposed restrictions as well as to leave Alaska's Glacier Bay

National Monument open to expanded mining operations. It may he natural for House Interior subcommittees to be dominated by Westerners, whose districts contain ao much of the public lands. It is not acceptable for the full committee, much less the House itself, to view these lands as the private preserve of mine-owners. loggers and grazers. They belong to all Americans and should be managed as such.

Mr. Simon in Santiago

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon, the first United States Cahinet member to visit Chile since the military takeover in 1973, said things that needed saving in Santiago and evidently made an impression on President Pinochet and his colleagues. In an obvious bid to dilute American criticism of its repressive practices, Chile's ruling junta announced the release of 49 political prisoners even hercre Mr. Simon's arrival.

After Mr. Simon had warned publicly that American aid for Chile's depressed economy would be linked to progress in restoring political and social freedoms, the junta made a accond important gesture: it allowed Mr. Simon to report that it had dropped its opposition to a visit hy the United Nations Human Rights Commission to investigate altegations of widespread torture and arbitrary detention by the military regime.

Chile had invited the United Nations panel to conduct on-the-spot investigations last year, hut President Pinochet abruptly postponed the visit one week before it was to have begun. The postponement embarrassed the United States, which had gone along with other members of the Organization of American States in cailing off an O.A.S. investigation of buman rights violations in Chile in deference to the U.N. body's projected visit.

The junta is ohviously trying to give the world an impression of genuine progress in the human rights area in order to encourage an increase in the flow of economic aid from Washington and elsewhere, and also to insure that nothing prevents the meeting in Santiago next month of the O.A.S. General Assembly. The presence of the Assembly-including Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger-will give the military regime the kind of prestige it has never previously enjoyed in the inter-American system.

But Chile, once the most durable democracy in South America, has a long road to travel in restoring buman rights hefore it can bope to regain a position of international respect. The release of the 49 political prisoners, who have agreed to go into exile abroad, still leaves an estimated 4,000 in jail, 32 months after the overthrow of President Allende.

Children Are Calling

Prospects of a happy summer for the poor children of this city never looked so bleak as right now. The city's park and recreation funds and facilities have been cut to the bone, as have the Board of Education's summer programs. Neighborhood houses which depend on state and local funding are struggling along with more meager resources than at any time in recent memory.

In the past five years, 39 publicly sponsored camps that used to serve disadvantaged youngsters have ceased operation. As a result, there are now 40,000 fewer places for city children in need of a respite from the hot canyons of urban slums.

Since 1877, the Fresh Air Fund has devoted its efforts to letting such deprived youngsters know that somebody cares. As it enters its centennial year, the fund can count as accomplishments the happinesa, excitement and lasting friendships brought to a total of 1.3 million children.

Even in this year of the city's depression, the fund expects once again to wave its magic wand for 17,000 youngsters - to spirit them away from crowded tenements and teeming streets in order to give them a vision of open fields and cool streams; to let them see the stars without the smokescreen of pollution; to allow them to forge human bonds with children and adults in a world so different from their own that it can but inspire their minds with new hope as it fills their lungs with fresh air.

Once again, 13,000 bost families from Maine to Virginia are ready to welcome these city children to Friendly Towns for two weeks or longer. And ooce again, these summer staya will be the beginning of lifelong friendships, and yearly return visits, as they have been for more than 60 percent of the children in the past.

The need was never greater than in this 100th year of the fund'a service. To aupport this summer'a programs, tax-deductible contributions should be sent to The Fresh Air Fund, 300 West 43d Street, New York, N.Y. 10036.

The Vital Grass

Now comes the great greening, the grass that grows almost everywhere except on the city's pavement. Grass, the vital green of this earth, even more widespread than the trees, and in some ways even more closely linked with the life of mankind.

There are about 5,000 species of grass, some growing in the hottest areas of the tropics, some well up in the Arctic Circle. Grass finds a footbold where nothing else but lichen can survive. All it needs is a bit of soil, an occasional taste of moisture. It is one of the least demanding, yet most persistent, of all plants.

Few areas are more awe-inspiring than the vast plains where grass atretches mile after mile, native grass that was here before the first man arrived-though the famous long grass is all hut gone. What is more beautiful than an eastern meadow freshly green with April and May? Who can crosa the American Midlands in midsummer and not be amazed by the horizon-wide fields of that giant grass called maize by botanists, corn by farmers? Corn is grass, as are wheat and oats and rve and all our grains, and sugar cane and sorghum and bamboo.

Few of us are vegetarians, but even the meat-eaters would starve if there were no grass. Out there in those green pastures ia the substance of our butter, our milk and cheese and meat. And even if we did not starve, we probably would smother, for grass is also the fundamental filter of the air we breathe and our source of oxygen. Grass, the life-giver, the life-saver.

Day Care: The Forgotten Priority

To the Editor:

President Ford's decision to veto a hill providing funds to upgrade the quality of day care in America is not in the public interest. In this regard I am in essential agreement with the editorial position taken by The Times. However both President Ford's veto message and The Times editorial fail to speak to the most salient issue in this matter.

The issue is oot Federal versus state government prerogatives oor getting working mothers off the welfare rolls. but rather the issue ia the quality of life experienced by children in federally subsidized day-care centers. The basic question is what sort of environment we provide children in these day-care ceoters, children who are in day care eight to ten hours a day, week in and week out, during their formative years. The quality of day care in America is a mixed picture, with the quality varying from center to center. In the very worst settings children are experiencing horrible conditions often purchased with Federal tax dollars. So long as this situation continues, every taxpayer must take the responsibility of contributing to the legalized abuse of children.

However, it is empty to speak of states' rights in regard to this matter if the states do not have the money to do the job expected of them. The bill vetoed provides this money, and, unless this veto is overridden, even states having the best of intentions will simply be unable to upgrade the quality of day care in those states. In the national dialogue concerning day care I ask that the daily gives of children be the issue placed front and center. The quality of day care must be upgraded in our nation for no reason more complicated than that it is in our children's interest and It is the moral and responsible thing to do. I am disappointed that President Ford has decided not to display moral leadership oo this important issue. I much preferred the President Ford who met a planeload of incoming war orphans and promised that these children would receive the care they oeeded for their optimal development. I only wish that President Ford could have displayed an equal degree of compassion for all the American children who must be in day care while their parents work. The last hope of these children now appears to be the humanity and moral fervor of our nation's Congress, [Editorial May 4.]

Tears and Politics

To the Editor:

Last week there appeared on your front page the picture of a lachrymose Senator Humphrey. The spectacle of that hard-nosed politician in tears has brought forth no derisive commentaries, so far as I know.

According to the dictates of common decency, this is as it should be. If a man is moved to tears because of his emotional reaction to the possible shattering of a lifelong ambition, it proves him merely a normal, sentient being. There is nothing wrong with one human and sensitive enough to allow his inner feelings to surface. However, his feelings were engendered, it is to be assumed, by frustration and injury to personal pride.

All this revives a memory of some years ago. A potential candidate for the office of President of the United States cried in public because of an insult to his wife: he was deeply hurt. He is a powerfully built person who physically could have avenged the affront. But he cried.

That gentleman was, of course, Senator Muskie, who because of the incident found his prospects jeopardized. Nationwide he was subjected to humiliating innuendo; derogated by many commentators and much of the press, as one not manly enough to handle the responsibilities of the Presidency.

The tears that welled from his being were pumped by a heart that was moved by indignation at an injustice. It was rather to his credit, and an indication of the latent humanity that no doubt would extend to the poor and the hungry, the underprivileged an unnecessary, cruel war.

Would that he had hecome President of this abused but wonderful land and thus spared us the agonles of the Watergate era. I am not a Democrat.

Anti-Communism's Price To the Editor:

Elias Schwartzhart's letter (April 2S) asserts that the U.S. is a supine hare, while the Soviet Union is a bear supposedly ready to spring on a bapless Europe and rend it to pieces.

Will our nuclear arsenal, strategically placed around the Soviet Union, remain suplne as well? Are the Soviets so irrational and cocky that they don't recognize that they, and we, will be incinerated if such a calamity occurs?

If there is a threat, why, we ought to double and triple the already swollen military budget of $113 billion, so that the upper middle class can join the poor and the lower middle class in a way of life without hospitals, schools, nursing homes and other luxuries. Perhaps they too can eat out of pet-food cans.

Is the price of anti-Communism, also, to be a continuing unholy alliance with every anti-democratic country in the world? We are certain that the next country that goes jointly anti-democratic, anti-Communist will be embraced hy us.

Wanna bet, Mr. Schwartzbart (and anyone else)? LEONARD BOYER Flushing, N. Y., April 25, 1976

British Doctors: 'Mythical' Peer Review

To the Editor:

The April 25 letter hy Edgar A. Samuel is utterly without objective substantiation coocerning its allegation that peer review is, in effect, "peer inquisition" among British doctors. He slieged that "should there be any untoward result from medical treatment or aurgery, the responsible physician is required to appear before a hoard made up of members in his own field of specialization. He is exhaustively interrogated." The physician, if he is found to be at fault. could lose his hospital appointments, his practice and be professionally ostracized, according to Mr. Samuel.

But does this actually take place in England? Some observers of healthcare practices indicate that peer review in Eogland is more mythical than real. For example, Bunker, in his well-known study of English surgical care in the New England Journal of Medicioe, noted that in England "peer review by tissue committees and medical audits has not been considered necessary." Calne, in The Lancet, characterized the situation in England in strooger terms, suggesting "that the day a man ceases to be a senior registrar on his appointment as a consultant marks the beginning of a period,

Corporate

The New York Times

extending to retirement age, in which professional criticism from his colleagues is most imlikely, unless his malpractice is so hlatant as to iovolve a suit for damages. . . . Yet the surgeoo may spend his whole life making poor judgments and operating hadly with an uoacceptably high morbidity and mortality, and remain unaware that his work is below par." And in those instances where medical sudit does take place in England the results do not seem to be quite as Mr. Samuel portrays them. Io fact, Dudley recently noted in the British Medical Journal that "one of the sad things about the conventional audit systems that have gone on for years in surgical departments is that they baven't changed behavior at all." Audit and peer review is a fact of life io American hospitals and has been accepted by the majority of physicians in the United States. Drawing invidious comparisons betweeo the United States and England, while ignoring substantial contrary evidence, as Mr. Samuel has done, canoot constructively contribute to the oogolog debate oo the American health-care system.

Just a Candidate in Office?

By Tom Wicker

A new Gerald Ford, who is apperently "going to be more Presidential." has appeared in the Nebraska primary, and it's about time. The new strategy may not rescue Mr. Ford from Ronald Reagan, but maybe it will give the country something resembling a President, rather than a candidate in office who jumps when his opponent shouts.

In the Florida primary, trying to win the votes of Cuban refugees, Mr. Ford declared such unwavering bostility to Fidel Castro, whom he called an "international outlaw," that any conceivable reconcillation between Cuba and the United States has been set back perbaps for years. Mr. Reagan still got the Cuban vote.

In the Texas primary, where Mr. Reagan was wrong on the facts and jingoistic oo the substance of the Panama Canal "issue" (which wasn't one until Mr. Ford lat Mr. Reagan make it one), Mr. Ford at first aeemed to suggest that he, too, would bang ooto the Canal Zone forever. When Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger then testified to a Congressional committee that negotiations for a new caoal treaty ware going forward, Mr. Ford oot only got the worst of the exchange itself but found his credibility being questioned in Texas. Mr. Reagan won ell 96 of that state's is that eased relations with both the

Throughout the primary seeson, Mr. Ford has rushed around in Mr. Reagan's wake, shouting after him thet the nation does too have more military strength than the Soviet Union. This has only tended to let Mr. Reagan make still another issue out of misstatements and jingoism, and may even have led Mr. Ford into schual budgetary decisions, such as his request for more ships for the Navy. Still, Mr. Reagan bes taken the lead in committed delegates.

Mr. Ford could hardly do worse politically by being more Presidential than that, and the country surely would be better off. One way he could do it would be to abandon the practice of reecting to Mr. Reagan, while meking a far more positive eppeal than he has so far to the millions of moderate-to-conservative voters in the center and just a little right of center.

He could stress his reasonable success to turning the economy up without reviving galloping infletion, with employment rising (despite continuing high unemployment). His vetoes have been mostly sustained even by a heavily Democratic Congress, he can claim to have contributed to a world mostly at peace, and while he may have abandoned the word "detente" under Mr. Reagan's fire, the likelihood Soviet Union and China, which he can claim to have maintained, are approved by most Americans.

Another way Mr. Ford could appear more Presidential would be to assert himself as the maker and maneger of his own foreign policy-not so much that he should have a different policy than that of Secretary Kissinger, but that he should appear to be in charge. of it himself. This necessity was emphasized by Mr. Kissinger's African trip, apparently a diplomatic, success. but a political minus for Mr. Ford at

The main reason was timing. Presumably Mr. Kissinger could have made the trip some time other than just before the ffexas, Georgie and Alabama primaries. Certainly he could bave and should bave issued a ringing statement of support for black majority nile in Rhodesia loog ago, rather than at a time perfectly suited to Mr. Reagan's political prospects:

Secondly, these things being fairly obvious, the Kissinger trip wes a po-litical setback for Mr. Ford because it raised the question whether the President is master in his own house. Why didn't he keep Mr. Kissinger at home until later or send him to Africa sooner? And when Mr. Kissinger took it on himself to reply: from abroad to . Mr. Reagan's criticisms, Mr. Ford once black hostility? ..

Perheps a new, more Presidential Gerald Ford could seize, nevertheless, on the Rhodesian matter - both to take a political initiative against Mr. Reegan and to show himself in charge of foreign policy. He could undertake to explain forcefully that his policy in Africa; like that of every other civilized nation, is for majority rule does Ronald Reagan favor white colonialism? Mr. Ford's policy is to urge peacefully negotiated transition in Rhodesia does Bonald Reagan prefer continuing guerrilla or perhaps open war between ax million blacks and e quarter-million whites? And Mr. Ford's policy is to keep the Cuban expeditionary force now in Angola-out-Rhodesie would Ronald Reagan. rather have them transported to Rhodesia to fight with the blacks, not only against the whites but for Comwith American support; also is more likely to guarantee the long-term availability of Rhodesian chrome. Does Roceld Reagan want that availability jeopardized by racial war and munist influence? Peaceful transition to majority rule,

PARIS-lo e 1968 analysis Henry Kissinger, then a Harvard professor with no government position, observed: "One notices a tendency in American foreign policy to spasms of rigidity and spasms of tactical flexibility." This, it may be said; is not only still a tendency of United States diplomacy it applies also to most democratie systems where parties and political moods shift, inevitably affecting all but the most fundamental aspects of policy-making.

Tha speedy change in United States attitudes toward sub-Saharan Africa is a perfect instance of a "spasm of tactical flexibility." For years Washing ington had e relatively rigid view on Africa: Keep the Russians and Chinese out and, apart from pious platitudes, don't get too involved.

This vague epproach, avoiding complexities, went by the boards during the Angola crisis. When Congress spurned Mr. Kissinger's lead, ignoring a considerable armed Soviet intrusion; "tactical flaxibility" was imposed on American policy.

.The Congressional rehuff to Mr. Kissinger's plan to "save". Angolawhose osejority population then opposed the Soviet - aod - Cuban - backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, almost caused the Secretary to resign. He realized that his global policy was dangerously threatened by a situation few Americans recognized as grave.

All sub-Saharan Africa, which includes other Soviet-and-Cuban military strongpoints, was threatened by tha Angolan collapse. Western Europe res tains strong traditional ties to and considerable interests in its former colonies and has established friendly telations with most of them. It was eppalled hy the prospect of having everything swept away in a fide no longer even remotely dammed by United States opposition.

.The situation facing the United States was one of great loss-of prestige among friendly black nations like Zaire and Zambia, the implicit menace of 15,000 Soviet-armed Cuben troops still in Angola, imminent race war în Rhodesia, probably also in South-West Africa and possibly in the end extending to South Africa, Mr. Kissinger's shuttle trip was therefore deslened to erect a new multilateral structure in the hope of avoiding disaster.

It is clear to most people that the enough yet to defend their economic social, political and development interests unaided and that the Organlzation of African Unity (O.A.U.) has not proved brilliantly effective, Pro-Western countries like Senegal and Zaire, almost surrounded by wellarmed Soviet client states, were therefore floundering in despair.

Mr. Kissinger's mittel ettempt to produce the first United States African policy since the Congo (now Zalre) failed in Angola because of a combination of Congressional opposition and public disinterest. On his May safari. he therefore sought to rectify this-American failure by personal contacts. with leading African nationalists pledges of nonmilitary support for liberation movements and e call for an international resources bank to guarantee price-supports for raw. materials in developing lands.

. All this bas undoubtedly helped improve the political climate in Africa—from a United States view. point. But one will not be able to gauge the extent of any improvement, until Congress gives Mr. Kissinger tangible support by voting him the necessary funds and also hy enecting a legal boycott aggiost Rhodesian chrome porchases (like the rest of the United Nations).

Meanwhile, however, the situation has been temporarily stabilized. Blacknationa are not overwhelmingly. propounded by Moscow and Havana and their commercial links are limited. Soviet influence in Africa relies da arms-and arms alone. This is not considered a bealthy situation by the numerous African leaders who recog-

Coosequently, one may expect American policy to try hard during the at least temporary-hiatus in Africa's rush to bloodshed and postsibla disaster, by attempting the following three tactical moves:

(1) To stress the distinction between South Africa and Rhodesia, encouraging the latter not to follow land: Smith's lemming course. It is more than likely that Mr. Kissinger will soon .arrange talks with Prima Minister John Vorster of South Africa to explain the evolving situation as he. sees it and at least to suggest speedy, positive consideration of greater political; social and economic rights for nonwhites.

(2) To isolate Rhodesia and help South-West Africa gain its freedom; while urging moderation among the black liberation movements and above all a racial tolerance they themselves have not been accorded. (3) And finally, to work quietly in tandem with our new friend China; which has its own vital interest in preventing Soviet expansionism. Washington and Peking logically can agree to stress such foreign interests as they have in common and assure parallel actions in Africa.

For Harlem, in '64 there was a dream. Not now.

In the late summer of 1964, I sat in a rear window seat of a Greyhound bus beaded for Charlotte, N. C. I had just completed a summerschool program at Phillips Exeter Academy and I was excited about going home. At the time, however, I was preoccupied with a Time magazine articla about the riots in east Harlem.

The bus that I had boarded in Boston wound down the expressway toward New York and finally exited at the 138th Street bridge, and quickly made its way down Fifth Avenue and then Lenox Avenue and into the guts of central

I remember looking out into the night at the faceless men and women who wandered about and at the bright lights that invited them to come in off the street, have a drink and forget their troubles. I wondered if any of the darkforms standing in doorways and on corners had participated in the riots that had so occupied the thoughts of the nation. The bus rumbled on, indifferent to Harlem, and Harlem, apparently, indifferent to it.

Back in Charlotte, we had always thought that New York City was special. When one of our friends would go away to live with an aunt or uncle in Harlem, or even Brooklyn or the Bronx, his return was like a celebration. Through him we were able to experience New York; and even if he had been away for only a few weeks, we could still detect that his speech had become "proper."

My trip through Harlem that night was special. The sit-ins were going on, and civil rights protests were becoming commonplace, and there had been other riots, but the riot in Hariem was symbolic; those of us who were far removed from the streets of New York felt that something significant had happened that summer.

Black and Hispanic people in New York, motivated by uncontrollable frustration, had gone into the streets to protest against racial diserimination -- To those for whom Harlem symbolized dignity for black Americans, the civil rights movement had taken a new turn; we respected Harlem and had confidence in its energy. It was e place where we felt being black t something more than entire, but dogs while standing at Kress's luncheon counter.

As the bus left the Port Authority and started down the New Jersey Turnpike, I was glad that I had traveled briefly through the streets of New York that bot, sticky summer night. I thought Harlem had now joined the battle for equality, that poor people had shouted out for dignity, that black Americans had said that no longer would they beg shamefully for what was rightfully theirs. I thought that a revolution of social justice had begun.

Sitting in the back of the Greyhourid bus heading South, I thought that its spite of the great? self-destructive aspects of the riots 1964 was among Harlem's greatest moments.

But if the night gives birth to dreams, then with the morning awakens a new reality.

I now live in New York and realize that Harlem bas become fairly insignificant in the order of things in America. Since 1964, the fight for racial equality has continued, to be sure, but nothing comparable to a revolution has resulted. And Harlem like other major, urban communities, is now dangerously near economic and social obsolescence. It is a shadow of its former self, a beggar among urban beggars, a junkie looking for an economic fix.

Worse, the promises of the 1960's for racial' equality and social justice have become only the memories of those who fought yesterday's battles. What has happened to the people of Harlem, to a large extent, has happened to most of America's minorities. They have been used, divided, bought off, defused and discarded. Some have been given a small piece of the "American dream" and now fight among themselves to control it. Meanwhile, the ship that

By James E. Coleman Jr.

| carries those who will still struggle for some measure of dignity in America is sinking.

| Harlem, and the city of which it is a part, are now symbols of a different kind, used by politicians who want to run against what they call the overindulgence of America in social

New York City has become synonymous with welfare abose, crime, drug abuse, and urban decay. Its poor are the targets of insensitive bureaucrate who suggest, sincerely, that under-privileged communities should be de-serviced and allowed to die And the efforts to save the city are simed at rescuing those who turn its resources, into profits and not those who strongle to make it a hope in short, we have witnessed in New York the dream of the 1960's turn into the algorithms of the 1970's. But the rest of America has fared no better; we face the future with kaleidoscopical vision.

In this Bicentennial year, between listening to the special Bach Bicentennial albums and preparing Bicentennial menus published by the Agricultural Department, we must also find the time to think about our national direction for tha next 100 years. This we should do if the Bicentennial is to have any meaning at all. For those of us who are old, who are poor, or homeless, who yearn to breathe free, the prospects for the future might not be worth the Awaite and the second of the second

Is there a code word, or a wink of the. political eye, that assures us that everything is tine, that the future is heing quietly planned, away from the suffering and misery of the cities? I hope so. There are still a lot of us who like to believe, as I did in 1964, that being down in New York is not being out That life here is somathing more than standing on galine to eat hot dogs while the rest of the country sits down for dinner.

History Means

In 1943 The New York Times tested 7,000 college freshmen on their knowledge of American history and found

"striking ignorance of even the most elementary aspects."

"The main conclusion ooe must draw is unmistakable:

Generation

Few people, perhaps, will be surprised by the results in a day when student performance, as measured by College Board and other tests, is declining in the basic areas of reading, writing and mathematics. The findings come, though, after more than a decade of presumably constructive changes in the teaching of history in high schools.

The changes were confirmed in interviews with students,

Tha classic chronological textbook is being supplemented by interpretative bistories, collections of source readings and paperbacks on special issues. New techniques, from films to role playing, are being used to increase student interest and reinforce themes. Though the skill with which they do it obviously varies, teachers are trying to move away from the memorizing of facts and dates to an understanding of causes and "concepts" such as Manifest Destioy.

It is clear that other forces, though, are working against the learning of American bistory, including some within the schools themselves. In many schools, history is no longer taught as a subject in itself but rather as one aspect of interdisciplinary "American studies."

Some of the reforms may have gone too far. Some educators believe mini-courses oo themes like "Womeo io American History" have too often achieved "relevance" at the cost of any serious content. One girl in a Metairie, La., high school noted that as part of the study of the 20th. century her class had put on a fashion show. "Now is that

Whether they contributed to it or not, teachers are also up against the growing illiteracy problem. In learning history, after all, it does help to be able to read. "Students today are the most inarticulate I've known," said Mrs. Barbara Murdoch, chairman of the social studies department at Sandia High School in Albuquerque, N. M. "They can't concentrate. They can't read. They can't write."

Some anti-historical forces lie beyond the schoolhouse. As a country, the United States has always been more concerned with creating the future than relishing the past. Foreign guidebooks sometimes warn that, in cootrast to European cities, a visitor cannot learn the history of Naw York by looking for monuments and plaques on walls.

This tendency has been magnified by social changes. The term "now generation" is suggestive of a worldview. Jonathan Harris, the bead of social studies at Schreiber High School in Port Washington, N. Y., reported that after con-siderabla discussion he coovinced his son to taka a history course. "He looked through the catalogua and picked out one on the 1960's," said Mr. Harris. "That to him was

Others see the very pace of social change as a crucial factor. "Changes have come so quickly in recent years that the past seems to be very remote," said Paul Varg, a bistorian at Michigan State University. In a curious but profound way respect for the past presumes a respect for the present that no longer exists. Hazel Hertzberg, a historian at the Teachers College of Columbia University, sees history as suffering from the fact that "there is no longer an agreed-upon body of knowledge that is thought to be necessary for everyooe to have."

Value Judgments

Also involved are value judgments. The social turmoil of the last decade unleashed a suspicion of American ideals and institutions that also brought into question not only what was taught - a criticism that educators have attempted to meet by giving more attention to the contributions of women, blacks and Indians — but the need for tradition in the first place. "There's a feeling that the country isn't worth much," observed David Riesman, the Harvard sociologist. "It's racist, sexist, imperialist. It reflects a despair. . . . There's no search for a usable past."

This lack of concern for a "usable past" is regrettable, not only for the often-cited reason that people unfamiliar with the past are likely to repeat its mistakes but because it diminishes present experieoce:

Some time ago a reporter sat in the temple of one of the new Eastern religious cults and listened to a young convert explain why he had chosen his ascetic style of life. When the reporter pointed out that the explanation amounted to a classical exposition of the ideals of medieval monasticism, the young devotee replied, "What do you mean?" He was clearly unaware that the Trappists of Kentucky, or for that matter anyone else in Western civilization, bad ever pursued such ideals.

What struck the reporter was not so much the young man's ignorance, but that he was unaware of a tradition that could enhance his own experience. Says Dr. Hertzberg: "You do a great disservice to the young if you give them the impression that they arrived at most of their ideas as the first-born trailing clouds of glory."

Some Have Faith, Some Skepticism About the Perfectibility of Technology

Nuclear Energy Has Moral Components, Too

By DAVID BURNHAM

WASHINGTON-Oo June 8 the citizens of California will vote on ao initietive proposal which could eventually end the use of nuclear reactors in that state.

The passionate campaigns being waged both for and against the initiative proposal have ooce agaio demoostrated that the moral, scientific and social questions of nuclear power are not subject to simple division.

This point was forcefully articulated more than 15 years ago by C. P. Soow, during the world-wide debate over the bazards of ouclear testiog in the atmosphere. In a speech to the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1960, Lord Snow argued that "Scientists have a moral imperative to say what they know."

"Soldiers have to obey." the physicist and novelist said. "That is the foundation of their morality. It is not the foundation of scientific morality. Scientists have to question and if necessary rebel."

The complex and perhaps conflicting values that ioform judgments about nuclear power were demonstrated again recently when three engioeers-Dale G. Bridenbaugh, Gregory C. Minor and Richard Hubbard-decided to quit their jobs at General Electric to publicly oppose nuclear power. The industry sought to minimize the importance of their departure by pointing out that the engineers were associated with an ethical-religious group called the Creative Initiative Foundation.

Several days after the three engineers had announced their decision to quit, a fourth G.E. engineer, Walter J. Schwegman, charged that the Creative Initiative Foundation had stage-managed the resignation of his former colleagues to win maximum publicity for the California initiative.

Mr. Schwegman's statement was relayed to reporters by General Electric public relations men. A newsletter published by the Atomic Industrial Forum, a pro-nuclear lobbying group, devoted much of its coverage of the resignation to the engineers' involvement with the religious foundation, even though the engineers had noted the association io their own initial news cooference. Tho newsletter quoted Carl Walske, president of the Atomic Industrial Forum, as saying it appeared that the eogineers were "most troubled by philosophical and emotional issues-well beyond their own special expertisewhich have been considered carefully and answered to the satisfaction of thousands of their colleagues."

The Atomic Industrial Forum did not state its specific objection to the Creative Initiative Foundation, an associatioo of maoagers and executives who regularly meet to discuss ethical questions. But from the tenor of Mr. Walske's comment, it appears to rest on a feeling that the judgments of the engineers on nuclear power cannot be entirely trusted by the public because they go beyood narrow questions of science and technology.

The supporters and critics of nuclear power thus seem to rest their arguments on conflicting and sometimes unstated values. The supporters contend that the absence of a disastrous accident so far should be sufficient proof of their lethal waste. The critics argue that faith in tha infallibility of science and technology is misplaced. They believe that coocern for public health and safety inevitably leads to the conclusion that reactors are too dangerous, oo matter how great the need for electric power. Both the supporters and the opponeois of nuclear power, then, rest at least part of their arguments on grounds that go beyond science to questions of faith and morality.

that science and technology can and will resolve the remaining unresolved problems of reactors and the storage

When the nuclear industry questions the views of the three engineers because their judgments were not based on science alone, the industry imposes a rigorous discipline on its own statements. An examination of the record. however, shows that proposeots of nuclear power have oot always stayed within the boundaries of this discipline.

Faith in the System

Recently, for example, Dr. Cecily Canoan Selby, a biologist, president of the Americans for Energy Independence, a lobbying group largely financed by the nuclear iodustry,

Dr. Selby said the difference between herself and another panelist was that "I do have faith in science and technology, proven faith. I do bave faith in human civilization and the way we develop."

After arguing that the nuclear industry io the United States had very strict and compreheosive safety devices, Dr. Selby said, "There is nothing else that is so strictly and securely regulated. So it is the faith in this system, and the faith in the development, the skills and the development of our technology, that some of the uosolved problems will most certainly be solved by the time we have to

Dr. Hans A. Bethe, prominent in the development of ouclear bombs during World War II and now a leading proposent of nuclear reactors, also stressed his faith that future research will resolve peoding problems during his testimooy before the Celifornia Assembly committee on Resources, Land Use and Energy.

Dr. Bethe was asked by the chairman of the committee. Assemblyman Charles Warren, Democrat of Los Angeles, about a conclusion by a task force of the American Physical Society that it was unable to predict the probability that an important safety feature of nuclear reactors would function if required. Dr. Bethe replied that he himself did not know the answer but that one of his colleagues, an expert in the area, had "a feeling that it will work." "I don't know what to make of that," Dr. Bethe said, "but I think in many instances before you have a solid calculation, the best you can do is to rely on the feeling of people who bave studied it very carefully and he has dooe so." He coocluded that he therefore thought the safety feature probably would work.

Epilogue

Americans in Africa Are Freed

Two American civilian technicians, kidnapped last year by Eritrean rebels in Ethiopia, have been released unharmed in Sudan. Steven Campbell and James Harrell were working at the United States naval communications facility in Asmara when they were abducted last July 14 by members of an insurgent group known as the Popular Liberation Forces. V. H. Burwood-Taylor, the honorary British consul in Asmara, who was seized last October by the rebel group, was also released. All were reported in good condition.

The F.B.I. and the Black Panthers

An informer for the Federal Bureau of Investigation was the chief source of information that led to the 1969 Chicago police raid in which Fred Hampton, leader of the Black Panthers, was slain, according to F.B.I. memorandums. The documents, cited last week in a report by the Seoate Select Committee on Intelligence Activities, are the first iodication of the exteot of the bureau's involvement in the raid. According to the report, the raid and the subsequent grand jury investigation occurred during a period when the bureau was engaged in trying to stir dissension among the Black Panthers.

Ambassador Farkas Resigns

Ruth L. Farkas has resigned as Ambassador to Luxembourg, the diplomatic post that she received in 1973 after giving $300,000 to former President Nixon's re-elaction campaign. The resignation of Mrs. Farkas had been expected for some time. In 1974 Herbert W. Kalmbach, a former Nixon lawyer and fund-raiser, told the House Judiciary Committee that Mrs. Farkas's contribution, delivered to the Nixon campaign committee after the 1972 election, had been arranged in return for the ambassadorship.

Arch Moore Acquitted

Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. of West Virginia has been acquitted by a Federal jury on charges of conspiring to extort $25,000 from a loan company in exchange for a state banking charter. William Loy, the Governor's chief aide in 1972, and a co-defendant, was also acquitted.

WEST TISBURY, Mass. Fishing for pickerel when striped bass are along the beach may seem somewhat perverse, but every year or two my brother Dan and I hanker to try for the lean, toothy denizens of Watcha

Watcha is one of a series of ponds lying just beyood the oarrow barrier beach on the south shore of Martha's Vineyard Island. Some of the larger ponds are opened to vide the proper salinity for the shellfish that live in them. Others, and Watcha is one of these, remain closed. Watcha , holds pickerel and white and yellow perch, and the pickerel are, oo the average, larger than anyone finds in a pood of similar size in Massachusetts. One of the reasons for this is that there no public access to Watcha, and one must obtain land owner permission to get

In recent years, by the way, hundreds of the protected canvasback ducks have dallied on Watcha in the fall. True to tradition-and I first fished Watcha 40 years ago-the pickerel respooded quickly to a variety of lures, both surface and deep runoing, but the ooe that pro-duced the most fish and the largest - about three and a half pounds — was a so-called Bait Tail with a red plastic body.

The Bait Tail — developed by the late Al Reinfelder and his partner, Lou Palma, along with the plastic Alou Eel - duced in the one-eighth ounce size we used, but there are a few of them still oo tackle shop shelves wbether manufactured by Alou, Garcia or Tail, from the manufacturer's point of view, is that it does er's eye. It is classic, almost drab, in its simplicity, and wbatever action it has in the water must be imparted by the angler.

This writer has caught striped bass, pickerel landlocked salmoo, large brook trout, oorthern weakfish, small tarpon, small-mooth bass and many other species oo the Bait Tail, It has two great advantages: it may be fished from just under the surface to the bottom and it can be worked through fouling.

Dan and I released most of the pickerel we caught, but he saved a few for

Money Gives Football CORPORATION Yen to Play a Game in

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE last Wednesday. He was a free agent, his 1975 contract with the Vikings having explay a preseason exhibition game in Tokyo on August 15th, the first National Football League game outside the United States, and the promot ers predict 60,000 tickets and fill up the Koraku-En stadium. Tickets will be priced from $4 to $22.50.

The teams are not going there to see the sights but to make money. For the same game, played on the same date in either St. Louis or San Diego, a crowd of 35,000 would be the best one could expect.
One of the promoters,
Frank Takahashi of Los Angeles, has the coonections in Tokyo where an all-star game played by college senors from the United States last January was a success. Takahashi is a Charger fan as are his son and grandson. A measure of the devotioo is the 5-year-old grandson's name, Unitas Takahashi, after

NOBODY DOES MORE TO TAKE CARE OF YOUR AUDI.

And nobody gives you more for

We give you two showrooms and a block-long service center near your office in midtown Manhatton. It doesn't cost more for that, We give you the largest inventory of genuine Audi parts on the entire East Coast, It doesn't cost more for that, either. Nor does it cost more to buy from a dealership with factory-trained mechanics who understand Audis inside and out. And with service advisors who discuss your Audis service needs when you drive in, and explan your bill when you drive out.

So if you're considering an Audi, consider Porsche/Audi Manhatton. No other dealer gives you

The most Fiat we've ever brought to America.

A steel cage completely surrounds and protects the passenger compartment.

A 5-speed transmission. Only one of 6 sedans in the world with this as standard equipment.

The gas tank is tucked away A twin overhead cam engine. behind the backseat. The same kind found on some of the Impact-absorbing finest sports cars in the world. front and rear bumpers. Unitized body. Dual braking system. Safety anti-burst door locks. One of the most advanced

Carpeted trunk: Rear window defroster. Radial tires. Tachometer. Reclining bucket seats.

Fully carpeted.

Tilting steering wheel. All-vinyl interior. Mag wheels. Quartz clock. Tinted glass all around.

At Fiat, we've always held to one simple idea: the idea of a practical, sensible intelligent car.

Well, we've taken that idea and made it somewhat bigger, and more powerful, and more luxurious. And we call it the Fiat 131. If you've never considered a Fiat before, maybe it's time.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, MAY 9, 1976

Because we just became a Saab dealer. So from now on, you'll be able to come in and test drive a Saab at a dealership that's conveniently nearby.

And when you buy a Saab, you'll be able to have it serviced close to home by people who are trained to service your Saab quickly and expertly. Come in soon and let us tell you about Saab's famous front-wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, power-assisted four wheel disc brakes, roll-cage construction, and most importantly, Saab's gasoline economy.

Arrow also gives you reclining bucket seats, tinted glass all around, fold-down rear-seat, power front disc brakes, even an adjustable steering wheel. All as standard equipment! It just goes to prove that a little car that's got a lot doesn't have to cost a lot! Manufacturer's suggested retait price, excluding taxes and destination charges. Rear window detroster ($74.05) required in New York State.

This year, see the Men who say "Yes!" At your local Plymouth Arrow Dealer.

Logic suggests you can't go from 0 to 55. dodge a pothole, comer and brake to a stop in a showroom where you can't even turn on an ergine.

So people who think demand a test drive to evaluate performance and handling before deciding to buy. At Volvo, we welcome those who understand our cars are built to be driven. And who demand to drive one before they'll buy one.

This year, a test drive can take many forms because we have six Volvo models to choose from. Two sedans and a wagon in our luxurious new 260 series. Plus two sedans and a wagon in our basic 240 series. See us soon. Inspect our multiple choice. Then test 1. Or 6. Or 5.

> VOLVO The car for people who think.

-The Americana of San Juan ends rice discrimination against singles!

The Americana of San Juan, the island's most exciting hotel, just made the single applement — obsolete. So singles will never be penalized with the surcharge that ups eir room rate - past the rate each person pays for a double room. An Americana of an Juan exclusive!

Americana's vacation world, in the center of San Juan, is exclusive, too. Fountains, aterfails, sugar-soft sand. A huge fresh water pool circled by sundecks, patios and abanas. Tennis and golf. 450 terraced rooms, suites and lanais. A wealth of nitelife and aylife: with everything for the gourmet, the gambler, and the theatre-goer. You'll never reat. Without the extra tab, it's fantastic. Who says you need a roommate to get a decent room rate?

A Retreat In Crete

decaying village into a kind of rustic botel. It is an approach that the Greek Government is also trying as an alternative to mass-tourism (see box, at right).

When Eleni Nakou first came to Crete and to Aglos Nikolaos in 1961, it was a little fishing village of just 2,000 people. It has since more than doubled in population, but bas still retained its own easy character and charm. It is a jumble of whitewashed buildings with red-tiled roofs clustered on e small peninsula that juts out into the clear blue waters of the Gulf of Mirabello. One can easily spend a morning or two wandering through the shops with Cretan leather specialties that line Koundourou, the main street which connects the square at the top of the village to the waterfrom.

While tourism is the biggest business, it does not seem to have changed old values. I took a watch in to be repaired in a jeweler's shop nn the town square. The jeweler spent 15 minutes working on it and made it work tgain, but would accept no payment. 'The problem was too small," be said. It is also easy to spend long afternoons under the palm trees in ooe of the putdoor cafes beside a dark, deep lagoon, 200 feet across, that is connected we the sea by a 25-foot-long channel. From the cliffs on the other side of this lagoon come the sharp cries of hidden peacocks. There are also some pleasant tavernas along the waterfront. The town has a number of good botels. One of the best is the Hermes, in the center of the waterfront, with a combination outdoor pool and discothèque on the roof that is a center of local nightlife.

But what has turned Agios Nikolaos into a famous resort are the Minos Beach and the Elounda Beach. At the Minos, small white bungalows are scattered in a garden sitting over a promonlory. They are built in the simple whitewashed style of an Aegean village and they look almost like natural parts of the rocky coast. The Minos bas the advantage of being close to town: the disadvantage is that the town has grown out along the highway. Although still sheltered, noise does intrude. Across the road is a taverna whose proprietor insists in the evening upon playing Greek records at a decibel level that would not be permitted at an airport.

Eleni Nakou says that the creeping growth of the town was the main reason she sold her interest in the Minos in 1970. But there also appear to have been some disagreement with her associates, made more complicated by the fact that Greek men are not accustomed to having strong-willed Greek women as business partners.

With new partners, Eleni Nakou founded the Elounda eight miles farther out, across a low coastal range, on a site large enough to leave a fei-mila The Elounda is less intimate and has more bustle than the Minos. Half the 500 beds are in the main hotel building:

the rest in whitewashed bungalows. They are starkly simple, but large and comfortable inside. Each bas a porch with a direct line of sight to the sea. Rugged mountains lie far across, the bay, which is undisturbed except for the occasional water skier or the lone fisherman. The nights can get very hot, and we took to moving our mattresses out to sleep on the porch, so that we would awaken early to a large orange sun rising as if right

The Trata, for example, is probably the most expensive restaurant in the town. but our meal was only adequate. In fact, the pleasantest dinner we had was on the open quay in the tiny village of Elounda, three miles on the price was $1.50 a person. Agios Nikolaos is a good base for seeing what makes Crete special, which is its history, visible in the ruined towns and palaces that carpet the island. Crete was the home of the Minoan civilization, which flourished between 2000 B.C. and 1300 B.C. and served as a bridge between Egypt and the

La República Dominicana. People like it for what it's not.

It's not "touristy." Almost any Caribbean vacation spot can offer you a few secluded beaches. La República Dominicana has 270 miles of them some stretches so inviolate that you can shed your swimsuit along with your city-bred uptightness.

La República Dominicana is a country in the building. But it's not all built up. At least, not yet.

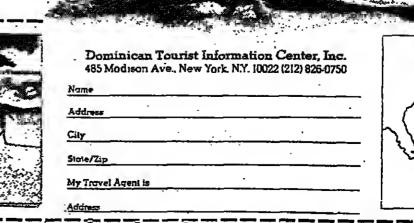

It does boast some of the newest hotels in the Caribbean. And some of the best restaurants. And an international airport that's only 31/2 hours from New York. And a fiendishly tricky Pete Dve golf course that's most often compared to Pebble Beach. And splashes of native son Oscar de la Renta's colorful decor almost everywhere.

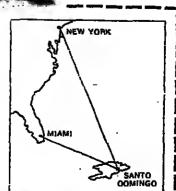

With all of this, it's not over-priced. You can still get a first-class hotel room for $12 a day. Or drive into the countryside and buy a pineapple for 25 cents... a freshly picked avocado for a dime.

Above all, La República Dominicana is not hostile. It's a country at peace with itself. And the people have been unaffected by visitors and high pressure late-night spots. Goombay night life is really something. And so is the day life.

It is, quite frankly, a little behind the times, All of its beauties have not yet blossomed. The Jet Set hasn't discovered it yet. Not quite yet. So it's not the Caribbean country for everybody.

You can play golf, tennis or go scuba diving. Eat Bahamian foods like conch chowder and lobster. Drink a Goombay Smash or Bahama Mama.

Or you can just take it easy on our beautiful, white sand beaches and relax in our crystal-clear, turquoise waters.

And wherever you go in The Bahamas, our people are as warm as our sunshine.

Nassau/Paradise Island $73 to $208. Nassau/Paradise Island combines quaint m with great hotels, restaurants, night life and a casino. The price includes hotel for 8 days, 7 nights, airport transfers, a Goombay drink, Sound & Light Show tickets and other extras.

Freeport/Lucaya $76 to $213.

Freeport/Lucaya offers everything from water sports, golf and tennis to El Casino and swinging night life. The price includes hotel for 8 days, 7 nights, a Goombay drink, double-decker sightseeing bus tour, admission to a native nightclub show and other extras.

Out Island vacations $88 to $165.

The Out Islands of The Bahamas are into Goombay Holiday, too. Abaco, Andros, Eleuthera, Exuma and our other islands have celebrations of their own. On a smaller scale, but maybe just the kind of easygoing fun that's right for you.

A Touch of Gold Fever By Vermont Streams

store. I drove behind his Chevy camper as we headed down State Route 100A a bit and then he suddenly signaled for a turn-onto a narrow dut road. At first we passed a few houses, several kids and an occasional dog, but after a mile or so the road crossed a brook. narrowed and entered a heavy forest We rode on a few more bumpy miles, paralleling the brook Finally Stiles pulled up and parked in a little clearing and unloaded: I had purchased a 14-inch plastic pan and he had brought along his own pan, a small pick, a gardening trowel, a serving spoon, a teaspoon and some insect repellent in his knap-

I helped him carry his other geara long-bandled shovel, a bulky metal sluice ("to save time," he explained) and a couple of white plastic bucketsthrough a few dozen yards of natural obstacle course down to the water's

"We're in a spot that's called Hale Hollow locally," Stiles said as he arranged his equipment. "I go panning four or five times a year, with my wife and kids and a picnic hunch. We come around bere a lot Actually, for return, you'd probably do better digging copper out of a dump, but I've heard of a few oldtimers who pan enough from these streams to get along on. There's a fellow who comes up every spring from Connecticut and always goes bome with a vial full."

We both removed our shoes and socks to reduce the chance of slipping on; wet rocks. Stiles squatted oear a curve in the stream and began to irowel a little dirt from the edge of the brook into his pan. "The spring runoff brings new stuff dowo each year," he explained. "The water just keeps washing titles. It was probably left there io a general deposit by glaciers. You're most likely to find traces in little holes and ridges in the rocks at the edge of the stream—sort of natural niffles—where it gets trapped on the way down-

He loaded the pan half-full with dirt, tossed away a few obviously worthless rocks and then, still in the classic prospector's squat, dipped the front of his pan into the brook to take in a little water and began swirling. Little by little, be let the water slide up the edge of the pan and drop back into the brook, taking with it the lighter bits of material. Then another dip for more water and repeat. After several minutes of patient work, he was down to a fine, dark concentrate. He took out his tweezers and poked. He poked some more. "Here's a nice piece," he said at of a shred of one spice or another. "It's probably mica, but it looks like gold. If it's gold, of course, it won't shatter." He jabbed it with the point of his tweezers. It shattered.

He emptied the pan, sat down on a flat rock and began spooning more gook out of the brook I waded in, found a likely looking, curvy spot and began my own panning at the edge. Spoon, spoon, dip, swirl, dip, swirl, dip, swirl, poke, poke. A beautiful, big piece. Shatter! And so it went.

Before long, we heard a car pull up. -it was the only non-natural noise we had beard in Hale Hollow-and a slender man with thinning hair got out and walked down the bank toward us. He asked bow we were doing and told us that he was from Maine and often panned in Broad Brook, Three years ago, he said, he bad done some panning in North Carolina and had come up with some good-sized rocks of pure gold. Io fact, he said, he had even found some nice nuggets right around where we were. My spirits rose.

The talk shifted to an advanced discussion of dredging equipment, so I went back to my panning. Spoon, spoon, dip, swirl, dip, swirl, dip, swirl, poke, poke: Nothing. Stiles and the mao finished talking and the visitor yelled good luck and drove off. We moved up-

After many pans of zero yield. Stiles decided to use the shince. He set the thing up in midstream, explained that we would use the flow of the water L run the material through the various Filtering devices. After the sluice had done its work, he parmed the final residue. "See that color," he said after a bit. "That's it either gold or mica." Shatter. "It's mica."

Finally Stiles announced that he really hated to leave before I found gold but he had to get back to his store and make a living. Before he left, though, he drove me a mile or so to an intersection of several dirt roads. The clearing, he told me, was what was left of the center of Plymouth -Five Corners: a settlement that bas been built around Vermont's gold minirush. Once there had been an inn and tavern here, and a village store. Now there was just natural growth.

My-guide drove off and I decided to try some last panfuls at Five Corners. Maybe, I mused, the old townspeople left a few stones unturned. Spoon, spoon, dip, swirl, dip, swirl, dip, awiri, poke, poke. At last I gave it up, put on my shoes and went for a walk along one of the narrow woodsy roads, looking down on the brook. Perhaps a quarter-mile from the clearing I saw, a man in a lightcolored hat. It was the man from Maine who had wished us luck. He was with a woman and two small, blond children and he was bent over the brook with a steel pan. I made my way down the bank to ask bow he was making out.

"I'm just testing the area, actually," he said. "If I come up with a few flakes t'll bring in my dredge and really go to work. You can only pan about three quarters of a yard in a day, but with a dredge you can do several gold out of the mountains in small quan- yards an bour, it's like baving 30 men work for you for free. So far I baven't found much in this spot. But I did find this a couple of days ago." He reached into his pocket and pulled out a small bottle with a swarm of yellowish flakes and pebbles swimming around in water. The largest looked like someone had lost a gold molar,

"Know where I got this stuff?" he asked, "Right over where you guys were working."

I thanked bim and headed back to my car, just a little numb. I tossed my pan into the back seat and drove out of the woods, and out of Vermont; -no richer than when I had started; out. Not in gold, anyway.

If You Go

gold panning in Vermont, you should start by writing to the Vermont State Chamber of Commerce (Montpelier, Vt. 05602) and requesting its free mimeographed sheet listing about a dozeo spots where gold has been panned in the state.

The only absolutely essential materials are a pan-available at many hardware stores, sporting goods stores and rock and mioeral sbops in gold territory—and a pair of tweezers. If you're luckier than I was and find something worth taking home, you should have a small, clean glass or plastic vial; an empty pill container will do fine. A spoon, trowel or other digging implement makes life easier for your fingers.

Watch for spots marked as private property. You may be in wild-looking territory, but it's wise not to trespess. The actual question of who owns gold in a stream that passes through private property doesn't have a clear answer. according to the State Attorney General's office, but it's safest to do your panning in public territories .- D.C.

The ocean playground of Atlantic Canada

Québec and Ontario: go for two languages, four exciting cities, lake-and-mountain scenery and much, much more.

French Quebec and English-speaking Ontario: two provinces, two languages, two distinct cultures in one fascinating holiday playground.

It includes the exciting Olympic city of Montréal, where the first language is French, the first love is gourmet food and first-time visitors are intrigued with miles of underground shopping galleries, delighted with the fabulous nightlife and thoroughly captivated by the infectious joie de vivre.

It includes Ottawa, Canada's Washington D.C. Instead of the Capitol, there's the Parliament Buildings. Instead of the White House, there's Government House. Instead of a teeming metropolis, there's a beautiful city with bicycle trails and quiet walks along the Rideau River and a vibrant interest in theatre and the arts.

It includes sophisticated Toronto, with its soaring new CN Tower (the tallest free-standing structure in the world) its fine museums and art galleries. And with a choice of theatre ranging from Broadway hits to Shakespeare at nearby Stratford and the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

And it includes Québec City, walled like the old fortress cities of Europe and rich in the history of both of Canada's founding races. It offers a fascinating blend of cobbled streets and sparkling new architecture, and a variety of restaurants to rival even Montréal's.

Beyond the great cities, there's a magnificent outdoors, clean, unspoiled, a land of rivers and mountains, wilderness parks and forests and more lakes than anyone ever bothered to count.

Tell us, and chances are we can make it happen. If you have a lot of time but not a lot of money, we have Budget Fares. They're about half the price of regular round trip economy fares. And all yoo have to do is buy your ticket 2 months in advance and spend 22 to 45 days vacationing in Europe. Which should be easy enough.

If you're not able to plan that far in advance but you still have lots of time, our regular 22/45-Day All-Year Excursion Fares which can be purchased up to the day you leave, can also save you money. As you can see by the chart.

If you only have 2 to 3 weeks, we have our 14/21-Day All-Year Excursion Fares. They're not listed above but they can save you up to 25% off regular round trip economy fares.

Besides low fares, we fly to more cities in Europe than any other U.S. airline. And we're the only U.S. airline that schedules only 747s across the North Atlantic.

On most of our 747s we have an upper-deck dining room for first class passengers. Make your reservation for table dining

In first class you can choose from 4 entrees.

In economy you can choose from 3 entrees. And no matter where you sit, you can choose between 2 movies. (Headsets are free in first class. There's a $2.50 charge in economy.)

If you'll want a car while you're in Europe, we can take care of it through Pan Am's World Rent-a-Car.

A hotel room? We have our own Inter Continental Hotels all over Europe.

A tour? We have plenty of those.

Guidebooks? We've produced hundreds. On what to pack, what to see, where to eat, where to drink, and where to shop for bargains.

And you'll be able to find a lot of bargains right now in London and Italy because the dollar buys more than ever before. Your travel agent can tell you more about our fares, tours, apply to departures during June, July and August, 1976. And are subject to government approvals. If you have to cancel or change your Budget Fare reservation before you start your trip (after thetrip has begun, no change in reservations is permitted) the most you can lose is 10% or $50, whichever is higher. In limited circumstances you'll get all your money back.

One more thing we need to tell you is our Budget Fares

There will be a $15 surcharge on travel to Europe on Friday and Saturday as well as on return fravel on Saturday and Sunday.

But remember, in the end, Pan Am Budget Fares buy you 100% of our regular economy in-flight service for about 50% of our economy price.

See your travel agent.

"When they bought the Gripsholm and turned it into the Navarino, they added much more than a touch of class...Cherie."

I have been on countless cruises but I have never seen a cruiseship so right for you as the elegant new Navarino. I mean, all the right people will be on board when the cruises begin on May 22nd. Actually, my pet, the Navarino is the fabulous and famous Gripsholm. And the new owners, the Karageorgis Lines, have created a superb cruiseship. The decor is just flawless and the service ... simply delightful. The Navarino is run by a hand-picked crew trained by the Karageorgis Lines.

The Navarino is now the most spacious cruiseship on the Mediterranean, and to be quite blunt, with all outside cabins, Cherie, it's the lap

The Karageorgis Cruises will leave on alternate Saturdays from Venice and alternate Tnesdays from Piracus for two weeks of sheer luxury. The four-country itinerary for ail Karageorgis Cruises includes Venice, Corfu, Piraeus, Delos, Mykonos, Istanbul, Patmos, Rhodes, Santorini, Crete, Piraeus, Nafplion, Katakolon (Olympia), Dubrovnik and Venice.

Now, dear hearts, you can enjoy the classical tour of Greece from the Navarino itself without any of the inconveniences of racing from hotel to hotel. This simply marvelous tour includes Delphi, Nafplion, Epidaurus and Katakoion (Olympia). It's just like going through history in a few days.

You can't get a better travel deal than Eurailpass. But you can't buy it in Europe at all. It was made especially for you to buy here, through your Travel Agent.

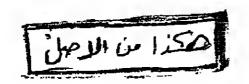

That's pretty convenient, considering what Eurailpass gets you: Two weeks of unlimited First Class rail travel in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland for only $145. If thirteen countries sounds like a lot for your money, think about having 100,000 miles of track before you. And think about our trains themselves. They're swift, clean, modern and on-time. And First Class on them is the creme de la creme. Incidentally, your Eurailpass buys you more than trains. You can use it on many European ferries, river and lake steamers and hydrofoils, too: Or to get discounts on motor coach excursions. Should you have a little more time and money to spend, there's a three-week Eurailpass for $180. A one-month pass for $220. A two-month pass, $300. Three months, $360. There's even a special Student-Railpass, if you're still in school full time and still younger than 26: Two months of unlimited Second Class rail travel for $195. With bargains getting harder and harder to come by these days, it's nice to know you can still get a good deal in Europe. Right here in the good old U.S.A.

The hotels of Ireland now offer TELEPLAN...the economical way to call from a hotel to the U.S.A.

In Ireland, they're doing something about the problem, found in many countries, of unreasonable surcharges on calls to the U.S. made from the traveler's hotel. Irish hotels have agreed to add no more than 50 pence (about $1.00) to your hotel bill for placing a collect or telephone credit card call. There's no need to pay the hotel for the call itself, for it will appear later on your regular home or office telephone bill. For instance, a threeminute station credit card call from your room, nights and Sundays, will cost 50p on your hotel bill. Then you'll be billed only $4.05 plus tax when you get home from the trip. The same call placed collect would be 50p plus $7.20 and tax. If you prefer to charge the call to your hotel room, the added hotel charges will be somewhat higher and will vary with the length of your call.

Collect and telephone credit card service-a way of calling now and paying later. And TELEPLAN-another adventure in green, from the Irish.

what about the Finns, and Finland? Almost virog rritory for U.S. tourists, Finland is a country of ating contrasts. It is one of the most northerly lies on the globe (the top third is above the Arcrele). Yet it's pleasantly warmed by the Gulf and in summer is warm as Spain. A third visits four dinavian capitals, plus Moscow, Kiev, Leningrad all offer a motorcoach tour through the egian fjords.

See Russia, too-without a visa!

Incidentally, having already traversed half-way around the world, you do yourself a disservice if you neglect to sign-on for the cruise to Leningrad. Not only are you closer to the U.S.S.R. than you may ever find yourself again, and not only is the cost so small as to be relatively insignificant, but you cruise from Helsinki on the Finnish ship, the BORE III, and enter the Soviet Union without the need for a visa. Finland is the only country in the Western world to have such an arrangement; you may consider yourself a shrewd traveler to take advantage of it.

Expertly arranged itineraries add pleasure

Finnair tour itineraries are fully planned in a way that individuals would find difficult to match. They immerse you in the atmosphere and excitement of the region—the centuries-old architecture, historical churches, ancient castles and museums, and the friendliest reception Americans are likely to get anywhere. Excursions within Finnair tours often include fahulous meals, which allow you to savor many regional specialties available nowhere else.

Today, many first-time visitors to Scandinavia find changing patterns. They see the remarkable achievements of nations of the 'middle way', their extraordinary sense of community, and the benefits of a simpler way of life. All are perhaps best exemplified by Finland, which is, compared with other Scandinavian nations, almost unknown to Americans-and just waiting to be discovered by more of us. So, by all means, go to Scandinavia this summer-and include

If you have a lot of time but not a lot of money, we have Budget Fares. They're about half the price of regular round trip economy fares. And all you have to do is buy your ticket 2 months in advance and spend 22 to 45 days vacationing in Europe. Which should be easy enough.

If you're not able to plan that far in advance but you still have lots of time, our regular 22/45-Day All-Year Excursion Fares which can be purchased up to the day you leave, can also save you money. As you can see by the chart.

If you only have 2 to 3 weeks, we have our 14/21-Day All-Year Excursion Fares. They're not listed above but they can save you up to 25% off regular round trip economy fares.

Besides low fares, we fly to more cities in Europe than any other U.S. airline. And we're the only U.S. airline that schedules only 747s across the North Atlantic.

On most of our 747s we have an upper-deck dining room for first class passengers. Make your reservation for table dining when you make your airline reservation.

In first class you can choose from 4 entrees. In economy you can choose from 3 entrees.

We've even re-economized it.

The Spain that inspired El Greco to paint and Cervantes to write still exists. And now, with the devaluation of the peseta, Spain is even more affordable than last year.

So come and be inspired. By fabled cities that have thrived since the time of the Greeks, the Romans and the Moors. By landscapes dotted with feudal castles and tileroofed villages. And by the hospitable Spanish people themselves, who are eager to share their colorful history and folklore with you.

And just as impressive as what you see is the way that you see it. You can tour the countryside on horseback, if you wish. Spend the night in a parador-a grand palace, monastery or castle turned hotel. Dine long and sumptuously on regional dishes fit for an Isabella.

For more about the colors and flavors of Spain, see your travel agent. Or mail us the coupon.

SPEND THE MORNING WITH TENNYSON'S GHOST.

Have a picnic at a castle. Stand where kings stood. Walk where saints walked. Spend two weeks in London falling in love. Or start your vacation in London and move on to some of Europe's most beautiful cities. Air-India announces its Spring/Summer/Fall Tours: 12 lovely vacations at extremely reasonable prices. Here are just two of them.

See all of England: England Fly-and-Drive, 2 weeks $489. England's full of stately homes and haunted castles, village inns, marvelous food, great beer, history, beauty and romance. See it at your own pace. Air-India takes you there (and back), puts you up for your first two nights in a good London hotel (with bath), gives you an Avis car with unlimited mileage, a special route planning map, guest house accommodations in Sheffield for 11 days and a list of enticing extras. All this for $489.

It isn't hard to fall in love with London. It's hard not to. Our London Discovery Tour gives you two weeks of pure pleasure for $504 per person. The city of Shakespeare, Henry VIII, the Rolling Stones and Buckingham Palace. Of great restaurants, wonderful shops, cozy pubs, glittering theatre. Irresistible. Especially when we put you up in a good hotel (with private bath) for 13 nights, give you breakfast every morning, show you the city and give you a rather astounding list of extras.

The fares for these tours are GIT economy roundtrip from New York per person based on two people sharing hotel and car. If 10-person group not attained, alternate date scheduled. Rates are higher on weekends and between June 1 and Aug. 31. All restrictions are covered in our brochure.

Speaking of our brochure, send for it. It's free. It explains all our tours in colorful detail. This may be the perfect year to go to Europe. Our brochure will help tell you why. Start making your plans by seeing your travel agent or sending the coupon we've thoughtfully appended.

EUROPE SPECTACULAR

Introducing the Swiss Travel Invention.

Now you can have the security of a tour package without losing the flexibility of independent travel.

ou want to do Europe all on your own. But you also don't want to have to worry . about finding a hotel each night, especially when you change plans in mid-vacation. And most important you want to stay within your budget. For all of these wants" Swissair has come up with The Swiss Travel Invention. An ingenious way for you to travel the way you've always wanted to travel.

Here's how it works. Before you lease home you purchase a book of vouchers either from a travel agent or Swissair. These vouchers are good for hotel rooms, meals and sightseeing. They can be used in over 500 Swiss hotels and restaurants. And in most cities and towns in Switzerland. And best of all, if you have any left over, you can turn them in when you come back.

THE SWISS TRAVEL INVENTION IS FOR HOTELS.

Since different people have different amounts of money they can spend on how simple it makes your trip. First of all, you can compute the cost before you go. We'll even give you a list of rental car rates, and Swiss Holiday Rail Passes which vacation, you can buy vouchers in different denom inations. For hotels there are 5 price ranges from 59 to $40. These double will get you around Switzerland for some unbelievably low prices. (Like $40 for 8 days unlimited travel on all major Swiss occupancy prices include a contirailroads.) Second, you can change your nental breakfast plans along the way. You only make hotel reservations in advance for the first night. and, except for the lowest priced room, a private bath. Then the concierge at your hotel must call ahead to reserve a room in the town you plan to be in the next day.

THE SWISS TRAVEL INVENTION IS FOR RESTAURANTS.

Now that we've taken care of your bed, we'll take care of your board. With three different priced vouchers ($9, $7 or $5) to cover your main meal of the day. These vouchers are good in participating restaurants all over Switzerland.

THE SWISS TRAVEL INVENTION IS FOR SIGHTSEFING.

Each sightseeing voucher costs $5. You can use them in various Swiss cities or towns to cover the cost of selected excur-

narter-flights-from TWA. That's right, TWA.

If your idea of charter flights has always been some fly-by-night operation, you're in for some good news.

TWA, who incidentally has been flying for some 50 years, is in the charter business.

AIT.

With the same excellent crews and solid dependability you've become used to on our regular flights.

Only this time you'll be getting them at prices much, much lower.

Where will these low prices take you? To places you've always wanted to go. Like Athens, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, San Francisco.

There are Trans World Charter Vacations to a wide choice of destinations both here and abroad. And TWA or your Travel Agent can fill you in.

Charters vs. Scheduled flights.

Once on board, you'll find the biggest difference is in price.

Because the same dependable crews that fly our scheduled flights fly our charter flights.

The same good cooks cook the food. (Delicious!) You'll enjoy beverages and perhaps take in a movie, for the usual standard charge.

And your plane will arrive and depart at the same convenient terminals as all TWA flights.

In most every city you're flying to, there'll be a TWA office to give you any assistance. TWA is the only U.S. scheduled airline with a major network of offices and airport facilities both here and abroad. And they don't disappear if there's any hitch in your plans.

How it works.

On Trans World Charters, TWA provides the plane and crew to a Charter Operator, who then takes care of all the details.

Even though TWA cannot make your reservations, because of government regulations, we'll be happy to give you charter information. So just call us. Or you can call your Travel Agent.

Reservations will be made through your Travel Agent or a Charter Operator. (And they're the ones who can tell you about pricing and cut-off dates for booking.)

After that, all there is to do is count your savings. And pack.

Trans World Charters. Now you don't have to be afraid to pay so little.
